President Roosevelt Signs the Gold Bill

Underwood & Underwood.

Roosevelt Calls Aids to Discuss Managed Currency.

Huge Stabilization Fund Is Speeded

New Treasury Rules in Price-Raising Plan Are Approved.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

With every evidence of entire satisfaction, President Roosevelt yesterday affixed his signature to the monetary bill, sweeping into the Treasury all the gold coin and bullion in the United States in preparation, almost immediately to devalue the dollar.

Fortified thus by a huge "profit" from the vast holdings of the Federal Reserve Banks, he cleared the way for establishment of the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund with which to control his drive toward a managed currency.

These moves, foreordained by overwhelming enactment of the gold bill by Congress, are expected to grow out of a conference of monetary advsiers at the White House this afternoon. They will launch the Nation on an experiment unprecedented in American history.

Regulations Approved.

Actual signing of the gold bill, which carries with it the monetary dynamite by which the President hopes to propel prices to higher levels, was followed shortly by approval of a batch of Treasury regulations governing gold.

Advancing step by step toward his objective, the President then prepared the stage for devaluation of the dollar—on a 50 to 60 per cent gold content basis—and allocation of the stabilization fund by calling the conference of his financial aids for 2 p. m. today.

In an atmosphere of cheery simplicity, the President put his bold signature on the bill without ceremony at the Executive offices. Behind him stood tall Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr. Nearby were Mrs. Morgenthau and the White House secretaries.

"Birthday Present."

Before him, ranged about his flower-decorated desk, were a score of White House correspondents, admitted to witness the signing and to express birthday good wishes. In a spirit of jovial good humor, the President greeted them, then fingered the document on the desk.

He nooded and laughed at suggestions the bill was a fine birthday present—all the gold in the world, as one exaggerated it. Then he lifted his pen and leaned forward.

"It's a fine present," he agreed, then, halfway through his signature, he paused. Musingly, he

Board Seeks Lower Rents and Better Housing Here

Tribunal for Tenants and Landlords to Be Asked.

Extension of U. S. Supervision Urged

Protection for Owners Against Foreclosure Part of Plan.

Extension of Government authority over relations between landlords and tenants in the District was urged in a report on rental and housing conditions submitted yesterday by the Public Utilities Commission to the Senate.

Landlord and tenant problems, the commission said, "should be recognized as matters vitally affecting thousands of citizens" who should have opportunity to present grievances to a tribunal authorized to settle them.

Specific recommendations of the commission included:

Creation of a housing board to supervise limited dividend corporations engaged in constructing housing.

Foreclosure Protection.

Legislation giving additional protection to property owners against foreclosure of mortgages and deeds of trust.

Broader powers for the Municipal Court to settle disputes between landlords and tenants.

More stringent laws against usury; legislation which would require apartment house owners to furnish adequate heat; greater safeguards for owners whose property has been sold for delinquent taxes.

Several of the commission's recommendations are dealt with in measures which have been introduced and are pending in the House and Senate.

Senator William H. King (Democrat), Utah, chairman of the Senate District Committee, said he would push these for passage before adjournment of the present session of Congress.

The commission's recommendations followed a survey made at the request of the Senate. The survey has been under the direction of James Ring, formerly assistant clerk of the Senate District Committee, and who was especially employed by the commission for the task.

Elimination of alley dwellings also was urged by the commission, which said that conditions among the poorer classes would be im-

Greece Lets Insull Stay 10 Days More

Doctor's Report Supports Plea of Illness.

Athens, Jan. 30 (AP).—On his plea that he is too ill to travel, the Greek government decided today that Samuel Insull may stay ten days longer before seeking another haven.

His residence permit was to have expired at midnight tomorrow, when, government officials had previously said, he would be expelled.

The former Chicago utilities operator, whose return the United States has sought twice in connection with the collapse of the Insull utilities, was granted the extension after the Greek premier and interior minister considered a doctor's report.

Sometimes It's Even Too Cold for Justice

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 30 (Spl.).—It was even too cold for justice in Magistrate Richard H. Sweeney's court here today.

Three Tyrone, Pa., youths, Robert and William Morrison and Harry Burke, were before the magistrate for train riding. Ordinarily train riders have been released and sent on their way, but the magistrate felt it was too cold to turn the trio free. So after learning the weather man forecast moderate temperatures after tomorrow he sentenced them to two days in jail. The trio expressed satisfaction.

Woman Killed as Blast Wrecks Virginia Home

Buenos Aires, Jan. 30 (AP).—Argentina's record-breaking heat wave reached a climax today with a temperature of 103 in the shade here and readings as high as 116 degrees in interior communities.

44 Byrd Explorers Fight Ice for Lives

Bay of Whales, Antarctica (Via Mackay Radio), Jan. 30 (AP).—Forty-four men, marooned at Pressure Camp and cut off from the flagship of Admiral Byrd's Antarctic expedition, battled today for their lives and the expedition's supplies against crumbling ice and howling winds.

The ice front of this bay, where Admiral Byrd is trying to land stores for the winter camp, appeared to be collapsing, with wide crevasses yawning in the entire barrier.

A crack opened this afternoon behind the halfway relay depot, a mile and a half from Pressure Camp, a temporary unloading base 4 miles from the water.

Fear was expressed by the leader that the outpost and its tons of stores, cached there for transport to the permanent base at Little America, might be lost.

In the broken and pitted Pressure ridge and crevasses west of Little America, the isolated men struggled with dog teams to save the provisions.

Since Wednesday, the edge of the ice has moved a mile nearer the flagship and the process of dissolution appeared to be accelerating, rather than slowing down.

In the last day, hundreds of cracks have opened up in the white flooring of the bay ice. The ship was hove to in the bay after cruising and drifting about, unable to find a mooring place, since early Saturday.

This morning, a section anchored to the ice foot of West Barrier, south of Chamberlin Harbor, appeared to be holding and the flagship was headed in.

A motor sailor was put over the side and a shore party conducted a brief reconnaissance. Two hundred yards from the edge, they crossed a minute crack, but when they returned 20 minutes later, they found there a gap 3 feet across.

Thoroughly alarmed, they skirted it and dashed back to the ship. In half an hour, a floe, a mile and a half long, moved into the flotilla drifting up the east side of the bay. The raised snow flooring was 12 feet above the water edge. This was noted particularly as an evi-

Hitler Denies Plot to War On Austria

Roaring Approval of Chief, Nazis Move to Tighten Federal Power.

Berlin, Jan. 30 (AP).—Adolf Hitler termed "absurd" any assertion that Germany plans to violate Austria and vigorously extolled today German efforts during the first year of Nazi rule to help the cause of world peace.

"The allegation of the Austrian government that any attack by the Reich is being undertaken or even planned against Austria must be rejected most sharply," the chancellor insisted, taking cognizance of the Austrian chancellor's warning that trouble "was brewing on the Nazi front on or about January 30."

With pride Hitler referred to a recently signed German-Polish nonaggression pact and the Reich's cordial relations with Italy.

On the debit side he acknowledged difficulties with Russia, Austria and France, but expressed the hope that differences with those countries could be adjusted satisfactorily.

Defies Obstacles to Equality.

No one will have the power, however, he told the wildly cheering members of the Reichstag, gathered to hear an account of his 12 months' stewardship as chancellor, to prevent Germany from getting equality eventually.

He welcomed the friendly offers of Great Britain to mediate in the Franco-German arms deadlock.

Much of his fervent address was devoted to a review of conditions leading to the Nazis' attainment of power, to a scathing denunciation of his political opponents, and to exuberant praise for domestic achievements in the first year.

A feature of the speech was his frank announcement that monarchism was beyond the pale of discussion.

Then, with a roar of enthusiasm, the brown-shirted assembly dispatched a law for "the reconstruction of the Reich," which was hailed

Flood Heirs Offer Woman $1,200,000

Settlement of Claim to Daughter's Share Near.

San Francisco, Jan. 30 (AP).—A tentative agreement has been reached whereby Mrs. Constance May Gavin will receive approximately $1,200,000 in settlement of her claim to a daughter's share of the James L. Flood fortune, Theodore J. Roche, attorney for the recognized Flood heirs, announced today.

Roche emphasized there were a number of obstacles yet to be overcome and that if Mrs. Gavin, wife of a Los Angeles bank clerk, eventually receives the settlement it will not be because the Flood heirs recognize her as a legitimate heir.

"The settlement merely will mean that the Flood heirs believe this course will avoid further litigation, expense, inconvenience and delay," Roche said.

Frank N. Doubleday, N.Y. Publisher, Dead

Miami, Jan. 30 (AP).—Frank Nelson Doubleday, 72, New York publisher, died here today.

Although Doubleday had been in ill health for many months, death, due to an internal hemorrhage, came unexpectedly. Mrs. Florence Doubleday, his wife, was at the bedside.

Illinois Rum Deadlock Ends.

Springfield, Ill., Jan. 30 (AP).—The State House of Representatives adopted the compromise report on the liquor control bill today, ending a two months' deadlock. The measure was sent to Gov. Henry Horner for signature.

AAA Illegal, Judge Rules; U.S. to Appeal

Injunction Issued and Act Declared "Full of Holes."

Judge Alex Alexander Akerman made the ruling orally in injunction proceedings brought by Florida citrus growers and shippers against Secretary of Agriculture Wallace and the State Citrus Control committee, which functions under the farm recovery act.

The judge dismissed the case insofar as it applied to Secretary Wallace, but granted a temporary injunction restraining the State control committee from applying the Florida Citrus Marketing agreement to the Hillsborough Packing Co. and Lake Fern Groves, Inc.

He said he would issue a written order later. Counsel for the Government and the State control committee indicated the case will be appealed.

Full of Holes

Judge Ackerman said the act "when tested by the Constitution is so full of holes you could drive eight yoke of oxen through it." He added that he made a practice of reading the Constitution once a week but could not find "one word in it" about the powers of the Secretary of Agriculture over the individual.

"Wisely or unwisely," he said, "the fromers of the Constitution left whatever regulation of agriculture there was to be in the hands of the States. I am not unmindful that conditions have changed. If the Constitution is ineffective or too archaic, in God's name let's change it, but let's do it by the method described or even by revolution but not by insidious encroachment."

AAA Officials Rush Plans for Appeal

The Department of Agriculture is arranging an immediate appeal from the ruling of Federal Judge Alexander Akerman in Tampa, holding the agricultural adjustment act unconstitutional, AAA officials said last night, according to the United Press.

AAA officials declined to discuss the decision in detail until they had official information, but said they would carry the case to higher courts with as little delay as possible. The ruling will not affect operations except in the Florida judicial district, they said.

Probe Bares Brown Secret Stock Trades

Farley Tells Senators Big Hat Only Gift on Texas Junket.

By Martha Dalrymple.

Former Postmaster General Walter F. Brown was a partner in a large and active stock trading account, listed on the brokers' books only as account B50, the Senate air mail committee learned yesterday. Brown's associate in the joint account was the late Joseph H. Bagley, vice president of the American Bank Note Co., and representative of various companies that sold supplies to the Government.

This was the outstanding revelation in a day crowded with testimony. Other tidbits of news gleaned from witnesses, among whom was Postmaster General Farley, included:

Brown's assistant in charge of postmaster appointments destroyed all records pertaining to these appointments in February, 1933, less than a month before he and Brown left office with the rest of the Republican Administration.

Nineteen official letters and telegrams were shown to have disappeared from Brown's office files.

The report of William F. MacCracken, who acted as chairman at the "spoils conference" in the Postoffice Department before contracts were awarded in connection with the new mail map in 1930, was introduced into the record.

Mellon Letter Missing.

Mr. Farley told the committee that two postoffice clerks, who have testified that Brown and his second assistant, W. Irving Glover, ordered their office records burned, were "not on the pay roll of the Democratic National Committee," but that they were paid $25 a month by the committee because they did extra work for him.

One of the letters missing from the Postoffice Department is one from Brown to Andrew W. Mellon, former Treasury head, assuring him that the department was giving earnest consideration to the award of a mail contract on the Pittsburgh-Washington route. This contract was later awarded to the Pittsburgh Aviation Industries Corporation, one of the Mellon interests.

Mr. Farley was the first witness of the day, formally turning over to the committee two folders, labeled "merchant marine" and "air mail," which Brown delivered to his successor two weeks ago with a charge that they had been placed among his personal papers by a "character assasin."

After Mr. Farley testified that he did not know what was in the newly found files, Senator Austin, of Vermont, leader of the Republican minority on the committee, undertook a lively cross-examination of the Democratic political chieftain concerning a certain air trip to Texas last October.

Elliott Roosevelt's Former Wife Hurt

Philadelphia, Jan. 30 (AP).—Mrs. Elizabeth Donner Roosevelt, former wife of Elliott Roosevelt, second son of the President, was injured last Sunday while horseback riding on Long Island, it was learned today.

Mrs. Roosevelt received a broken nose and bruises. She was reported today as "doing nicely." She was a guest at a house party, but members of the family declined to say where on Long Island the accident occurred.

Fireman Dies in Blaze.

Quebec, Jan. 30 (AP).—Hector Chevrette, Quebec fireman, lost his life today when the roof of the Manoir Montmorency Hotel fell in during a fire. Five other firemen were injured. Thirty guests fled in 15-below-zero weather to safety.

Soviet Balloonists Set Record Of 67,585 Feet; Fliers Missing

Moscow, Jan. 30 (AP).—A new world's altitude record was claimed today by Russian civil balloonists, but lack of reports as to their whereabouts, after their surprise flight, caused some alarm tonight in official circles

The craft reached a height of 20,600 meters (67,585 feet), the crew reported in a message received at 11.59 a. m. Moscow time (4.29 a. m., E. S. T.).

The last word recieved direct from the balloon, which made its secreat ascent as "a present to the seventeenth Communist party congress," said it was seeking a landing place near Coloma, 75 miles from Moscow, where the Red army's stratosphere balloon landed last September after reaching a height of 19,000 meters (62,304 feet).

Correspondents, who motored over snow-covered roads to Colomna with Soviet aviation officials, however, were unable to find any trace of the bag and returned to Moscow after it became apparent that it was impossible to locate the balloon in the darkness, even if it had landed nearby.

Because of the contraction of the gas after sundown it was considered certain that the balloon must have come to earth, but the lack of any information about it led to concern as to wheather it would be able to alight safely.

The craft was manned by Pavil Fedoseinko, Andrey Yasenko and Ilya Uysyskin.

They reported when they reached their limit that the outside temperature was between 33 and 49 degrees F below zero, and about 20 below inside.

The message "all is well" was followed by later information that visibility was so poor the crew could not determine their position. Airplanes were sent from Moscow to help the trio.

The start was made at 8:40 a. m., Moscow time (1:10 a. m. E. S. T.), before only a few military and civil aviation officials, in foggy and near zero weather.

$380,000,000 Voted for Huge Navy Program

By Robert C. Albright.

The House yesterday in six hours approved the largest peacetime Navy construction program since the World War, authorizing the President to spend more than $380,000,000 over a five-year period to build the Navy to treaty strength.

The bill passed by a voice vote, slightly altered under half a dozen amendments. Only three members took the floor in opposition. One of these, Representative Thomas L. Blanton (Democrat), Texas, was removed from the fray when Speaker Rainey offered him the chair.

While the House debated the sweeping authorization, the Senate Naval Affairs Committee ordered a favorable report on a companion bill, carrying a Navy Department amendment authorizing additional aircraft commensurate with a treaty Navy.

The measure passed by the House permits construction of 102 new ships, including 65 destroyers, 1 airplane carrier, 30 submarines and 6 cruisers. An Administration amendment authorized 1,184 new Navy planes to equip the new ships.

Expenditure Limit Refused.

All attempts to limit expenditures under the program to a fixed sum were beaten down by a heavy vote after Chairman Carl Vinson of the Naval Affairs Committee asked discretionary power for the President.

An amendment by Chairman W. A. Ayres, of the Navy Appropriations subcommittee, prohibiting suspension of work on vessels actually under construction, regardless of future international agreements, was overwhelmingly agreed to.

Another amendment, by Representative Charles W. Tobey (Republican), of New Hampshire, requiring the Navy to accept the lowest bid for private construction and prohibiting contractors from netting a profit more than 10 per cent of gross, was adopted after Representative Vinson accepted the change.

Over Vinson's opposition, however, the House, by a vote of 140 to 90, adopted an amendment by Representative Chester Thompson (Democrat), Illinois, allocating ship and armament contracts alternately between private and Navy yards and arsenals.

A substitute proposal by Vinson, specifying simply that ship construction be divided equally between private and Navy yards, was not accepted.

Army Increase Sought.

Representative William H. Hastings (Democrat), Oklahoma, asked that the cost of the program be definitely limited to $380,000,000. When his amendment was defeated, 146 to 51, he offered another limiting the cost to $475,000,000. This was beaten, 127 to 74.

While the House was approving the huge Navy program, Chairman John J. McSwain of the House Military Affairs Committee was preparing a bill to increase the Army's air force by 2,000 planes, raise Army commissioned personnel from 1,250 to 2,450, and increase the enlisted strength by 4,500.

Costing an estimated $118,000,000, of which $45,000 would go for new planes, the projected McSwain bill would be largely in line with the Army general staff's program. Hearings on the bill would begin at an early date.

Capital Leads Nation Feting Roosevelt, 52

In mingled stateliness and gayety, against a background bright with flowers and to the tuneful strains of half a dozen orchestras, more than 2,500 Washingtonians danced and celebrated at the "Happy Birthday Ball" at the Shoreham Hotel last night, setting the pace for some 6,000 balls and parties held throughout the country and wherever Americans gathered, in celebration of President Roosevelt's fifty-second birthday.

It was the greates' collective birthday party in modern times, joined in by millions from coast to coast and from the Mexican to Canadian borders, and throughout Alaska, honoring the President and contributing to the $2,000,000 endowment fund for the Warm Springs Foundation.

At the Shoreham, where the setting was a brilliant kaleidoscope of full-dress uniforms, elaborate gowns and the black and white of evening dress, the festivities lasted until 2 a. m., with continuous dancing, con-

Mercury Rise Due as West Gets Warmer

12 Above Predicted Early Today, With Break Soon to Follow.

Warmer weather is on the way, the weather man promised last night, although temperatures still were down in the low figures, with indications that the mercury might fall as low as 12 degrees early today before it started rising.

The cold wave was reported receding steadily eastward after two days of frigid temperatures accompanied at many points by storms.

The National death toll mounted to 26, according to the United Press.

At Meadows, Md., the body of Ernest Batson, 38, colored, was found in a woods where he had frozen to death.

Temperatures rose slightly throughout the Middle West, the Associated Press reported.

22 Below in Vermont.

The focal point of sub-zero weather shifted from Minnesota to Vermont, where at Northfield a temperature of 22 below, lowest in the United States, was recorded.

The cold wave, however, thrust its icy fingers as far south as central Florida, where freezing temperatures occurred, while the line of zero temperatures extended southward into Virginia.

A severe storm that imprisoned two express trains in mountainous snowdrifts swept over the Gaspe peninsula in Quebec.

Midwest Warmer.

But Wisconsin, Iowa, Minnesota, Illinois, Indiana and Ohio got warmer weather. Chicago's temperature rose steadily to 15 degrees above. Unsettled weather was forecast for most of the northeastern half of the North Central States, with some light snow.

Michigan's subzero wave persisted, although one above was the lowest in Detroit. Temperatures rose yesterday and definite moderation was predicted. Ohio was to have 20 degrees above.

New York lay still encrusted in the wave's grip. Tuesday's low of 6 degrees above zero was within one degree of the previous day's minimum. The city's poor were at 22 field kitchens ordered set up by Mayor LaGuardia. The mercury reached its top at 15 at noon, but dropped soon afterwards.

Pennsy to Give 25,000 Work, Starting Here

Washington-to-Wilmington Electrification First in Building Program.

Philadelphia, Jan. 30 (AP).—President W. W. Atterbury of the Pennsylvania Railroad said today the company will start next week its comprehensive electrification and equipment buying program, giving a year's work to nearly 25,000 men on the railroad and in industrial plants.

Gen. Atterbury took occasion to point out that heavy industry is not keeping up with other industries in the march back to prosperity.

"Simultaneously with the start of electrification work," he said, "construction will be gotten under way on 7,000 all-steel freight cars and later on 101 electric freight, passenger and switching locomotives—representing the largest single equipment program ever inaugurated by any railroad at one time."

"Heavy industry is lagging," Gen. Atterbury went on. "The consuming industries, such as food, clothing and products that wear out, are 10 to 15 per cent below normal, but heavy industry is about 65 per cent below.

"Bring this up to about 90 per cent of normal, stimulus will be given to other industries and we will be getting back to where we all will be happy again."

Gen. Atterbury, who will be 68 tomorrow, received visitors in his nineteenth floor office of the Pennsylvania Building to explain how the company is going to utilize the $77,000,000 it received from the Public Works Administration.

Gen. Atterbury said the railroad's business was about 21 per cent over that of a year ago.

He said the first step in the electrification work will be on the uncompleted New York-Washington project. It is completed from New York to Wilmington, Del., and 108 miles remain from Wilmington to Washington. The road hopes to have passenger and freight electrified service from New York to Washington completed by next year.

Of the 25,000 men to be put to work, about half will be furloughed railroad men. They will be mostly shop employes and men on road and maintenance work. Operating train men will find work only as railroad business improves, Gen. Atterbury said.

"Beginning next week, 1,200 railroad men will return to regular employment, chiefly at the company's Enola shops, near Harrisburg; at the Altoona works and the Pitcairn shops near Pittsburgh," he said. "It is anticipated that within a short time 6,000 men will be at work on various stages of the electrification work, all to be started simultaneously."

Woman Sheriff Holds Dillinger

Outlaw in Indiana Jail; Roads Barred Against Release Efforts.

Crown Point, Ind., Jan. 30 (U.P.).—John Dillinger, the small town Indiana boy whose father says he "went bad in the big cities," was brought to the county jail here tonight by 65 officers, who took him from an airplane in Chicago.

Dillinger was turned over by the officers into the custody of Mrs. Lillian Holley, woman sheriff, who previously has guarded gangsters, and who smiled knowingly when asked if she did not fear having such a notorious outlaw in her jail.

The gangster was booked immediately on a charge of murder and taken to a cell. He refused to talk to anyone.

A squad of special deputies was placed on regular duty around the jail because of reports that Dillinger's pals would attempt to free him again as they did once in Lima, Ohio.

Roads Are Blockaded To Foil Release Plans

Indianapolis, Jan. 30 (AP).—Lieut. Chester Butler, of the Indiana State Police, this afternoon ordered road blockades established at Manon and Medaryville, following reports that three automobiles bearing armed men were headed for Crown Point, where John Dillinger was placed in jail tonight.

Lieut. Butler was informed 14 men in three cars passed through Greencastle this afternoon, along State Road 43, which leads directly to the northern portion of the State.

vent the "junking" of Naval vessels already under construction in event of international agreements at future disarmament conferences.

"If an agreement is entered into to scrap ships, I want this Nation to begin at the bottom, as did other nations at the Washington conference, and not scrap that which is actually under construction, as we agreed to do, and did do, at the Washington conference," the Kansan explained.

The only real fight on the bill was waged by Representative Blanton, Fred Bierman (Democrat), Iowa, and Francis H. Shoemaker (Farmer-Labor), Minnesota.

The Texan challenged statements of Representative E. E. Cox and Chairman Vinson that the construction program has the approval of the Budget Director and is in harmony with the President's program.

Vinson Answers Challenge.

Chairman Vinson interrupted to read from Acting Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt's testimony in favor of the bill.

"Does the Acting Secretary speak for the President?" asked Blanton.

"On naval matters, yes," replied Vinson.

"I doubt it," said Blanton.

Before accepting the Speaker's gavel, Blanton said he would be willing "to swallow my ideas about bills like this and go along" as soon as the President states definitely he is for the bill.

"If he is for this thing, why hasn't he sent us a message on it?" he said.

Shoemaker Warns of War.

Representative Biermann declared the United States has spent more than any other nation on its Navy over a ten-year period, while Representative Shoemaker declared it "a crime against humanity to spend all this money while our children are lacking food and clothing."

Shoemaker declared the United States is "plunging into another holocaust of war."

Taking the floor in support of the measure, Chairman Vinson said "the safety and welfare of this country insistently demand the enactment of this bill."

He said the powers of the world must meet next year to "revise, continue or abandon" the London treaty, and if the United States attends without a definite declaration of Navy policy, its prestige will be nil. He said Japan and Great Britain will go to the conference with such a policy.

"Their delegations will go to the conference firm in the knowledge of those policies, and secure in the fact that their respective governments have kept up their naval strengths to the limit of their agreements," he said. "Shall our delegation go to that meeting with less?"

Britten Defends Bill.

Representative Fred Britten (Republican), Illinois, for years the foremost Republican "big navy" advocate, pointed out that the measure "merely authorizes the President to do this building if he desires to do so."

He said the principal opposition came from the Federal Council of Churches in America, which he declared was not representative of the group for which it spoke, and the National Council for the Prevention of War, which he charged was "owned by one man."

"We got the worst of it in London and we got the worst of it in Washington," Representative Britten declared, referring to the Washington and London disarmament conferences.

"My conviction is there will never be any agreement between European powers and the United States unless there is agreement in advance that the United States is to be gypped."

Prisoner Lynched By Florida Mob

Constable Beaten; Inquiry Ordered by Governor.

Tampa, Fla., Jan. 30 (AP).—A band of men early today lynched Robert Johnson, Negro, held for investigation for an alleged attack o na white woman.

Democrats View Mills' Speech Presidential Nomination Bid

G. O. P. Leader's Change on Tariff Stand Causes Varied Comment.

By Raymond Clapper.

While Republican leaders generally praised the Kansas Day keynote speech of Ogden L. Mills, Secretary of the Treasury in the Hoover Administration and a possible Republican Presidential candidate, there was some division yesterday over his suggestion that the traditional protective tariff should be modified.

Democratic leaders were active on Capitol Hill, seeking to promote discomfiture among Republicans by talking up Mr. Mills as a Presidential candidate and by twitting him with an alleged surrender to the tariff policy of President Roosevelt.

It appeared as if Mr. Mills had, with his tariff proposal, stirred up a deep-seated difference within his own party.

For instance, Representative Bertrand H. Snell, House Republican leader, agreed with Mr. Mills that isolation and intense nationalism would have to be abandoned and recent tariff policies modified to permit greater mutual exchange of goods among nations.

On the other hand, Senator Simeon D. Fess, Ohio, former chairman of the Republican National Committee, asserted the Republican party would never desert its protective principle.

Arkansan Hits Stand.

The spearhead of Democratic retort came from Senator Joseph T. Robinson, Democratic Senate leader, who opened up by declaring that the Kansas Day speech indicated the candidacy of Mr. Mills and the platform on which he expected to run.

Senator Robinson added ironically that when one discovered his own error it was manly to correct it.

"In proposing a modification of tariff policy in order to promote mutual exchange of commodities between this and foreign countries and to assure the growth of our export trade," Senator Robinson said, "Mr. Mills is standing in the shadow—and is almost invisible—of the great leader, whom he refuses to recognize but who long ago announced his belief in the necessity for reciprocal trade arrangements to restore the commerce which Mr. Mills helped to destroy through a tariff policy that he has grown ashamed of."

Not a Republican answered this Democratic speech on the floor. After hasty consultation, it was decided that since Senator Robinson was emphasizing the potential presidential candidacy of Mr. Mills any attempt by Republicans to answer would appear to be a tacit acceptance of the implied candidacy.

Republicans Laud Speech.

Off the Senate floor Republicans were more ready to discuss the Mills speech.

"I think it was admirable," said Senator David A. Reed, Pennsylvania. "It deserves, and I think it will get, the attention of all thinking Americans. His ideas on money policies are thoroughly sound."

Senator Borah, with his enigmatical smile, said, "I think Joe (Senator Robinson) is unduly excited about Mills running on that platform—or any other."

Senator L. J. Dickinson (Republican), Iowa, and 1932 national convention keynoter said: "It was a very able address and in a general way I felt it fairly presented the case against the Administration."

Senator Fess was the chief outspoken critic of the Mills tariff plank.

Tariff Will Be Plank.

"The Republican party," he said, "will not desert the protective principle. When Mr. Mills quoted William McKinley in supoprt of his view, he overlooked the fact that McKinley, speaking at Buffalo, had Canadian reciprocity in mind.

"The fundamental principle of protection, unweakened by anything like tariff trading with individual countries, will be the Republican position.

"We are not going to follow Roosevelt on tariff trading.

"In general, however, Mr. Mills made a remarkably effective speech."

House Minority Leader Snell, who, like Mr. Mills, is from New York and who is regarded also as a potential Republican Presidential candidate, supported the suggested new tariff policy.

"The same principles Mr. Mills enunciated are those we have been working for here in Congress," he said. "As far as I have studied it, it is almost entirely in keeping with the attitude of the minority during the entire session.

Must End Isolation.

"One thing especially I was impressed with was the fact he came to the conclusion many of us have that we can not entirely live as an isolated nation."

There was just a hint of reservation in the comment of Senator James J. Davis (Republican), Pennsylvania.

"I agree with Mr. Mills that the people of the United States have not had an opportunity to vote on the Roosevelt program."

Representative Hamilton Fish (Republican), New York, said: "The Republican Party should do everything within its power to prevent emergency legislation from becoming permanent."

Republicans in both Houses of Congress labor under inhibitions due to the great popularity of President Roosevelt. They were never more conscious of this than yesterday, the fifty-second birthday of Mr. Roosevelt, with the country deluging the White House with congratulatory messages, and many cities holding parties to raise funds for the Warm Springs Foundation.

Democrats Make Merry.

Democrats, however, were free to make merry and they took full advantage of their opportunity.

Speaker Rainey said:

"I'm glad to know that Mr. Mills has at last accepted the theory that economic isolation is not the kind of policy the United States should adopt. However, we did adopt that kind of a policy under the last three Republican administrations and Mr. Mills was largely responsible for it."

House Majority Leader Byrns also professed great delight at what he considered the belated "conversion" of Mr. Mills.

"It is encouraging that Mills, who has always been one of the Old Guard and one of those chiefly responsible for the isolation of our country so far as foreign markets are concerned, is now willing to admit the policies pursued by his party in the past were wrong."

Senator Robinson made the only studied and extended answer in his brief speech in the Senate.

"The address of Mr. Ogden Mills, former Secretary of the Treasury, to Kansas Republicans is notable in that it indicates his candidacy for the Presidential nomination on the Republican ticket and the platform upon which he expects to run," he said.

"Mr. Mills bewails what he calls 'the death of Liberty' under the Roosevelt Administration, denounces the President's monetary policy and to the astonishment of the political world repudiates the tariff policy of the Hoover Administration, of which he was the chief adviser, and advocates tariff reform.

Sees New Liberty.

"My reply to the assertion by Mr. Mills that Liberty has been slain during the present Administration is that insofar as the masses of our population are concerned, there is far more liberty now than was enjoyed generally during the time when he stood close to the seat of power.

While Mills and his associates, who lately were running the Government, permitted a complete loss of confidence, the Roosevelt Administration has accomplished such a reversal as in the general opinion means the gradual return of prosperity.

"That is," he continued, "indeed a strange doctrine on which Mr. Mills has impliedly announced his candidacy for the Republican Presidential nomination."

proved by closing of alley dwellings and the provision of better and more sanitary homes at moderate rentals.

"The commission believes," it was said in the report, "landlord and tenant problems should be recognized as matters affecting vitally thousands of citizens of the District and these citizens should have an opportunity to present their grievances for settlement to a duly authorized body.

"It is quite possible the plan to be suggested will recommend considerable revision of existing laws and practices affecting landlord and tenant relationship."

Reviewing the history of housing development in the Capital, the report attributed the three major epidemics in the history of the District to inadequate and improper housing.

The first of these was listed at the cholera outbreak in 1832, which was said to have had its beginning in shanties along the old Tiber Creek. The second was said to be the smallpox epidemic in 1871, which spread through overcrowding due to the influx of Negroes and others following the Civil War.

Overcrowded in 1918.

The third was the influenza epidemic in 1918. The commission pointed out that at that time the city was overcrowded and there was not sufficient housing for the many extra thousands of persons who had been brought to Washington incident to the World War.

Information gathered under Ring's direction by the housing census taker provided for with CWA funds showed that $25 was the minimum monthly rental for houses providing decent sanitary conditions for their occupants.

The housing census indicated, too, the report said, that Negroes moving into better neighborhoods usually were compelled to pay more rent than had been charged the whites who formerly occupied the houses.

No effort was made to show the average apartment rental because so many owners and managers of apartment houses offered varying concessions in various forms, it was said.

There is a scarcity of adequate housing at low rentals, it was said. The report said the lowest rental discovered in the course of the survey was $3.50 a month, which was charged for a three-room, frame house, with no sanitary or other conveniences, occupied by Negroes in the Deanwood section.

The highest monthly rental reported was $500 a month, charged for a fashionable 12-room house in the Spring Valley section.

Speculation is Censured.

Details of the rental figures, together with analysis of them, is to be given the Senate in a supplemental report the commission will submit within a week.

Criticism of the speculative real estate development was voiced by the commission in the course of a resume of the history of housing in the city.

Speculators, the commission said, were responsible for distorting the planned development of the city and had caused uneven and unwise development. On one occasion, it was said, property owners seeking to take speculative advantage of increased prices, almost caused transfer of the Capital to some other site.

added, "Yes, it is the nicest birthday present I ever had."

The arrival of Eugene Black, governor of the Federal Reserve Board, coincided with that of photographers, who snapped a reenactment of the signing with the board chief standing behind the President's chair. In the soft accents of a Southerner, Gov Black joked:

"The caption to this picture is, 'The Governor of the Federal Reserve Compelling the President of the United States to Sign the Gold Bill.'"

Talks With Advisers.

Immediately thereafter, the President assembled his monetary advisers in a meeting which lasted only a half hour. Present were Mr. Morgenthau, Mr Black, George L. Harrison, governor of the New York Federal Reserve Bank; Prof. James Harvey Rogers and George F. Warren, whose theories the President has followed consistently, and Herman Oliphant, Treasury adviser.

Leaving the White House with the most stupendous powers ever accorded a Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Morgenthau announced that Treasury regulations under the act had been approved and that another meeting of the same group had been arranged for today. He declined to say when, or at what figure, the dollar would be revalued.

Although what, if any, moves might be taken at this conference lacked official confirmation, it was generally expected that the President would follow it by issuing a proclamation lowering the gold content of the dollar to an expected 60 per cent.

Since the gold act gave title to the $3,500,000,000 gold stocks of the Federal Reserve to the Government, the Treasury now has about $4,011,000,000 in the metal at the old statutory price of $20.67 an ounce. Thus a revaluation on a 60 per cent basis would give the Treasury a "profit" of approximately $2,670,000,000.

From this sum will come the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund, in charge of Secretary Morgenthau, which will be used to maintain the foreign value of the dollar as nearly as possible to any point the Administration considers is of best advantage to American trade. It also can be used to buy Government bonds, and thus insure a stable market.

The gold act, which was signed by Vice President Garner yesterday morning, transfers all gold of the Federal Reserve to the Treasury in exchange for gold certificates; abolishes gold as currency; sets up the stabilization fund and gives the Secretary of the Treasury broad powers for dealing in foreign exchange.

It was attacked by monetary conservatives for providing a huge increase in bank reserves and hence provoking a perilous expansion of credit. It was defended by Administration spokesmen as the monetary corollary of the New Deal.

Dr. B. M. Swain, 74, Arlington Coroner, Dies

Funeral Services to Be Held at 2 P. M. Tomorrow.

Dr. B. M. Swain, 74, coroner of Arlington County for the last 15 years and a leader in the medical profession, died early yesterday at Alexandria Hospital.

He will be buried in Bethel Cemetery, Alexandria, following funeral services at 2 p. m. at his home in Ballston, Va. Services will be conducted by the Rev. Perry L. Mitchell, pastor of the Clarendon Baptist Church.

Dr. Swain was born in Alexandria, where he gained his early education in the public schools. At the age of 18 he went to Edenton, N. C., later becoming editor of a weekly there. After spending several years in North Carolina, he came to Washington, where he secured a position as proof reader in the Government Printing Office, also attending the Columbia Medical College, where he was graduated.

He came to Arlington County 17 years ago.

He is survived by his wife and one daughter, Miss Elinor Swain.

Gold Act's Regulations

Treasury Rules for Handling Metal Approved by President; Heavy Penalty Is Provided for Violations.

Shortly after affixing his signature to the gold reserve act of 1934, President Roosevelt yesterday approved the following provisional regulations of the Secretary of the Treasury under the act, providing substantially as follows:

1. Gold in any form may be acquired, transported, melted or treated, imported, exported or earmarked or held in custody for foreign or domestic account (except on behalf of the United States) only to the extent permitted by and subject to the condition prescribed in these regulations or licenses issued pursuant to them.

2. Violation of the regulations will subject the holder of gold to its forfeiture and to a penalty equal to twice the value of the gold.

3. Gold may be transported by carriers only for persons licensed to hold and transport it or permitted by the regulations to hold and transport it.

Foreign Deals Not Affected.

4. Gold situated outside the United States may be dealt in freely.

5. Similarly, gold situated in the possessions of the United States, but not including United States gold coin, may be dealt in freely by persons not domiciled in the United States.

6. Fabricated gold may be acquired, exported or imported without a license, but in the case of export an affidavit is required that the shipment is not being made for the purpose of disposing of fabricated gold primarily for the value of the gold content. Travelers leaving the United States may carry with them fabricated gold articles for personal use not exceeding 15 ounces, without filing an affidavit or obtaining an export license.

7. Metals containing not more than 5 troy ounces of fine gold per short ton are not subject to license.

8. Unmelted scrap gold in amounts of not more than 5 troy ounces of fine gold may be held or transported without a license.

9. Gold in its natural state as mined may be acquired, held and transported without a license.

Rules for Collectors.

10. Gold coins recognized as of special value to collectors are exempt from license regulations, but may be exported only under license issued by the Director of the Mint.

11. Persons acquiring gold for use in industry, profession or art in which they are regularly engaged may hold up to a three-months' supply, but not more than 25 ounces of fine gold without a special license.

12. The mints will issue special licenses for buying, holding, transporting, treating, importing and exporting gold for use in industries, professions, or arts to dealers and refiners and to persons requiring a stock of more than 25 ounces at a time. Licenses so issued shall be for no greater quantities than the estimated requirement of the licensee for a period of three months. Such licenses will not entitle the licensee to hold gold coin. License holders are required to keep exact records of acquisitions and diliveries of gold and make quarterly reports on them to the mints.

13. Federal Reserve banks are authorized to acquire from the United States mints through redemption of gold certificates such amounts of gold bullion "as in the judgment of the Secretary of the Treasury are necessary to settle international balances, or to maintain the equal purchasing power of every kind of currency of the United States." The Federal Reserve banks are also authorized to acquire gold abroad, or to acquire in the United States gold that is not beig held unlawfully. Gold so acquired may be held, transported, imported, exported, or earmarked, or held in custody for foreign or domestic account for the purposes of settling international balances or maintaining the equal purchasing power of every kind of currency in the United States. It is provided, however, that if the gold is not used for any of these purposes within six months of the date of its acquisition it must be delivered over to the Treasurer of the United States for credits in equal amounts of dollars, unless the Secretary of the Treasury shall have granted an extension.

Imports and Exports.

14. No person is permitted to acquire gold from a Federal Reserve bank, except to the extent that the license issued to him specifically provides.

15. Gold which is refind from gold-bearing ore imported into the United States may be exported under licenses to be issued by the Assay Office at New York, or Mint at San Francisco. The gold-bearing ore must be declared on its entry and careful records must be kept. This continues the regulations heretofore enforced under the executive order.

16. Gold may be imported for reexport if it remains in customs custody while it is within the customs limits of the United States. If it is to be transported within the United States a special license is required.

17. Licenses heretofore issued by the United States Mints and Assay Offices, and also by the Secretary of the Treasury, under previous orders are validated until March 15, 1934.

Just 'Opinion,' Shipper Says About Nitrates

Denies Any Information of Cargoes Headed for Norfolk.

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 30 (Spl.).—John T. Campbell, president of the National Stevedoring and Shipping Co., quoted yesterday as saying 45,000 tons of nitrates from Chile would be landed here during the next few months, today said he was just expressing an opinion.

He said he did not know at what ports eleven Scandinavian and British ships, ordered to Chile to load nitrates, would land their cargoes. He said publication of the original story caused him to receive a number of telegrams from New York and he wanted it understood he knew nothing of the movements of the foreign craft ordered suddenly to Chile for nitrates.

The first Chilean nitrates to arrive here came in today on the Grace Line steamer Santa Rita and will be followed February 2 by the Norwegian steamer Alaska.

In his original statement Mr. Campbell said it was possible some of the ships would proceed to Japan and Russia, but he modified that statement today.

"It would be impossible for me to know anything about the ships," he said. "I haven't any way of obtaining information about their movements."

Altered Social Order Outlined To Graduates

Elmer L. Kayser Asserts at Roosevelt That New Era Is Here.

Horatio Alger and George F. Babbitt were relegated to the past by Prof. Elmer L. Kayser, of George Washington University, in an address to 100 young business men and women of the future last night at Roosevelt High School commencement exercises.

Identifying Alger by name and Babbitt by inference, Dr. Kayser told the class that "the day of rugged individualism and unbridled competition is over and that the business of the future calls for social planning and social control."

Speaking of Horatio Alger, the George Washington professor of history told the graduates he could promise them neither fame nor fortune, but "only the satisfaction that comes from having done the best you could."

"I realize," he said, "that before me are many potential Presidents of the United States, but that i san old story and I am raising no false hopes."

Warns of "Service."

Taking up Babbitt, erstwhile monarch of service, Dr. Kayser declared that service is a much-overworked term, "often a transparent wrapping for business that needs a camouflage."

"Service," he said, "must be based on the fact that while business is economic, it is also social. It is only when these two ingredients are recognized that business becomes a profession. The age of the pioneer is here again. As individuals you must blaze your trail into a new social scheme."

Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, vice president of tht Board of Education, presided at the exercises. Miss Margaret Ryan, president of the Roosevelt High School Alumni Association, presented the diplomas, and Allan Davis, the principal, the awards. Harold Walton Savage, president of the class, gave the valedictory, and the Rev. Henry Tiller Coche, pastor of All Saints Episcopal Church, the invocation.

American University Offers Wide Variety Of Courses to Winners of Post Scholarship

Highly Trained Teachers, 80-Acre Campus, Are Major Factors.

College Replete With Clubs and All Standards Are High.

Four great centers of learning, stationed on campus heights that overlook the Nation's Capital, have offered, through The Washington Post Scholarship Competition, tuition scholarships for young men and women, to study the arts and sciences at their several vantage points . . . within observation range of a vast Governmental machinery that daily shapes world events.

Each of these institutions bears its insignia of individuality, to meet different demands of a complex society. Together they join hands with The Post to encourage the pursuit of higher learning in the light of today's momentous political developments.

This is the first of a series of four articles in which The Post will describe the four universities contributing these scholarships—American, The Catholic University of America, Georgetown and Howard Universities.

The 80-acre campus of American University and the sylvan surroundings of the institution are depicted in the aerial photo above. One of four scholarships offered by The Washington Post through public, parochial and private schools of the District and environs provides a course at this college.

Eighty acres, a campus with fine marble buildings, Gothic-spired chapel, dormitories and spacious athletic field, and, beyond, nature's bequests of amphitheater, wooded bridle and foot paths and picnic grounds.

This is American University, 6 miles out Massachusetts avenue from the Capitol, due northwest. Facing east, on one of the city's highest points, and with surrounding slopes dotted with suburban homes, the university's main halls provide a splendid panorma of the Nation's Capital.

Some 400 young men and women meet here each year from every part of the country, most of them in quest of bachelor degrees from the College of Liberal Arts. This college offers two four-year tuition scholarships, one for a boy and one for a girl, in The Washington Post Scholarship Competition.

Instructors highly trained at home and abroad, and imbued with a genuine spirit of learning and teaching, provide newcomers to the college with a broad basic foundation of academic studies, and to juniors and seniors more intensive cultivation along selected lines. Prescribed first-year subjects include the social and natural sciences, languages, the Bible and English.

On completing sophomore classes, students, with the counsel of faculty advisers, select major courses in art, biology, chemistry, classical languages, economics, education and psychology, English, French, German, history, mathematics, physics, political science, religion and philosophy, Spanish and speech.

The college maintains a program directed especially toward development of initiative and resourcefulness, as well as scholarship. Originality in thought and work, an understanding of current problems, adjustment to social conditions, and endowment of a practical Christian philosophy are important in the cultivation of American University students.

Vocational Guidance Given.

Vocational guidance is given students by a faculty committee, and this committee, in cooperation with a student group, presents each year a program of addresses and conferences on the requirements, opportunities and obligations of various professions.

Specialists in Government departments, as well as regular instructors, furnish practical first-hand information on the Government's relation to the various professions. Washington's great stores of educational advantages are freely used. Classes in biology hold sessions at the National Museum and the Zoological and other parks; those in physics at the Bureau of Standards, political science groups at the Capitol, economics students at the Smithsonian Institution and Commerce and Treasury Departments, art groups at the Corcoran, National and Freer Galleries, Spanish students at the Pan-American Union.

The Library of Congress, with its collection of 4,400,000 volumes—the world's third largest—as well as the Folger Shakesperian, the Public and Government departmental libraries, furnish a wealth of research material available to American University students.

Special classes in each of the college's departments answer varied ambitions of students. Economic subjects, for instance, are considered in their relation to law, social work, the Christian ministry, or political service, as well as to financial and business problems.

The department of Education and psychology provides courses valuable to the future social, religious or business worker, as well as to the teacher.

English Department Thorough.

The English department provides a thorough coverage of the great masterpieces of English literature as an excellent background to any career and especially valuable to author, teacher, journalist, minister, lawyer, secretary or the man or woman in public life.

Language courses are planned not only along conversational literary and artistic lines, but also with special reference to foreign commercial terms and tactics.

So with the departments of religion, philosophy, history, music, biology, mathematics, chemistry, art, speech, et cetera; instruction is adapted to both intensive and related courses.

Physical education, required of all freshmen, sophomores and juniors, includes for men such outdoor activities as track, football, tennis, baseball, soccer, volley ball and group games, and, indoors, apparatus work, calesthenics and competition events. Outdoors, girls play hockey, soccer and baseball; in the gymnasium they swim, play volley ball and basket ball, do folk-dancing and stunts and play various games.

Many student activities provide a full life at American University. Each annual calendar is filled with the social events of the fraternities —Alpha Theta Phi, Jesters and Phi Beta; the sororities — Alpha Chi, Epsilon Kappa, Phi Sigma Beta and Swagger; as well as the concerts and operettas of choral, glee and orchestral clubs, programs of five student associations, dramatics, debating and athletic organizations, the Poetry Club, several language, religious and honor societies, and clubs embracing alumni of Washington high schools.

"Wearin' of the Green."

Sophomores discourage enrollment of any prospective entrant seriously opposed to the wearing of bright green. No freshman, especially during the fall weeks, can venture within a half mile of the campus without a prominent grassy display, in hair ribbons and ankle socks for girls, neckties and dinks with yellow buttons for boys, and in armtags and nametags for both. Also, the newcomers must avoid all campus crosswalks and use only the north door of Hurst Hall.

American University students are proud of their cosmopolitan enrollment and claim that their campus spirit is a wholly unique fusion of Southern cordiality, New England culture and Western grandeur.

The Carnegie Endowment for International Peace sponsors at American the District of Columbia's only chapter of the International Relations Club, a National honorary political science fraternity of 107 chapters. Membership in this club, which never exceeds 25, is limited to those students of high scholastic standing who are especially interested in international affairs. The endowment has furnished the college library a liberal number of books and current publications.

Debating represents one of the major activities on the campus. Of all the debates participated in, the college has been victorious in more than 80 per cent. Teams are formed for both men and women. Membership on the Varsity Team and the Freshman Squad usually averages 15 per cent of the student body. Debate work qualifies many students here for membership in Delta Sigma Rho, the national intercollegiate forensic fraternity. American teams have defeated Oxford University of England, the University of Pennsylvania, Rutgers, Oberlin, Swarthmore, Dennison and Drew. This year's program includes a trip for the women's debate team through Ohio to Cleveland, and a trip for the men's team through the South to Atlanta.

Has Own Newspaper.

The American Eagle, the college newspaper, issued bimonthly under the direction of a student editor and faculty adviser, contains all the campus gossip and gives students practical journalism experience. The Aucola, a yearbook deriving its name from the initial letters of "American University, College of Liberal Arts," is published each year by a large staff of juniors and a few sophomore apprentices, and, with pictorial and written records of recent students and activities, always creates much student interest.

American University's establishment was the culmination, 25 years ago, of a desire to erect in the Nation's Capital an institution of higher learning devoted to the principles of Protestant Christianity. Under the original leadership of Bishop John Fletcher Hurst, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and the continued support of the latter church, the College of Liberal Arts, the Graduate School and the School of Political Science have advanced to the forefront of the Nation's educational institutions.

The College of Liberal Arts is recognized as a standard Class A college and is accredited by the Middle States Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. A member of the Association of American Colleges and of the American Council of Education, it cooperates fully with these organizations in fostering high ideals of scholarship.

Dr. Joseph M. M. Gray, noted lecturer, minister and author, recently assumed the chancellorship of the university.

American is notably free from sectarian bias in its teaching and administration. Various denominations are represented on the faculty and young people of many religious faiths are enrolled as students. Chapel preachers are drawn each week from churches and colleges of many denominations.

Dean Voices Spirit.

Dr. George B. Woods, dean of the college, greeted newcomers this year with the following message:

"On behalf of the faculty and the administrative officers, I am glad to assure you that you are to be admitted to the fellowship of friends. We all stand ready to help you at every turn.

"The college exists for its students and it aims to teach them the art of living. It purposes to cultivate all sides of human nature, and it covets for each one of its students a genuine social refinement, an appreciation of the beautiful, and an intelligent and reverent attitud toward religion. It hopes to inculcate in each student those qualities of body, of mind and of spirit that constitute the mark of an educated person.

"We accept you in good faith, and we invite you to labor with us in building and in strengthening a college community to which we shall every one be proud to belong."

The Washington Post Scholarship Competition is open to any bona fide undergraduate student in the fourth-year class of a public, private or parochial school within the following area: The District of Columbia; in Maryland, Anne Arundel, Calvert, Carroll, Charles, Frederick, Montgomery, Prince Georges, St. Marys and Washington Counties; in Virginia, Alexandria and Albemarle, Arlington, Clarke, Fairfax, Fauquier, Frederick, Loudoun, Prince William, Shenandoah and Rockingham Counties; in West Virginia, Berkeley and Jefferson Counties.

The competition calls for the writing of preliminary essays on stipulated Governmental subjects, the principal of each participating school to present to the competition director by April 9, 1934, the essay adjudged best within his school. Division winners, to be announced by April 15, will subsequently compete in university campus finals between May 1 and 15, for the tuition scholarships offered by cooperating universities. Principals should send enrollments or inquiries promptly to Louise Proctor Engle, director, The Washington Post Scholarship Competition, The Post, Washington, D. C.

Birthday Balls Draw Crowds In Maryland

Annapolis Sells 1,000 Tickets for Warm Springs Foundation.

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 30 (Spl.).—Several hundred Annapolis residents participated in the Nation-wide tribute to President Roosevelt on his birthday tonight at a party that included dancing and card playing.

Under the auspices of civic and fraternal organizations Carvel Hall furnished the setting for the party, held in the large ballroom. Scores of persons who did not participate in the dancing indulged in bridge. Bitter weather kept many from the party. Special radio equipment was set up to carry the President's address of thanks at 11:20 o'clock.

F. Marion Lazenby was general chairman of the committee that arranged the celebration. Many prizes were distributed. Reports indicate a ticket sale of over 1,000 at $1.50 per couple, for the benefit of the Warm Springs Foundation for Crippled Children.

700 at Hagerstown Party.

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 30 (Spl.). Seven hundred persons attended the Roosevelt birthday dance given tonight at the State Armory. Two orchestras furnished music and a floor show was presented. A number of dinners preceded the dance.

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 30 (Spl.). Two parties were held here tonight in honor of President Roosevelt's birthday, one was in the form of a public dance at the State Armory and the other a buffet luncheon at the Queen City Hotel, which lasted from 10 p. m. to midnight. At the luncheon, Mayor George Henderson paid tribute to the President and Russell Saville, chairman of the local committee, spoke on the Warm Springs Foundation. The events were heralded with a big parade through the business section.

Martinsville Donation Ready.

Martinsville, Va., Jan. 30 (Spl.). The President's birthday ball, held at the high school auditorium Friday night, yielded a contribution of $65 for the Warm Springs Foundation Endowment Fund. Mayor G. A. Brown, with the cooperation of the local charity league, had charge of arrangements.

Danville Society Turns Out.

Danville, Va., Jan. 30 (Spl.).—The President's ball at the city armory tonight was a gala social event and was largely attended. The only cost was for the orchestra. Frank Talbott, jr., committee chairman, said the proceeds would be forwarded to the Warm Springs Foundation immediately.

Cold Snap Hits Virginia Towns

Shenandoah Registers 2 Below as Outdoor Work Halts.

Harrisonburg, Va., Jan. 30 (Spl.). The cold wave continued in the Shenandoah Valley today with the temperature dropping 2 degrees below zero, the coldest temperature this winter. The maximum today was 16, and at sunset 12. Yesterday the sunset reading was 8 degrees. All outdoor work was suspended.

Roanoke, Va., Jan. 30 (Spl.).—The temperature here last night dropped to 4 degrees above causing much suffering and taxing relief agencies. As near as Catawba Sanatarium the reading was 2 degrees above.

2 Below in Winchester.

Winchester, Va., Jan. 30 (Spl.). The coldest temperature recorded in Winchester since 1920 was reported here this morning. In the South Braddock street residential district, the mercury reached 2 degrees below. In Western Frederick County, a semimountainous section, readings of 5 and 6 degrees below were reported.

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 30 (Spl.). The coldest weather in eight years here was recorded today when the thermometer dropped to 3 above zero. The Potomac is frozen. The coldest in the neighborhood was reported from Mountain Inn, two miles west of Frostburg, 8 below. A number of country schools in the tri-State territory were closed by the intense cold. Work on CWA projects was halted.

New Market, Va., Jan. 30 (Spl.). With an unprecedented temperature drop of more than 50 degrees in less than 12 hours, the present cold snap caused more suffering here last night than any similar weather in the past decade.

Mrs. Betty Priest, 91, Buried at Woodstock

Woodstock, Va., Jan. 30 (Spl.).—Funeral rites were conducted at Woodstock Methodist Church, South, for Mrs. Betty Barton Priest, 91, widow of Thomas Priest, who died Saturday at her home at Pugh's Run. Burial was in Massanutten Cemetery here.

Two sons, Frank Priest, at home, and William Priest, of Ohio, survive.

Man Gets Long Gash In Neck From Cleaver

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 30 (Spl.). Raymond B. Hopp, 32, is in the hospital here with a serious gash in his neck, which required 22 stitches, and Leroy Hamilton, 50, is being held in jail here charged with assault.

Hamilton told police he resented a remark by Hopp and, when the latter lunged at him, struck him with a meat cleaver.

Nation Hails Roosevelt, 52; Capital Keynotes 6,000 Fetes

stant floor shows and symphony concerts, and the big moment of the evening when Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, the guest of honor, cut the big tricolored birthday cake.

Other Celebrations Here.

Elsewhere throughout Washington, the President's birthday was observed with dancing and gay parties. There were celebrations at the Willard and Raleigh Hotels, the Elks Home, the Jewish Community Center and the Government Printing Office. There was a midnight show with special program at Loew's Fox Theater—with everyone contributing his services, and the proceeds, as in the countless balls and entertainments throughout the country, going to the Georgia Foundation, where the President regained his health a decade ago.

With gifts pouring in from all parts of the country, it seemed probable that a checkup of the receipts from the 6,000 balls and other birthday parties would show the $2,000,000 fund, desired by the President to help Warm Springs Foundation carry on its fight against infantile paralysis, far oversubscribed.

President Broadcasts Thanks.

The Nation took its keynote from the Shoreham "Happy Birthday Ball," where the six orchestras and the dozen celebrated entertainers interrupted the incessant blare of music and song only long enough—at 11:20 p. m.—to hear Mr. Roosevelt broadcast his thanks to the merrymakers over the largest network of the two National systems.

The main floors of the Shoreham were turned into a series of brightly decorated ballrooms, with half a dozen dance floors, the corridors and lounges crowded with beautifully gowned women and their escorts, many of the latter sporting the gold braid of service full dress.

In a corner of the lounge stood the birthday cake, a tricornered pyramid of gleaming icing, traced with the President's own seal and the simple greeting, "Best Wishes," in curly pistachio.

Mrs. Roosevelt Cuts Cake.

The ceremony of cutting the cake, performed graciously by Mrs. Roosevelt, was unfortunately obscured for most of the guests by the movie men and their flaring equipment, but a corner was sliced from the 3-foot pyramid and then the bands struck up.

Eddie Ducain's Orchestra played in the west ballroom from 9:30 to 2, the long-distance musical feat of the night, while those of Meyer Davis, Barnel and others divided the entertainment in the main ballroom, the dining room, the palm court and the lounge with Gaul's and the National Symphony Orchestra.

The master of ceremonies was the inimitable Will Rogers, functioning in the lounge to introduce such stars as Jack Pearl, Victor Moore, J. Harold Murray and other song birds and funny men.

Not counting extra contributions, the contribution of the celebrators at the Shoreham to the Warm Spring fund was $25,000. There were ten "honor" tables, at $1,000 each, and Cornelius Vanderbilt, jr., had 15 at the "bachelors' table," contributing $100 each.

Americans Abroad Dance.

Brilliant as it was, the "Happy Birthday" keynote affair at the Shoreham was only a drop in the sea of Nation-wide rejoicing, where the birthday balls ranged from affairs of splendor in big New York hotels to a little gathering of 15 in an Illinois hamlet, according to the Associated Press. The Negroes of the South matched the white folks' enthusiasm and held their own Roosevelt parties, and in far off Alaska men and women went by dog sled to scores of dances.

Added to the money pouring into the fund from the proceeds of the birthday parties were individual contributions, one of them a gift of $50,000.

American colonies in foreign cities also held dances to celebrate the occasion.

Forty different functions were held as New York City's share in the celebration.

For dinner, Mrs. James Roosevelt, the President's 79-year-old mother, was the honor guest of insurance men at the Hotel Astor. A military escort was waiting to take her over to the Waldorf Astoria, where the largest and most brilliant of the city's balls was given.

6,000 Celebrate at Waldorf.

Some 6,000 persons had reservations for the dance at the Waldorf, and the hotel had nine ballrooms on two other floors in readiness for the overflow from the grand ballroom. In the grand ballroom 24 special boxes were built on the dance floor itself, thus yielding that many more times $200 for the benefit of the Warm Springs foundation.

About 2,000 more had tickets for the Hotel Astor. Chinatown merchants had a party planned at an uptown restaurant and the Japanese colony at the Nippon Club. The "Fighting Irish" of the old Sixty-ninth Regiment arranged a gathering at the 165th Infantry Armory. The wine and liquor people issued invitations to a dinner in grateful celebration at the Hotel Roosevelt.

52 Debutantes on Cake.

At one of the Broadway celebrations, they had a birthday cake 16 feet high baked in the image of the President. Over on Park avenue, they planned to auction off the candles from another gigantic cake. The Waldorf had a cake 28 feet in diameter, and 52 debutantes dressed in white represented the candles.

Broadcasting apparatus was set up to spread the President's voice through all the ballrooms when he spoke from Washington in his special message of greeting.

Later George Cohan lifted his own voice in "What a Man" the song he wrote for the occasion and dedicated to the President.

Warm Springs Celebrates.

Among the debutantes and chairman of their committee was Miss Margaret Roosevelt, a cousin of the President.

Box holders at the Waldorf ranged from Gov. Herbert H. Lehman to the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union, from Mrs. James Roosevelt to the United Garment Workers Union.

The Foundation, established in 1928 by the President and associates, treats sufferers from after effects of infantile paralysis. It is the beneficiary of funds raised last night.

Dance of Wheel Chairs.

The President was the central figure of last year's Foundation party. He cut his own cake. Last night, Dr. Michael Hoke, chief surgeon of the Foundation, who occupies the little White House when the Roosevelts are not here, was at the Foundation party.

The birthday dinner attended by patients was held early in the evening. Physiotherapists, those experts who work toward their cure, gave a series of acts to entertain. A trained dog performed and there were presents of toy "teddy" bears.

"Showing Off," Girl, 9, Fires Bullet Into Brain

Clarksburg, W. Va., Jan. 30 (Spl.).—"Showing off" in play with two neighbor children, Grace Arnold, 9, placed a revolver against her temple and pulled the trigger today at her home at Pitcairn.

YOUNG AMERICA DISCOVERS THE BLACKSTONE

They've found their way to The Blackstone . . . those restless youngsters who have already climbed broad rungs on the ladder of success . . . and they adore it. Like their fathers before them they welcome the charm of an old and honored name; the advantages of a distinguished address; and the thrill of mingling with people who lead. Hitler Denies Nazis Plan War Against Austria as guaranteeing "the glory and greatness of Germany forever."

Roaring Approval of Chief, Reichstag Speeds Law for Closer Union.

The measure will abolish the national assembly of German states, make the federal government superior to the states, and subordinate state governors to the federal minister of the interior.

"To the German government's great regret," he said, "its relations with the present Austrian government are not satisfactory.

"The fault is not ours. The assertion that Germany plans to violate Austria is absurd and incapable of proof.

"But it is only natural that an idea which has deeply stirred and permeated the German nation would not halt at the frontier of a country which for centuries was an integral part of the German empire.

"If the present Austrian government thinks it necessary to suppress this movement forcibly it is its own affair, but it will have to bear the consequences."

Polish Amity Cited.

In reviewing further the relations with neighboring countries, the chancellor noted progress in Polish friendship and pledged Nazi efforts in promoting economic well-being of the two nations.

He warned Russia that Communist propaganda would be suppressed in Germany.

France, he said regretfully, "does not yet see" the wisdom of a German proposal for an agreement as a substitute for a plebiscite in which inhabitants of the Saar Basin territory next year will determine whether the area will become French or German.

No other territorial differences exist between France and Germany, Hitler went on. This, he added, promised well for future peace.

Germany does not want to threaten French security, he continued, and is "ready to do everything in her power to prove" the statement.

"But," he maintained, "Germany demands equality.

Says War Spells Chaos.

"Nobody in the world has the right to deny this to a great nation and nobody would have the power to prevent it permanently.

"A new war is wanted by nobody and would lead to international chaos.

"The question of the Saar Basin is the only territorial question still open between France and Germany.

"After its solution Germany is ready to accept the Locarno treaty (which binds the signatories to arbitrate disputes) in all its aspects."

He outlined two tasks:

"The coordination of all forces in an organizational form which at last will recover what was neglected in half a century through selfishness and incompetency;

"The advancement of the welfare of our people in all fields of human life and the advancement of culture based on high morality."

Lauds Nazi Ideals.

Misery prevalent before the Nazis' advent gave way to "humanity's searches for a new well-being," and Nazi-ism, he insisted, was a victorious bulwark against communism.

"The racial ideas underlying nazi-ism do not mean contempt for other peoples but rather a natural respect for others.

"We have laid the foundations for an order in which the brute force of the economically stronger gives place to the higher interests of the community with all engaged in creative work."

Attending the world disarmament conference and the League of Nations, he went on, was futile for Germany because nothing was done toward giving Germany security.

Raps Sterilization Foes.

The chancellor was bitterly sarcastic in discussing religious opposition to Germany's new law for sterilization of the unfit.

"Let them pay the heavy costs of taking care of the sick!" he cried.

The session was opened with typical Hitlerian solemnity.

When Reichminister Goering, who introduced Hitler, appeared, floodlights were turned on.

There was complete silence for five minutes, until Hitler sudenly entered.

44 Byrd Explorers Marooned on Floe

At Pressure Camp, tents of which are visible from the bridge of the ship, the men worked furiously.

The road to the base rises over deep furrows and makes travel extremely difficult. Crevasses 40 feet deep hold dangers for the unwary.

More than 100 tons of stores have been transferred from Pressure Camp, but much more remained.

Since Wednesday, when the bay ice first threatened to overtake the camp, only dogs have rested. The men have fought toppling sledges and slewing ice columns almost ceaselessly. They have eaten only during brief pauses.

By wireless, Admiral Byrd has kept in constant touch with his men. Operators have worked on hour-schedules at the flagship, Little America, and Pressure Camp.

Bear Making Fast Time.

The Bear of Oakland, expedition's supply ship, was just three and a half days from the Bay of Whales at noon today and apparently was making a record run from Dunedin to the Antarctic.

Capt. English reported from the Bear:

"We have met no pack but passed between scores of tabular bergs stretching eastward to westward as far as the eye could see.

"There are frequent snow flurries which closed down visibility, but due to alert maneuvering, no emergency arose.

"This afternoon, the wind hauled round to the westward and the snip is now steaming with all sails set except the flying jib, top gallant and the spanker topsail.

Victim Says Robber Even Took His Boots

Annapolis, Jan. 30 (Spl.).—Charged with hold-up and robbery, James Sills, of near Fort Meade, Anne Arundel County, was committed to jail today in default of $1,000 bond by Justice Thomas G. Basil, to await grand jury action.

Joseph Latvanas, complainant, said he was returning home on his motor truck when he was stopped by Sills, who struck him over the head. Latvanas was found later. He had been relieved of his boots, $65 and a quantity of groceries.

Teeth Play Him False, Freeze in Glass of Water

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 30 (Spl.).—Charles Himes, of Antietam, had to go on a liquid diet today because of the zero weather. And his fellow workers on the section gang of the Pennsylvania Railroad hardly recognized him when he reported for work today. Himes explained his sunken cheeks as follows:

Last night, as was his custom upon retiring, he placed his false teeth in a glass of water beside his bed. When he awoke this morning he found the water around them frozen hard. He didn't have time to thaw out the water and, fearing to damage the plates by placing the glass in hot water, had to go to work without his teeth.

Work Contract Lapses; Railway Retains Crews

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 30 (Spl.). The contract of the Dickson Construction & Repair Co. with the Western Maryland Railway Co., which has been in force 12 years, terminates tomorrow midnight and all employes of the Dickson firm will be transferred automatically to the Western Maryland pay rolls without the necessity of formal application on their part.

The transferred employes will receive railroad pass privileges. When the contract was first made a strike resulted, with many of the oldest employes quitting the company's service not to return.

Mrs. C. L. Bullard Dies At Bowling Green Home

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 30 (Spl.). Funeral services for Mrs. Helen Bullard, of Bowling Green, who died at her home Sunday, were held today.

Surviving are her husband, C. L. Bullard; three daughters, Mrs. John D. Hereford, Boling Green; Mrs. George Mason, Washington, and George Titus, of California, and several brothers and sisters in Washington.

Litigation Threat Perils CWA Work

Plan to Remove Sidewalk Meets Objection.

New Market, Va., Jan. 30 (Spl.). Following letting of bids by the State highway department for resurfacing and widening New Market's Main street, litigation seemed imminent today over the contemplated removal of a sidewalk before the S. G. Henkel property.

Town officials yesterday were notified that the owners have placed their case in the hands of an attorney.

Officials were hopeful that preliminary work could be started immediately, in view of the fact that funds have been granted by the CWA.

It is pointed out that litigation will postpone the work, and such a situation, it is said, will work a hardship upon the town in meeting its expenses unless an extension of time is granted by the CWA.

Virginia Boy Crushed To Death by Truck

Staunton, Va., Jan. 30 (AP).—Richard H. Simmons, 12-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. I. U. Simmons, of Fisherville, died en route to a hospital here after being crushed under a truck driven by John Croft, near his home.

The driver brought him here. Funeral services will be held tomorrow from Tinkling Springs Church.

Thomas Clem Powell Dies.

Lynchburg, Va., Jan. 30 (Spl.). Thomas Clem Powell, 76, died Sunday at his home at the State epileptic colony, where he had been employed 24 years. He was a native of Nelson County. Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Cora Powell; two sisters, Mrs. H. B. Allen, of Nelson County, and Mrs. Lilly Grant, of Lynchburg, and a son, Clem T. Powell, of Richmond.

Lines in your face come from jangled nerves

Jangled nerves can make you look older than you are. And that's bad news for any woman—or man either.

Look in the mirror today. See if you already have any of those telltale wrinkles that come from nervousness—and, if you have, do something about it.

Get enough sleep—fresh air—recreation—and make Camels your cigarette.

For, remember, you can smoke as many Camels as you want. Their costlier tobaccos never jangle your nerves.

COSTLIER TOBACCOS

Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS than any other popular brand of cigarettes!

TEST No. 15

Take a small rubber band—not more than two inches in length. Place one loop over your little finger . . . Then pull it across the back of your hand, well below your knuckles and catch the other loop on your thumb. When you are ready to perform the test, the band is in the position indicated in the drawing. Now, without touching your hand to your body, without help from the other hand, work off the rubber band. Average time is 10 seconds.

Probe Reveals Brown's Secret Stock Trading

Farley Tells Air Mail Study Two Missing Files Returned.

structions issued by the Postoffice Department, Mr. Farley and his flying companions departed with just the proper clothing, including six suits of underwear, and returned with Texas tenlgallon hats, according to the Postmaster General. The hats were the only "lavish gifts" which he could recall had been presente dthem during their expedition to dedicate new postoffices.

Contracts Under Study.

Mr. Farley said that his department was now investigating all ocean and mail contracts with a view to determine whether any should be canceled.

Although he di dnot put his official stamp of approval on the present air mail map, Mr. Farley said that perhaps the fact he had not canceled or revoked any contracts might indicate temporary approval.

Mr. Farley concluded his testimony with a heartfelt declaration that "never again" would he take such a junket, and that "if, and when he leaves the Postoffice Department" he will be very sure that h hasn't taken official documents along with him.

It was through J. J. Doran, postoffice inspector, that Senator Black (Democrat), Alabama, committee chairman, proved that 21 letters, either addressed to or written by Mr. Brown, which committee investigators have found in files of various aviation companies, could not be found any place in the postoffice department. Of these Senator Austin showed that two were purely personal.

Alfred W. Moran and Alfred C. Flather, Washington representatives, of the M-P Murphy Co., New York brokerage house, which handled the mysterious B50 trading account, and L. B. Peters, former secretary to Bagley, supplied the committee with evidence about Brown's marginal stock dealings.

The reason for the anonymity of the account, said Flather was that Bagley did not want all the brokerage employes to know of his transactions.

Peters testified that the account was a 50-50 one between Bagley and Brown, and that on Bagley's death Brown was residuary beneficiary under Bagley's will. At the time the will was probated, Brown is said to have reported the estate amounted to $50,000.

Ship Stock as Collateral.

Among the stocks put up for collateral when the account was opened in JaJnuary, 1929, were 3,000 shares of International Mercantile Marine preferred and 4,400 shares of American Bank Note.

In addition to the collateral, Mr. Moran testified that a total of $227,000 in cash was put in the account until it was closed in February, 1931.

A letter written by Flather to a New York partner of the brokerage firm was read into the record, in which Mr. Bagley was reported to be "very close to the Postmaster General." The letter, which was dated September, 1932, continued:

"He says Ohio is entirely safe for Hoover, but surprisingly says nothing of other States. Bagley is not letting any grass grow under his feet, but is lining up two or three friends on the other side."

Farley Testifies at Senate Air Mail Hearing

Underwood & Underwood.

Postmaster General Farley presented "missing" files returned recently by his predecessor, Walter F. Brown, to the Senate Air Mail Investigating Committee yesterday, and then testified, promising that "when and if" he leaves office all official papers will be in their proper places. Upper—Farley and Senator Black, committee chairman, at the hearing. Lower—Senator Black and Carl L. Ristine, special assistant attorney general, look over Postoffice Department file cabinets and correspondence taken from them.

McKown Gains Bench in Fight

West Virginia Seat Goes to Democrat Despite Election Tie.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Jan. 30. After 14 months of legal contests, including three appeals to State Supreme Court, J. C. McKown, Democrat, was seated as the third member of Berkeley County Court here today.

He was appointed by Gov. H. G. Kump, acting under legislative authority, to fill a vacancy caused when the Supreme Court finally decided that McKowr and William M. Johnson, Republica n, had divided evenly the approxi ately 14,000 votes cast in the 1932 election and thereby voided the election. The other two members of the court, W. R. Keller, Republican, and J. C. Ellis, Democrat, deadlocked on filling the vacancy and legislative and executive action was finally used to break the tie.

The court subsequently organized by naming Judge Ellis, president. Judge Kellar, president last year, declined to vote.

McKown is a former sheriff of this county.

Farmers Organize Pool to Sell Grain

Frank Kaetzel Elected by Rohrersville Group.

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 30 (Spl.). Frank Kaetzel, of Gapland, was elected chairman of the new Eastern Co-operative Association, organized at a meeting of 50 farmers of the Rohrersville section to market grain and purchase supplies ot the members.

Directors are Roy Reeder, Keedysville; Charles Beeler, Gapland; Charles Keedy, Keedysville; George Rohrer and Cecil Haines, Rohrersville; Edward Dayhoff, Yarrowsburg, secretary.

County Farm Agent Milton D. Moore and W. J. DeCarse, experienced in co-operative marketing with California raisin growers, spoke.

No Waist (e)

A Cent an Inch Price of Admission.

Charles Town, W. Va., Jan. 30 (Spl.).—Admission prices on the customer's waist measurement prevailed at a "waist social" held tonight by the Ladies Aid Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, at the parsonage.

Each guest was asked to donate a penny for every inch of his or her waist measurement. The "gate" receipts were not divulged.

Motorist Seized In Hit-Run Killing

Berkeley Springs, W. Va., Jan 30 (Spl.).—Morris Cline, 21, of Suluvia, Fulton County, Pa., was held today here, and the sheriff's office said he had confessed being the driver of the automobile which struck Edward Kelley, 83, here Saturday evening. Kelley died today in a Martinsburg hospital.

Officers said Cline explained his failure to stop by saying he was afraid. An eyewitness reported the license number.

Kelley, a stone mason and native of this county, was walking toward his home at Sir John's Run, this county, when struck.

West Virginia Roadside Death Puzzles Police

Discount Hit-Run Theory to Seek Clews to Foul Play.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Jan. 30 (Spl.).—A theory of foul play was being followed by police today in the death of Howard Smith, 29, of Martinsburg. Smith died last night at a hospital here from a skull fracture.

An early belief that he had been a victim of a hit-and-run motorist because he was found unconscious near the State highway 7 miles south of here late Sunday night, was discounted because his body bore no bruises other than the skull fracture. State and local police, however admitted they had no clews.

Smith had been visiting friends near where he was found unconscious by a passerby. He died without regaining consciousness.

He was a machinist here, married, and well known. No inquest has been called.

Blown From Auto, Man Dies in Fall

Gale Drags West Virginian From Car, Police Say.

Romney, W. Va., Jan. 30 (Spl.). Wardney See, 42, operator of a roadhouse near Augusta, this county, died in a Cumberland, Md., hospital early today of injuries received when he was dragged by a high wind from a friend's automobile Monday while attempting to close the car door.

According to the story told officers, See was riding in the rear seat of the automobile of Rumsey Martin, with Martin driving. Martin asked See to close a door that had not been tightly shut and cautioned See against the danger of being drawn out by the wind. See braced himself, but not sufficiently to prevent being thrown out.

James A. Glazier, 61, Of Lakemont Buried

Petersburg, Va., Jan. 30 (Spl.). The funeral of James Andrew Glazier, 61, who died Sunday at his home at Lakemont was held today with burial in Blandford Cemetery. The Rev. Clyde N. Parker officiated, assisted by the Rev. Evan Balderson, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church.

Mr. Glazier, a native of Petersburg, is survived by his widow, Mrs. Ida Glazier; three daughters, Mrs. O. B. Fulcher and Misses Frances and Nellie Glazier, and one son, James Rennie Glazier, all of Prince Georges County; and two sisters, Mrs. Alice Mason and Miss Sylvania Glazier, of Petersburg.

New Company Will Give Fair At Winchester

Sponsors, as Yet Unnamed, Confirm Request for October Dates.

Winchester, Va., Jan 30 (Spl.). It was stated on reliable authority here today that although the Winchester Fair went into receivership two years ago and the fair properties sold, that a fair would be held here October 9 to 12.

When the Virginia Association of Fairs last week fixed October 9 to 12 as the dates for the Winchester Fair, persons interested in former fairs here declared that "they knew nothing of any 1934 fair."

Winchester business interests believed the Virginia Association of Fairs had named the dates because the association was not posted on the situation here.

A citizen, reported to be high in the councils of a group contemplating a 1934 fair here, clarified the situation by stating that the association had set the Winchester fair dates at the request of this group. The informant declined to say who was sponsoring the exhibition, saying only that the project had the backing of a group of "prominent Winchester citizens."

Farm and garden crops, especially apples, are to be exhibited. There has been a report, unconfirmed to date, that horse racing will in all probability be instituted if the Virginia Legislature now in session, legalizes a bill providing for parimutuel betting in this State.

The informant declined to say whether the old Winchester Fair grounds would be used.

The old Winchester Fair was thrown into receivership and subsequently sold after a decline in patronage over a period of years. The Farmers and Merchants National Bank and Trust Co., Winchester, bought the 22-acre site of the fair grounds.

Missing Two Weeks

WILLIAM T. DOOSING.

Search Widens For Virginian

Banker, Missing 2 Weeks, Sought From Capital to Florida.

Shawsville, Va., Jan. 30 (Spl.).—Missing from his home since January 15, when he started to Washington to visit relatives, William Thomas Doosing, 59, president of the Bank of Shawsville and former member of the Virginia Legislature, today was the object of a search extending from the National Capital to Florida.

The banker is believed by some of his family to be the victim of amnesia, but his wife, in an overwrought condition at her home here, fears he may be held by kidnapers. Friends, however, point to the lack of word from him in more than two weeks in discounting this theory.

Doosing left Shawsville for Roanoke January 15 on business, planning to go on to Washington to rest at the home of a sister, Miss Tillie Doosing, 4927 Kansas avenue northwest. He had been in poor health for a long time, the latter said. Late that day, Mrs. Doosing received a telephone call from her husband in Roanoke, inquiring as to the health of a daughter, Lucille. Doosing informed his wife then he intended to go to Washington. A railroad ticket agent recalls selling him a ticket, and the records show one unused ticket to Washington.

Reported Seen on Street.

Two days later Doosing was reported seen on the streets of Roanoke. Then he vanished.

Doosing's sister in Washington said he may have wandered to Florida, where he owns a small orchard near Orlando. Authorities there have taken up the search.

The banker is described as appearing several years older than his age, 59; six feet, two inches tall, weighing 170 pounds, with blue-gray eyes and fair complexion. He wore a dark gray suit, dark gray overcoat, black necktie, high black shoes and soft gray hat. He is slightly stooped.

Daughter of Line Head Sponsors Virginia Ship

Newport News, Va., Jan. 30 (AP). Miss Carolyn Bull, of New York, was announced today as the sponsor for the new Bull Line freighter, Angelina, to be launched here February 16.

Miss Bull is the daughter of Ernest Bull, president of the steamship company for which the Newport News Dry Dock and Shipbuilding Co. is constructing two freighters, the second, the Manuela, will be launched the middle of March.

DIED.

Allegany Town Street Project Of CWA Begun

Midland Program to Last 4 Months; Pay Roll in Garrett, $10,247.

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 30 (Spl.). CWA work has been started on the streets at Midland, with Joseph Martin in charge. The project includes the repaving of Union, Broad and Omara avenues and the streets leading from Main to Union. The work is expected to last four months.

The CWA pay roll for Garrett County the week of January 12-18 totaled $10,247.37. A report shows 20,966 hours were worked by 812 men. Under the new schedule the amount will be reduced about half. The number of men employed will not be cut.

Men to conduct the geodetic survey in Garrett County under the CWA, were selected at a meeting of the board following a conference with Ralph L. Rizer, of Cumberland, civil engineer in charge of Allegany, Garrett and Washington Counties, as follows:

F. R. Corliss, chief of party; W. E. Giessman, Earl B. Thayer, instrument men; Thurl W. Tower, recorder; L. R. Mason, Robert M. Maroney, Russell Friend, Alonzo Kitzmiller and Daniel N. Miller.

Weather Halts CWA Work.

Baltimore, Jan. 30 (AP).—Ten thousand CWA workers in Baltimore today were out of employment as the weather continued to hover near the zero mark.

Half the men being employed on CWA projects in the city were sent home yesterday when the temperature became too cold to work.

Classes at Hagerstown.

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 30 (Spl.).—Leslie C. Young has been appointed director of a new CWA project here, which has to do with educational classes and physical training for adults. Games, setting-up exercises and general physical education will be taught. The Public School Athletic League of Maryland and the county board of education are cooperating.

Relief Rolls Grow.

Waynesboro, Pa., Jan. 30 (Spl.). Families are returning to relief rolls in Franklin County at the rate of 100 a week as CWA projects are being terminated, and 684 families are now receiving food relief.

CWA pay rolls in the county last week totaled $21,594.22, distributed among 2,537 men.

Airport Project Threatened.

Elkins, W. Va., Jan. 30 (Spl.).—CWA work on the municipal airport at Harper's flying field may be halted temporarily while local officials attempt to obtain materials. All purchases of materials were stopped by the order of the Administration, and requisitions for tile and other supplies have not been filed.

Paul A. Keener, district road engineer, in active supervision of the airport project, said that men were preparing the field for the installation of tile drainage, but that this would be halted unless the tile was supplied by the CWA.

Materials sought for the airport project will cost more than $4,000 and will leave about $1,000 for incidental expenses, such as rental of machinery, gasoline and oil.

About 40 men reported for work on the project.

1,190 Given Work.

Frederick, Md., Jan. 30 (Spl.).—One thousand one hundred and ninety person have been given employment through the Federal Employment Office here since September, it was announced today by Charles N. Staley.

In public work activities 307 men have been given employment; 758 men and four women have received work through Civil Works projects, and 53 men and 67 women have been given private employment. The majority of the latter have proved permanent jobs and include work in factories, stores, Offices and homes. The number enrolled for work was 3,416.

Louis H. Shaner, 75, Is Dead in Amherst

Lynchburg, Va., Jan. 30 (Spl.).—Louis H. Shaner, 75, Madison Heights, who lived all his life in this section, died yesterday.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Rosa Johnson; two stepchildren, Frank Flower, of Richmond, and Mrs. Rosa Johnson, of Madison Heights; three brothers, J. L. Shaner, of Madison Heights; W. H. Shaner, of Huddleston, Bedford County, and Jacob Shaner, of Roanoke.

Boy Pranks

Police to Nab Danville Lads Who Set Fires.

Danville, Va., Jan. 30 (Spl.). Chief of Police James H. Martin has instructed police officers to arrest boys who set fire to fields of grass and then call out the fire department.

This notice was served after the fire department answered four such calls, one of the fires menacing an oil plant for several minutes.

Four Indicted At Winchester

Trials Set on Auto Theft, Forgery and Other Accusations.

Winchester, Va., Jan. 30 (Spl.). Four persons were indicted by the special grand jury in Corporation Court here which completed its deliberations late yesterday.

Wilson L. Evans, alias William Evans, colored, was charged with the theft of an automobile belonging to Preston Nalls, Rectortown, Va., July 27.

Ray R. Fletcher, arrested in Washington last week after a chase by officers through Virginia, West Virginia and Maryland, was charged with the theft of automobiles belonging to Mrs. Reba Robinson and N. H. Carpenter, jr., here.

Members of the grand jury were G. Gibson Baker, foreman; Herman H. Hable, Grover Clevenger, A. H. Miller, jr., and Allen B. Gray.

Those indicted will come to trial before the Corporation Court concludes its present term Saturday.

Killing Case Dropped.

Martinsville, Va., Jan. 30 (Spl.). A charge of manslaughter filed against Charles Hairston, colored, in connection with the slaying of Ernest Brown, colored, in a scuffle with Hairston following a dice game, was dismissed at the request of Commonwealth Attorney W. R. Broaddus, jr., following a hearing at which two State witnesses testified that Hairston struck Brown with a rock defending himself when Brown attacked Hairston with a knife. Brown died next day.

Hit-Run Auto Victim Buried

Lester E. Tolley Arrested as Driver Who Struck Kilmer Wilson.

Staunton, Va., Jan. 30 (Spl.).—Funeral services were held today near Stuart, for Kilmer Wilson, 23, a furniture factory employe, killed by an automobile in West View, Sunday night.

Lester E. Tolley, 25, of the county, is held on a charge of being the hit-and-run driver. Police quote him as saying he failed to stop because of his excitment.

Tolley did not return home after the accident, but spent the night at a house elsewhere in the county. His blood-spattered machine was found at another house in the same neighborhood.

Wilson was walking along the highway with his brother, Richard Wilson, who was not injured. He resided with his mother in the West View community. The Wilsons formerly lived near Stuart.

Within the past few years two other persons have been struck by motor cars and killed near the spot where Wilson met his death.

Burial for Auto Victim.

Waynesboro, Pa., Jan. 30 (Spl.). Funeral services will be held here tomorrow for John K. Stover, 37, fatally injured January 6 by the automobile of Dr. Walter H. Wishard, of Zullinger. A sister, Mrs. David Johnson, of Prince William County, Va., is a survivor.

Farm Debt Body Organized.

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 30 (Spl.). Officers of the Spotsylvania County Farm Debt Adjustment Committee have ben chosen as follows: Chairman, V. M. Graves; vice chairman, W. R. Dillard; secretary, R. O. Gordon. J. W. Massey, T. T. Dickinson, C. R. Coleman, W. K. Goolrick, Joseph Hawkins and Clarence A. Jones complete the committee.

CWA Workers in Page County Ride to Jobs in Own Autos

Luray, Va., Jan. 30 (Spl.).—While political favoritism charges in administration of the CWA program in Page County are lacking, there are covert accusations that recipients of Red Cross relief are sharing in the distribution of funds released by CWA projects. This, according to Harry L. Hopkins, CWA administrator, is contrary to the intent and purpose for which the work was launched.

In this county there are many members of families who have drawn relief from the Red Cross and are at present receiving help from appropriations set aside by the board of supervisors, who are receiving 45 cents an hour on CWA projects.

CWA workers in Page County are traveling to and from jobs in automobiles, while others are begging for the 45-cent-an-hour pay and are willing to walk 4 and 5 miles to get work.

Danville, Va., Jan. 30 (Spl.). Sign painters are benefiting from the CWA. Howard Hylton, local administrator, has ordered large signs giving a description and official number of each project erected at the scene of each undertaking to distinguish it from a private enterprise.

Woman Given Arson Term

Pleads Guilty of Attempt to Burn Employer's Home.

Abingdon, Va., Jan. 30 (Spl.). After pleading guilty to a charge of arson in connection with an attempt to burn the home of W. N. Neff here several weeks ago, Catherine Nowlin, colored, today was under sentence of 7½ years in the penitentiary. An additional charge of housebreaking was nolle prossed yesterday in the Washington County court.

Mr. Neff is a member of the Virginia General Assembly. The woman was employed as a cook.

Today the court is hearing the case of Charles Burnett, indicted on a charge of manslaughter in connection with the death of Bernard "Pat" Leonard, of near Bristol, in December. Leonard was injured fatally when struck by a motorcycle allegedly driven by Burnett.

Howard Campbell, of Damascus, charged with manslaughter in the fatal injury of William Heath by an automobile near Glade Spring, also awaits trial.

Other indictments returned by the grand last week upon which action will be taken are:

R. W. Helbert, charged with shooting his brother-in-law, William Price, in an altercation at the Helbert store at Holston.

U.S. Game Preserve Planned in Virginia

50,000 Acres Sought, Says Commission Head.

Richmond, Va., Jan. 30 (AP).—Carl H. Nolting, chairman of the Virginia Commission on Game and Inland Fisheries, disclosed today that the President's committee on wild life preservation is considering the purchase of 50,000 acres of land in Virginia.

Detailed information of suitable tracts in the Old Dominion is being assembled by Mr. Nolting for submission to Thomas H. Beck, chairman of the President's commission. The land sought will be principally sub-marginal in nature and unsuited for agricultural cultivation. Property owners will be permitted to retain timber rights.

Tracts of not less than 10,000 acres, suitable for the preservation of turkeys, quail, grouse and deer are sought by the committee which particularly desires a tract near Washington which could be viewed by President Roosevelt on short jaunts from the Capital.

Delegates Approve Gas Attack Penalty

Mystery Raids in Boteourt Speed Action.

Richmond, Va., Jan. 30 (AP).—The bill to punish with long prison sentences anyone convicted of releasing noxious or nauseating gases in private homes or public places, brought forth by the depredations of a mysterious night prowler in Botetourt County, was passed today by the House of Delegates.

The bill was passed shortly after the lawmakers had been informed the marauder had attacked more homes last night.

It provides punishment of from one to ten years if no person or animal is injured, and in the event of injuries from one to twenty years.

Lewis J. Virts, 64, Dies; Was Native of Loudoun

Shenandoah Junction, W. Va., Jan. 30 (Spl.).—Lewis Joseph Virts, 64, long proprietor of Valley Hotel here, will be buried at Charles Town Thursday. A native of Loudoun County, Va., he died today after a year's illness. He came here 40 years ago.

Surviving are the widow and these children: Mrs. Charles Snyder and Miss Martha Virts, here; Raymond and Garland, Charles Town; Mrs. Alberton Snyder, Keyser, and Guy, Cumberland, Md.; also these brothers and sisters, Mrs. Henry Nicewarmer, William and George, Lovettsville, Va., and John Virts, Brunswick, Md.

Court Upholds PWA Projects By Town Bonds

New West Virginia Statute Affirmed, Expediting Sewer Operations.

Charleston, W. Va., Jan. 30 (Spl.). In a test case requested by the Federal Government, a recently enacted statute permitting municipalities of West Virginia to borrow PWA funds for sewerage construction and to issue revenue bonds as security was upheld today by the State Supreme Court.

The chief contention was that the bonds created municipal indebtedness limited by the State constitution. On this point, the court held that "where an act permitting a municipal corporation to issue bonds for a self-liquidating municipal project provides that the bonds 'shall not be a corporate indebtedness of such municipality,' the bonds do not create debts within the constitutional inhibition against the contraction of public debts."

The decision was given in affirming a ruling of the Mason County Circuit Court in a case entered by Ollie Brewer against the city of Point Pleasant. Brewer attacked the validity of a city ordinance providing for construction and financing of a self-liquidating sewer system with Federal funds.

Various sewerage projects in cities throughout the State now will go forward as PWA projects.

Farmers Plan Milk Program

Six-Point Pennsylvania Proposal Declared Shore's Hope.

Chestertown, Md., Jan. 30 (Spl.). Seeking a compromise in the muddled milk situation of nine Eastern Shore counties, State Senator Wallace William and Hoagland Gates, Cecil County producers, addressed a meeting of Pennsylvania and Kent County milk farmers here today.

They declared the six-point program recently adopted at Harrisburg, Pa., is the only basis upon which producers of the Philadelphia milk shed can present a united front when they go to Washington for a price-fixing conference.

Speakers demanded immediate severance of official relations with H. D. Allenbach, recently resigned president of the Interstate Milk Producers Association. He is now sales manager.

The six-point program, which would change the organization rules, is the only hope of unification, Williams asserted, adding that this view is held also by the allied Dairy Farmers Association of Pennsylvania.

Efforts will be made on the Shore to crystallize sentiment and influence directors of the interstate group which meets in annual session at Philadelphia soon, Williams said.

James F. Hurtt, milk farmer, of Galena, presided.

Hunters in Hardy Ask Law Changes

Rabbit Sale and Shipment Opopsed by Group.

Moorefield, W. Va., Jan. 30 (Spl.). The Hardy County unit of the South Branch Valley Game and Fish Association, at a meeting here, voted to make the following recommendations to the State Game and Fish Association:

That all streams be left open for sucker fishing; that the season next year be: deer, December 1—10; quail, November 1—30; turkey and pheasant, November 1—30; squirrel, September 15—October 1 and November 1—30; rabbit, November 1—30; that sale of rabbits in this State and shipping of rabbits out of the State for commercial purposes be prohibited.

W. D. McCauley was authorized to obtain seed for quail to be planted by farmers; to interview the State Game and Fish Commissioner in regard to seining carp out of the South Branch of the Potomac in the presence of the game warden and also to take up with the Federal authorities the matter of extending the duck season.

Kirk to Head Society For Crippled Children

Roanoke, Jan. 30.—Dr. T. Allen Kirk, of Roanoke, elected president of the Society for Crippled Children of Southwestern Virginia here today, succeeds N. W. Pugh. Other officers are: Mrs. E. H. Ould, Roanoke; Dr. J. O. Boyd, Roanoke, and Paul Dyck, Blacksburg, vice presidents, and T. C. Rohrbaugh, secretary-treasurer. All 22 members of the board of trustees were re-elected, and Dr. O. Pratt, Blacksburg, added.

Nora T. Donovan Dies.

Lynchburg, Va., Jan. 30 (Spl.). Miss Nora T. Donovan died yesterday at Virginia Baptist Hospital after a long illness. She was a daughter of the late Patrick Donovan and lived most of her life here. Three sisters survive: Mrs. Catharine McCarron and Miss Mary Donovan, of Lynchburg, and Mrs. Margaret O'Meara, of Norfolk.

Virginia Chamber to Receive Serenade of Mountain Music

Singers, Fiddlers, Dancers to Appear at Banquet in Richmond.

Richmond, Va., Jan. 30 (AP).—From the mountain fastnesses of southwest Virginia a dozen of the finest folk musicians that have been "discovered" in the recent revival of folk music interest, will come to Richmond February 8 to play, sing and dance at the annual banquet celebrating the tenth anniversary of the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce.

Gov. Peery, members of the General Assembly and business leaders from all parts of the State will attend.

The entertainment will consist entirely of folk music, handed down from father to son through many generations by the mountain folk, and which still remains unrecorded except in their memories.

Mrs. John P. Buchanan, sponsor of the White Top Music Festival, director of the Virginia State Choral Festival and chairman of the folk music committee of the National Federation of Music Clubs, will direct the program. Mrs. Buchanan is knwon for her original compositions, as well as for the tunes she has "found" in the hills.

Horton Barker, of Marion, blind ballad singer whose fame has spread throughout the State, will be there. He will choose from among many tunes that were more popular in the days of Capt. John Smith than they are today, including "Lord Bateman," "Molly Bon," "Lord Lovel," "Turkish Rebilee," "Old Sea Captain," "Oakem in the Woods," "Dodger," and "Springfield Mountain."

There will be sea chanteys gathered by E. A. Hunt, of Marion as a sailor for 30 years before the mast, with a hornpipe to accompany them.

Fiddlers are being selected by Mrs. Buchanan from among the winners in State contests to present such numbers as "Buck Creek Girl," "Sugar in the Gourd," "Cumberland Gap," "Sugar Hill," "Greasy String," "Round Town Girl," "Sourwood Mountain," "Barbara Allen," "Jolly Hollow Reel," "Sail Away, Ladies," and a host of others.

E. Lee Trinkle, former governor, Gov. Peery, Lieut. Gov. Price and Speaker of the House of Delegates J. Sinclair Brown will speak.

Fashion Show Friday Will Display Gay Frocks of Long Ago.

Winchester, Va., Jan. 30 (Spl.).—Styles of every period from the Revolution to the present day will be modeled at the second annual fashion show of the Winchester Civic League in Handley High School here Friday evening, for the benefit of the milk fund.

Treasures from the attics of Winchester homes have been taken from their mothball repositories and made ready for the occasion. There are real beaver Quaker bonnets and hats, and a full-bottomed wig that has been reposing in a bandbox since the beginning of the last century.

Ball gowns of Winchester's social heydey, 1800 to 1820, will be modeled. One article of note is a coat worn on the occasion of the visit of Marquis de LaFayette. Miss Rose MacDonald, of Berryville, will attend in a Randolph dress and full petticoat, once the property of Lady Spottswood, wife of one of the first Governors of Virginia.

There will be wedding gowns and the old-fashioned "second day" dresses, Confederate uniforms, bustle dresses, Merry Widows, &c. In addition to the heirlooms of a century ago, there will be an extensive exhibition of modern styles.

Dances by a group of local young ladies and a group of songs by Mrs. J. Wilmer Reinberg, of Front Royal, will be an added attraction at the fashion show.

Virginia House Fixes $5,000 Liquor Salary

"Plenty of Honest Men for That," Delegate Page Contends.

By Doug Warrenfels.

Richmond, Jan. 30.—Administration forces lost a major issue tonight when the House of Delegates voted, 54 to 42, that liquor commissioners should be paid $5,000 a year.

The Democratic leadership mustered sufficient support, however, to reject, by 51 to 43, a proposed amendment to the Hall liquor-control bill which would have provided for division of liquor profits between the State and political subdivisions.

House approval of the amendment sponsored by Delegate Vivian Page, Norfolk, to fix salaries at $5,000 was voted over the protest of Delegate Ashton Dovell, Williamsburg, Democratic floor leader, who championed a proposal of Delegate M. H. Bustard, Danville, that members be paid not more than $7,500 each annually in the discretion of the governor.

$5,000 Held Sufficient.

Prolonged debate preceded the vote on both of the outstanding issue. At adjournment several controversial phases remained to be considered.

Page contended the State could "get plenty of honest men" for $5,000. He cited the salary of $4,600 paid to the State motor vehicle commissioner.

Chain stores operating in Virginia pay their executives as much as $30,000 a year, Delegate W. Stuart Moffett, Staunton, an administration leader, contended.

"If proper men aren't picked for these important jobs," he shouted, "there won't be any State revenue."

The revenue issue was raised by Delegate Samuel R. Buxton, Newport News, and R. F. McMurran, Portsmouth, who offered an amendment to give two-thirds of the liquor revenue to counties and cities and the remainder to the State.

The proposal stipulated liquor income received by political subdivisions should be spent on schools, and that no county or city would get a portion of such profits until real estate taxes were reduced. Division would have been based on school population.

Seek to Limit Sales.

Delegate John Q. Rhodes, Louisa, protested passage of the amendment would upset budget estimates and might cause imposition of a sales tax.

The House rejcted an amendment by Page calling for unlimited purchases of liquor. Delegate Wilbur C. Hull, Leesburg, upheld a provision that only a gallon may be bought at a time. He said the clause was intended to prevent Washington and Maryland dealers from evading excise taxes at home by buying spirits in Virginia.

Another defeated amendment would have limited powers of dispensary managers to make arrests. The proposal was advanced by Delegate H. W. Shelton, Palmyra.

Delegate Samuel Rodgers, Petersburg, failed to win support for an amendment to increase the board from three to five members and require that two be women.

Saunders Supports Power Firm's Fight

Challenges U. S. Authority Over Electric Project.

Attorney General John R. Saunders, of Virginia filed in the Supreme Court yesterday a brief supporting the Appalachian Electric Power Co. in its challenge of the authority of the Federal Power Commission over hydro-electric power developments on nonnavigable streams, according to the Associated Press.

Viringia, he insisted, has complete control over the proposed power development of the Appalachian Co. on New River, Pulaski County, Va. The stream at the point selected for the power plant is nonnavigable, he argued, urging the curt to rule it unnecessary for the Appalachian Co. to obtain a license from the Federal Power Commission before proceeding with the development.

Man Swallows Poison On Street in Danville

Danville, Va., Jan. 30 (Spl.). Quick action by a policeman in rushing Leonard Bray to the city health office yesterday, after Bray swallowed poison tablets on the street, probably saved his life.

Bray told police "the breaks have been against me."

Judge Orders Mistrial In N. C. Murder Case

Danville, Va., Jan. 30 (Spl.).—After deliberating since Saturday evening, a jury which tried Van H. Goolsby, charged with the murder of Lee Waynick, in the Rockingham County, N. C., superior court was discharged this afternoon by Judge Felix Alley and a mistrial was entered.

Goolsby shot and killed Waynick last October when the latter called at the Goolsby home for a load of wood at the time Goolsby's son lay dead. Goolsby objected to the operations around the house and the fatal quarrel started.

Radio Waves and Ripples

AUNT SADIE'S short-wave receiver was in the house three or four days before any of us recognized it. Of course, we missed the time signals, but we supposed Aunt Sadie had sent her old receiver away for repairs and was taking care of her radio-listening requirements at the butcher's where police calls—her newest interest—are available perpetually.

It was Cousin John who discovered The Thing. He gets around the house more than the rest of us, and one afternoon he found Aunt Sadie sitting complacently in front of a multi-dialed contraption which emitted, at irregular intervals, a variety of distressing noises. The Thing was Aunt Sadie's new short-wave receiver, the most fantastic piece of mechanism ever to enter our household, much worse than mother's new vacuum cleaner with all its gadgets for cleaning behind radiators and moth-proofing woolens.

Aunt Sadie is not the person to do things by half measures. What she buys is the best there is, even if it also is the most complicated.

By the time we got home that night, Aunt Sadie could no longer be satisfied with the shrieks and squawks The Thing was supplying her. She was wanting nothing less than a good, clear police call.

Once quite by accident we repaired Aunt Sadie's electric curling iron and became, in her eyes, a veritable wizard with electricity. Regrettably we had done nothing, until last night, to dispel this illusion, encouraging it, rather, for we enjoyed having a reputation for mechanical intelligence and soon came to believe in it.

SO we were not surprised when, after dinner, Aunt Sadie summoned the entire family before The Thing and demanded that we regale them with a few police calls. There was a small book of instructions which we glanced through, hoping to acquire a faint understanding of our problem, gaining instead only profound confusion.

We were on the verge of going out to a movie when we saw Cousin John sitting in a corner of the room and smirking in a manner that made us consider longingly and bitterly those boxing gloves and that third-floor recreation room. Instead, we lunged at The Thing, removing and inserting coils and turning dials as rapidly as we could until, in the brief space of 15 minutes, we had caused it to produce a range and assortment of sound heretofore unknown to man. Aunt Sadie was visibly pleased with what she apparently considered a fine start, though it was patent that she could not long be satisfied that way. We then set to work slowly, deliberately, returning the coils to their original positions, concentrating on the dials.

It was four hours later. Cousin John, father, mother and Uncle Lemuel had gone to bed. Aunt Sadie sat dejectedly in a chair by the fire. There had been nothing from the receiver for fully an hour but code signals too faint for Aunt Sadie to hear, when, like a bolt from the blue, there came the sound of distant music. It drew nearer and grew into a blast. Aunt Sadie beamed. We were ready to do hand springs. Then a thing happened that probably will prevent Aunt Sadie from feeling the same toward us again. The Thing said:

"This is WJSV, the Old Dominion station . . ."

We called the house this noon to inquire about Aunt Sadie. Shocks at her age can easily prove serious.

We were politely informed that Aunt Sadie and the butcher were listening to police calls on her receiver and that it would be all right probably if we changed our mind about living at a hotel for a few weeks.

Egon Petri, N. B. C.'s piano genius, broadcasts his last recital tonight, then leaves for a European concert tour.

He will play five Liszt numbers, including the impressionistic nocturne, "Les Cloches de Geneve," from the so-called Swiss group of the master's piano works; two 1863 studies, "Waldesrauschen" and "Gnomenreigen," and "Ricordanza," one of his twelve etudes.

Petri will return to this country in the spring to join the faculty of the Malkin Conservatory of Music in Boston; where Arnold Schoenberg, composer, will be one of his colleagues.

Fifty bushels of turnips for his Happy Am I Cafeteria was Elder Michaux's reward for conducting church services at Lorton Sunday. The prisoners were grateful.

Leading the procession into the reformatory services was Walter Ellis, better known to his former associates there as Colorado Bill.

Colorado was one of the slickest confidence men in the business, a bad man, until he began to pay attention to the Elder's broadcast services when he was at Lorton.

Strasburg Studies Silk Mill Subsidy

Two Plants May Resume Operation Soon.

Strasburg, Va., Jan. 30 (Spl.). The probability that two silk mills in Strasburg would be operating at full capacity within a few weeks loomed here today when it was learned that the town of Strasburg is considering a proposal to subsidize such operation for two years.

Under the proposal, the town would provide buildings for the silk mills and furnish necessary power, on condition that the mill owners agreed to install 100 looms and furnish employment to 100 or more workers. The cost of installing the looms is estimated at $15,000.

Plans for subsidization were made at a meeting of Strasburg business leaders and O. H. Platt, of Martinsville, Va., said to represent wealthy New York silk milling interests. The Strasburg Chamber of Commerce will be asked to approve the plans. Approval by the chamber group is believed certain.

On Wasting 1,517 Hours.

A few months ago the traffic director decided that semaphores were necessary to regulate the flow of traffic on Pennsylvania avenue. A signal system was duly installed and automobiles have been creeping up this magnificent boulevard ever since at a speed of about 15 miles per hour. The lights are supposed to be timed for 18 miles per hour, but actually it is impossible to maintain a speed of 15 miles between Fourth and Fifteenth streets.

Motorists have to stop at every intersection, even if they hold their speed below the legal limit. Probably every driver who traverses the Avenue, while in a hurry, chews his tongue in exasperation. But that does not prevent the flashing of a red light in his face at every crossing.

During the eight busiest hours of the day actual counts show that more than 27,000 vehicles traverse Pennsylvania avenue at Twelfth street. No doubt it is safe to estimate the total number of automobiles passing this point every 24 hours at not less than 35,000. If these cars carry an average of only two persons each, we have 70,000 persons riding past this point per day.

Simple arithmetic will show that at 15 miles per hour, 4 minutes will be required to traverse one mile on Pennsylvania avenue where this condition exists. At 22 miles per hour—the District speed limit in effect on most other streets—the same distance can be covered in about 2.7 minutes. In other words, there is a loss of 1.3 minutes for every person who travels a mile on the Avenue between Fourth and Fifteenth streets. Multiplying this by the estimated number of persons who use this street, and converting the total into hours, we have a loss of 1,517 hours every day, because of this absurd timing arrangement.

It may be true, as the Traffic Department asserts, that vehicles move with greater facility with slow timing during the rush hours. Even so, there appears to be no excuse for choking traffic by red lights on this broad street throughout the day.

Illusions.

A story in the London Daily Mail quotes a minister of Cologne, Germany, as saying after a visit to Doorn that Kaiser Wilhelm believes that, "In due time God will restore me and my household to the throne in Prussia and Germany, which we held by divine appointment."

It would be foolish for anybody to be dogmatic enough to say that Germany will never again have a monarch, but it is a fair wager for even a conservative man that neither the former Kaiser nor any other Hohenzollern is likely to be restored. Hitler played with the monarchists of Germany, until he felt himself strong enough to take another tack. The Nazi attitude toward celebration of the former Kaiser's birthday last week ought to have given Wilhelm of Doorn and all other monarchists an excellent idea of how Hitler really feels.

Herr Goebbels, chief of propaganda and enlightenment, called those who oppose the new labor scheme, "monarchists and reactionists," which indicated his contempt. Nazis broke up a meeting of the German Officers League because they considered it a hot-bed of monarchists. The Kaiser's birthday was used by the Nazis to announce the complete absorption into the storm battalions of the Stahlheim, the absorption giving the younger men with Hitler leaning domination over middle-aged men with nostalgia for a monarchy. A pronounced Nazi colonel forced Gen von Horn from the presidency of the Kyffhauser League, a general veterans' organization with reputedly monarchist sympathy.

If those indications were not enough, the Kaiser should read Herr Hitler's newspaper, the Volkischer Beobachter. Prominent display was given to a Nazi speaker's statement: "We have no use for a monarchy like that preceding 1914." And even greater prominence was given to another speaker's words: "We do not need a king any more because we have Adolf Hitler."

In Behalf Of The Oyster.

Uncle Sam's newest protege under the benevolent CWA plan is the lowly oyster. Some one down in Alabama called attention to the plight of that State's oysters—they were not unemployed it seems, but in danger of race suicide—and a fund of $103,000 is said to have been forthcoming from the CWA to facilitate their propagation.

Maryland heard this news and officials began to bestir themselves over the discrimination of the CWA against denizens of the Chesapeake. Half a million bushels of baby oysters, it seems, are in danger of being inundated by silt deposits at the head of the bay. Why shouldn't Uncle Sam furnish $45,000 to move them to more habitable quarters? If the CWA obtains several hundred millions of dollars to continue its beneficent administrations it may be difficult to resist this plea.

Before long spokesmen for the seals of the Aleutian Islands and the reindeer of Alaska will be knocking at the door of the CWA. No doubt the weather man would testify in their behalf. If recent temperatures were the rule they might appropriately be moved to Washington.

Political observers, regardless of party affiliations, are coming to realize that Democratic policies have ceased to have any connection with those on which that party was founded and grew to greatness. From the time of Thomas Jefferson through that of Woodrow Wilson, despite the magnitude of social and economic change, certain consistent principles guided all leaders of Democracy. Since the accession of Franklin D. Roosevelt, those principles have been jettisoned in favor of policies generally regarded as diametrically opposed to those of his party's traditions.

The self-government of the individual States which compose the Union, to preserve which the founders of the Democratic party fought so valiantly, has under the present leadership of that party been sharply contracted. The centralization of power in the Federal Government, so resolutely opposed by Jefferson, Madison and Monroe, has lately been accomplished to an extent which would have seemed excessive even to Alexander Hamilton. An all-powerful bureaucracy, regarded by Democratic theory as fatal to individual liberties, has been developed almost overnight. Of the Democratic party, as known to history, only the name today remains. In its place arises a vigorous species of National Socialism, masquerading under the old and honored title.

At bottom, it is this complete overturn of standards and principles which has so dazed Republicanism as to make it temporarily futile as a political opposition. The Republicans have not adjusted themselves to the altered philosophy of their opponents. Accustomed to being called reactionary, the minority now confronts a government which has become ultra-reactionary in its centralization of authority and its regimentation of the individual. A party long denounced as illiberal, monopolistic and standpat has naturally been confused to find its former critics swinging further than Republicans ever dreamed in the direction of nationalistic isolation and domestic concentration of power.

Thus, since last March, a momentous decision has been shaping for some Republican leader of courage and intelligence to confront. Cast in syllogistic form the issue has been about as follows: An opposition party is essential to American government as conducted for 150 years. An opposition party must have a program based on philosophic principles, at variance with those of the party in power. Therefore, if the party in power becomes oligarchic, that in opposition, no matter how keen the wrench, must turn democratic.

In his Topeka speech, on Monday, Ogden Mills showed himself the first outstanding Republican who has been able to draw logical conclusions from the policies of the neo-Democrats. As a consequence of his clear thinking he has presented an alternative program which is of great significance in American political history. As might have been expected from any thoughtful analysis of the situation, the program presented by Mr. Mills is liberal. It had to be liberal because it is a program designed for opposition to a theory of government which can not be placed within that definition.

To orthodox Republicans of the old school certain of the principles enunciated by Mr. Mills at Topeka will, as he himself admitted, seem strange. It is indeed a sign of changing concepts when one of the former Secretary's background denounces isolation, and publicly espouses States' rights, lower tariffs, unemployment insurance and effective international cooperation. But when Democracy swings toward dictatorship, Republicanism may be expected to become at least relatively liberal. Only by doing so, indeed, has it any hope of blocking the trend toward National Socialism on which the present Administration appears to pin its faith.

Stabilization Agreement?

With devaluation of the dollar anticipated shortly, and the Treasury preparing to establish a $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund, we shall know soon whether there is to be currency peace or warfare between Great Britain and the United States. Secretary Morgenthau presumably desires peace and it is safe to assume that the British also are anxious to avoid engaging in a conflict which would be costly to both sides. However, it is clear that serious obstacles stand in the way of any formal agreement to effect even provisional stabilization of the dollar-sterling exchange ratio.

The first difficulty is that the United States is not in a position to negotiate with Great Britain. The Treasury has no authority to establish a value in excess of 60 cents for the dollar—a rate which undervalues the currency as measured by its purchasing power in terms of sterling and gold currencies. Naturally, therefore, the British authorities do not contemplate with any pleasure the idea of sterling-dollar stabilization at a rate over $4.86.

With the dollar depreciated by 40 per cent at minimum, the British pound would be worth approximately $5.25 on the basis of its current gold value in terms of francs. In order to effect any stabilization agreement with the United States, therefore, assuming that the dollar is revalued at 60 cents, the British would either have to consent to a dollar sterling rate well above $5 or else undertake to depreciate sterling in terms of gold francs. Such simultaneous devaluation of dollars and pounds would alarm the French and might be the signal for abandonment of the gold standard in countries still on gold.

Given the many unknown factors surrounding the exchange situation, and in view, too, of the uncertain outcome of our price raising experiments, it seems most unlikely that a formal agreement to stabilize the exchange rate of the dollar in terms of pounds is in immediate prospect. On the other hand, it is quite possible that the British will adopt a waiting policy, preferring to maintain the domestic status quo rather than risk a conflict with the United States and enter a race to depreciate the currency. In short, a truce may be tacitly decreed, if not openly proclaimed, until it is apparent whether our price level can be raised sufficiently to justify the excessive depreciation that has been arbitrarily decreed by statutory enactment.

Human Transplantation.

With none too reluctant feet the Administration pauses on the brink of a new undertaking involving the transplantation of approximately 1,000,000 families. Apparently President Roosevelt has assigned this unique responsibility to Harry L. Hopkins, Federal relief administrator and director of the CWA. At any rate, this ambitious effort to redistribute perhaps 4 per cent of our population has been announced by Mr. Hopkins with the same glib generalities and absence of practical working plans that preceded inauguration of the Civil Works experiment.

Two projects that will tie into this larger undertaking are already under way. One is the subsistence homestead plan, the other is the purchase of submarginal land by the Surplus Relief Corporation. Both of these ventures are experimental. On one hand, the Administration is trying to curtail overproduction in agriculture by withdrawing from cultivation lands that are unsuitable for farming. On the other hand, it is attempting to aid unemployed workmen by settling them on small plots of ground where they can raise their food supply and work part time in industrial pursuits. Without waiting to analyze the success of these undertakings, the Administration is seemingly ready to rush headlong into this new venture of wholesale transplantation.

The plan of moving destitute people to new communities, where economic opportunity is more abundant, has much to commend it in theory. But it involves tremendous practical difficulties. The Government has no adequate machinery for such an undertaking. Over a period of years the Federal Employment Service might be developed for performance of this task. But there is no indication that this agency would be made basic in handling the project.

The sketchy manner in which this plan is announced suggests that it is intended as a sequel to the CWA. One carelessly-improvised experiment leads to another. The CWA arose suddenly out of the failure of the Public Works Administration to create jobs as rapidly as was expected. Now the CWA has fallen into disrepute. Something must be found to take its place. Another experiment, even more pretentious than the others, is rushed to the front. Obviously, if this prodigious undertaking should be launched with the same lack of preparation that has characterized the CWA, the stage will be set for a major blunder.

Race Horse "Doping."

There is something revolting in the abuse of dumb beasts in the name of sport, especially when so fine an animal as the race horse is affected. The "doping" of horses in an effort to increase their speed on the track has become a widespread racket. Unscrupulous trainers have carried the practice so far that many racing enthusiasts feel obliged to feed their horses cocaine and other narcotics to meet the competition.

Experts say that narcotics produce the same effects in horses as in men. After a horse has strained every nerve and muscle under the influence of powerful drugs he experiences an acute reaction. Aside from this, continued use of narcotics may be as destructive to horses as to human beings. It is a strange commentary on a fine old sport that horses should be so wantonly abused temporarily to increase their speed.

Three trainers have been permanently barred from Florida's tracks for "doping" horses. One has been suspended. Other States are finding it necessary to take similar action. It is not difficult to prevent "doping" if careful supervision is provided, because a dose administered more than a half hour before a race begins is likely to have adverse effects upon the victim's speed.

Organization of the National Association of State Racing Commissioners at Miami last week, one purpose of which is "to encourage forceful and honest Nation-wide control of racing for the protection of the public," may hasten the end of this outrage against the spirit of sport.

The Post welcomes letters from its readers. All communications should be signed with the writer's name. Upon publication initials or pen names will be used if requested. Letters should be limited to 300 words.

Stavisky Not a Pole.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I observe your editorial in The Post of January 29, wherein you refer to Alexander Stavisky as the Polish crook. I presume this was inadvertence on the part of the editorial writer who arrived at an erroneous conclusion that, because the name ended phonetically as the Polish names so frequently do, in a "sky," this arch crook must have been a Pole. I have consulted with prominent Poles and finally referred the matter to the embassy and I am informed positively that this man is not of Polish blood and never had Polish connections.

Will you, therefore, inasmuch as an error has been committed, make clear that this criminal is not of Polish antecedence?

Unemployment Discussed.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: How pleasant everything sounds! Stock market booming—business turning upward, the vexatious question of monetary system well on the way to being solved—the country more and more back of the President as his program develops! It looks like a complete recovery much on the same old lines. But in the end, there is only one standard by which success can be measured, and that is by the ability of the business recovery to absorb the unemployed.

Now as to facts as far as the unemployment in this country is concerned. Some time ago, back in the fall, President Roosevelt declared that 4,000,000 men had gone back to work. Later Secretary Perkins placed the number at 2,300,000, reporting an increase in unemployment over the month before. All estimates are largely guess work, but the estimates from reliable sources place the unemployment on March 4, as around 15,000,000. Billions have been spent and billions more appropriated, with less than one-third of the unemployed taken care of, and a large number of those who have been employed in temporary jobs only. It does not look so good after all.

Not only this, factories are more and more substituting machine energy for man labor, so that it is no longer considered a wild statement to say that we are approaching an era when the manless factory will have arrived, and when unemployment will soar far beyond any meager 15,000,000.

Let no one be so foolish as to believe that the President does not know this, and that preparations are not being made for the day when the whole capitalistic system will be dropped into whatever receptacle receives discarded economic systems, and then we shall start anew, with quite a different conception of what production is for, and a vastly different standard of success than that based on monetary achievements.

On Banking Insurance.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Aside from the indisputable fact that banking insurance is a gift from Heaven to the depositor, let us consider it from another angle—as to whether or not it is sound business.

Insurance is the insuring of a risk. There is no doubt that with every risk there is a certain degree of uncertainty. In comparing life insurance with bank insurance, one has to face a different set of facts. In life insurance a person is not going to deliberately do things that will have an adverse effect on him, unless he is contemplating suicide, thereby making the insurance company make good the full amount of his policy far in advance of their expectation as to the span of life for this particular person. This goes to explain that in life insurance there is a certain amount of certainty as to the risk involved.

But in bank insurance there is no certainty. There is no certainty attached to a bank's investments and business policies. Banks invest money on anticipation of future events which do not materialize. They invest money in property. True, they demand collateral, but this collateral is subject to change in value which they can not foresee. This fact has been well illustrated and demonstrated these last few years. Many men call themselves bankers who, if subjected to close scrutiny and examination, would reveal them totally unfit to handle other people's money. The business policies and decisions of these men represent the most dangerous and disastrous risk one could think of. Yet they are going to be insured. Their faults and misgivings are going to be taken care of by an insurance fund, one-half of it to be contributed by the Government. If the head of a bank finds out that his business policies have been bad, his decisions have been wrong, and his bank is on the verge of insolvency, do you think that he is going to worry? I should say not; there is the bank insurance fund. Would you call this sound business?

The only possible way that I can see the success of bank insurance is the setting up of stringent laws and regulations for every bank and banker to follow.

I personally believe that the handling of other people's money should be a governmental function, and I hope to see the Government take over the entire banking system one of these days.

FRED J. CALVERT.

The Congressional Library.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Apropos the editorial you ran the other day on libraries, may I be permitted to call your attention to one of the most wonderful institutions in Washington—indeed in the world—that is just being taken for granted by most of the "natives." I mean the Library of Congress.

The miraculous vast choice of assortment of books; the comfort in the reading-rooms, was the general efficiency and courtesy of the employes and library staff is one of the amazing wonders of the age. The nearest thing to it is the library of the British Museum in London. But there you must have a card of admission and other restrictions make it a different institution altogether.

For many years I have been using this greatest of all American institutions with financial and intellectual and spiritual benefit to myself—with never any cost or expense for it. I have received and seen others use books in the Library of Congress that we couldn't get in Europe in my native language and in my native country. I feel that I owe a great gratitude for these blessings received and am very pleased that I have an opportunity to express my thanks for it and pay a tribute that is well merited and seldom given.

GUSTAF FISHER.

On Blind Devotion.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Those of us who are engaged in trying to save a great nation, and this certainly includes every right-thinking citizen in the Nation, think that our only salvation lies in absolute acquiescence to the program of the Administration.

Certainly there is no one so selfish that he does not wish the Administration well; but should our devotion be so blind that we are afraid to criticize, even when we think criticism in order. Rather it seems to me in view of the unprecedented powers given to the Administration, we should be more watchful than ever.

Historians know only too well the result of unopposed leadership. Let us stop before it is too late and ask, not only where we are going, but for what reasons do we take this particular course in this particular fashion? P. H. C.

From a Bonus Seeker.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The incongruity of a hungry war veteran being able to buy a "hot dog" while demanding his meager "bonus," has aroused the ire of certain Senators and Representatives. We hear the resonant voice of the veteran crying out; pleading to save his bonus.

On behalf of the veterans of all wars, I wish to thank you for the interest and splendid service you have rendered through your paper during the veterans' cuts controversy. I'll be back with you again in 1936.

LEONARD L. BEAVER.

"Another Shall Carry Thee Whither Thou Wouldest Not"

By Robert Quillen.

Man has not yet invented words to define his soul.

What is the real you? To what substance or essence or quality do you refer when you say "I?"

The something that is you is more than a body of flesh and bone, for that physical body is directed by a mind.

Yet the mind is not you, for you are its master, and the servant is not greater than his lord.

As your mind directs the movement of your hands, so you direct the work of your mind, compelling it to concentrate, to memorize, to move from one interest to another.

The real you, then, is a will. That is as close as you will come to defining your soul.

Is this will—this soul of you—the absolute master of your destiny?

Only while you are building a personality and a character. When that business is finished, you are no longer a free agent. You have created a devil or an angel to be your master.

You will, like your mind and habit.

In the beginning, one part of your mind must send out instructions for each movement of your "voluntary" muscles. Your fingers, for example, will not perform any task except as your mind, obeying your will, directs them.

But when you have done a certain thing many times, the performance of it becomes "mechanical." Your muscles move in obedience to your "subconscious" mind, and put on your clothes or fill a pipe or do any other accustomed thing while your thoughts are far away.

And when you "lose your wits," your subconscious mind may direct your muscles to make habitual movements that will shame or injure you. Habit is master; not your will.

So your conscious mind, directed by your will, acquires the habit of patience, sympathy, intolerance, greed, courage, cowardice, honesty, treachery, selfishness or any other quality, and then your will is no longer master.

You can't change because you can't desire to change.

The will or the soul that is you was master of your destiny in the beginning, but the mental habits you acquire will rule your soul at the finish.

Along the Potomac

With Carlisle Bargeron

BARGERON.

IT would undoubtedly be most surprising to those thousands who participated yesterday in the organized celebration of Mr. Roosevelt's birthday to know that he got the least fun out of it of all. As a matter of plain fact it was the cause of some perturbation to him as well as to the Democratic chieftains as a whole.

And this for the simple reason that they recognized it for what it was, an exploitation rather than a celebration. Even the highest purposes of its sponsors, not considering the sordid aspects, were admittedly not to honor the President but to raise funds for the Warm Springs colony. They did not, in the first instance, get the permission of the President for their campaign. They simply went ahead and counted upon his known sympathy for the sufferers from infantile paralysis not to throw cold water upon the use of his name.

Then, as the movement grew by leaps and bounds they, the professional promoters of the celebration, brought pressure upon him to make a radio speech. We know hereabouts that he was most reluctant to do so but then when he thought of those who would benefit and of the thousands who responded to the appeal he could not resist.

Of course, as the matter turned out, it was not confined to raising funds for the Warm Springs project at all. Others saw the commercial possibilities of the day, too, to such an extent, in fact, that Mr. Roosevelt instead of being overjoyed must have become discouraged in his professed belief that unselfishness is to be the order of the new deal. Hotels gave balls, filled their dining rooms and counted the day a profitable one. Merchants filled their windows with photographs and well wishes for the President alongside exhibitions of their choice wares.

I am not criticizing all this. It would be childish to do so. This has been our way of doing things for a long time and it will likely be for a long time to come. Undoubtedly, too, a good argument could be made out in that it put money into circulation and that is what we need now.

* * * *

But surely it can't do any harm, now that it is all over, to point out that we were not helping the President, that, instead we were doing him possible harm. No other President has known human nature any better than he. And he knows that the public can stand just so much of an emotional splurge and then the reaction may be the other way.

He has been careful not to overdo his popularity on the radio. Many thoughtful observers think that it was Mr. Hoover's too frequent appearance on the radio and in the movies that had much to do with the latter's loss of popularity. Songwriters recognize the danger of their songs being killed off by the radio and limit their renditions.

* * * *

It was the radio phase of the birthday celebration promotion that most concerned Mr. Roosevelt's friends, too. When a bunch of actors get to blubbering over you instead of doing what they are paid to do, it is just too bad.

The worst offender is Mr. Eddie Cantor. He almost had a fit when he heard the Administration was going to codify the movie industry and limit the salaries of high-priced stars. He went running to see Mr. Roosevelt at Warm Springs about it and was made one of the three administrators of the code.

Now his Sunday night program instead of being entertaining is a lot of gushing about the President. Maybe his sponsors figure that this is a better advertisement for their products than Eddie's jokes. But Mr. Roosevelt's friends wish he would cut it out.

Traffic Department Rebutted.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "Post Fan" signs himself well. Too bad he must be a traffic department fan, as well. As such, he defends the indefensible.

He points out that toward the end of each year our traffic directors mail, unsolicited, to each District car owner a notice of the cost of new license plates, including tax—together with an offer to deliver the tags by special messenger for 10 cents extra. A resident of the District for only two years, "Post Fan" was perhaps unaware that the 1933 plates were the first to be delivered by that method. Washington lagged years behind other large American cities in that practice.

"Post Fan" kept the Traffic Bureau informed of his correct address and got his plates by mail. Always, however, there are many thousands of District car owners who are delinquent in that respect. Besides, there are bound to be hundreds of clerical errors in addressing many tens of thousands of envelopes. Our traffic directors ignored those known facts, and there was a "run" on their bureau.

Drivers failing to notify the bureau of changes in their addresses are fined $2, justly, for their negligence. Why not bill the delinquents for the fine, along with the tax and the cost of new plates, if they apply by mail and admit their negligence? Why punish them further by forcing them to stand in line for four to six hours?

The innocent have been punished with the guilty. For six weeks no newcomers to Washington (or residents buying cars) have seen at the bureau a spectacle suggesting both a madhouse and a funeral.

Conditions there are not so very different in normal months, when old residents are not renewing their license plates. Even then it takes two or four hours to register your car—sometimes a half-hour just to record a changed address. A hundred thousand District residents know this to be true. For years the bureau has shown "unbelievable incapacity," in season and out. It needs a New Deal. E. N. D.

No End of Books

By Theodore Hall.

Songs for a Winter Evening.

Do you remember Uncle Toby, that genial old character in Sterne's "Tristram Shandy," so kind-hearted he wouldn't hurt a fly? And how, whenever he was annoyed or embarrassed, he would go off and sit by himself in a corner and whistle softly the old tune, "Lilliburlero?" That is but one of the associations which cling to the marvelously musical name (pronounced, by the way, Lilli-bur-Leer-o).

The words of the song were written by a certain Lord Wharton in 1687 as a mere satirical ballad growing out of his jealousy that another gentleman, and not he, was appointed Lord Deputy of Ireland. But set to an air composed by Henry Purcell, one of the ablest musicians of the time, "Lilliburlero" sprang at once into the utmost popularity. It became the great song of the Protestant army and the people during the "Glorious Revolution" of 1688, which cost James II his throne.

• • • •

"Lilliburleo" is now the title of a little book (Oxford Press, $2), holding the words and music of 24 such traditional songs. Once in a while a book appears which must be called sheerly delicious, and this is one. It is amazingly well-printed, the work of the Sylvan Press in London. Across the top of each page is a delicate and charming illustration in colors—pen outline with flat, soft tints—done by Miss Pauline Trevelyan. Ships, knights in armor, morris dancers and gypsies pass in a gay, nostalgic frieze. And the contents, if you like to sing of an evening, you will find to the Queen's taste.

Lady Bell, Dame of the British Empire, had begun the book as a collection for family singing. But she died before it was completed, leaving her granddaughter, Miss Trevelyan, to finish the work. From the result, it could not have been in better hands. "Lilliburlero" is a most engaging song-book for young and old alike.

In it you will find the "Song of the Victory of Agincourt," probably written by one of Henry V's court minstrels shortly after the battle of 1415. Even older is "Summer Is Icumen In," whose words and music were written about 1250, most likely by a monk in Reading Abbey. You would scarcely believe songs could be handed down through so many centuries. Two of the very finest songs in English are in the collection—"The Wraggle-Taggle Gypsies" and "The Golden Vanitee." There are also two old French songs, for which Lady Bell wrote English versions.

The illustrations carry out the themes of the songs. For that rallying chorus of the Jacobites, "When the King Enjoys His Own Again," a song as popular with the supporters of the two Charles as "Lilliburlero" was with their opponents, Miss Trevelyan drew a picture of Charles II landing at Dover in 1660 after his exile. She had adopted the decorative style of leaving the faces blank, otherwise one might have discovered in the corner a certain young man returning with the king's party, a clerk very inconspicuous as yet but destined later to make sufficiently well known the name of Samuel Pepys.

The Story of Books.

Covici-Friede have been getting out a series of inexpensive reprints, mostly erotic in subject, in which Douglas C. McMurtrie's "The Golden Book" seems a bit incongruous but none the less welcome. First issued in 1927 as a costly limited edition, reprinted in 1930 at $4, it has just been published with all the original text and reproductions in an exact reprint for $1 a copy. I have never seen so excellent a dollar book.

Mr. McMurtrie has long been an able and prolific writer on typography. The present book is necessarily a condensation of his learning, but it remains a very full and eminently readable account of the history of bookmaking.

He begins with ancient writing and the Phoenician alphabet, and ends with Bruce Rogers and Elmer Adler, covering that long intervening ground easily and with a notable sense of proportion. There are chapters on the techniques of type, printing, decoration and binding, and a final chapter in which he counsels that the power press and its attendant methods need not undermine fine work in the quest of the "Golden Book." More than 150 reproductions of type—and title pages—make the evolution of book-design clearly understandable.

For an introductory and non-technical approach to the whole history of printing, I can recommend nothing so valuable as Mr. McMurtrie's volume. That such a handsome piece of work can be had for a dollar is in itself a laurel wreath for power printing.

Gang Raids Police Station, Robs Safe

Acting Chief of Force Is Knocked Unconscious.

Detroit, Jan. 30 (AP).—Officers throughout the Detroit area tonight searched for a gang of robbers who raided the police station of suburban Bloomfield Hills today, knocking Fire Chief Russell Moore unconscious and taking an undetermined amount of money from the safe.

Chief Moore, substituting for Police Chief William Putnam on the latter's day off, was found lying face downward on a pile of burning waste paper in the disordered office. Physicians said he apparently had sufferee a fractured skull.

The waste paper apparently had been ignited by a cigarette the chief had been smoking.

The National Gallery

CORDELL HULL, Secretary of State. As unvarnished and unpretentious as the Tennessee backwoods, where, in impoverished boyhood, he learned quaint, homespun phrases which flavor his conversation. He snatched laurels out of the ashes of the London, Montevideo, conferences. Of the old school, he has specialized all his political life on the tariff and is dubious of New Deal economics. Mild-mannered, soft-spoken, he proved a flinty rock which shattered the diplomatic career of Prof. Moley.

He was the first to mobilize Roosevelt sentiment in Congress, saw it fructify at Chicago. Called "Judge" by his friends. Reads everything about himself, suffers as keenly as Herbert Hoover at criticism. Has to be egged away from his desk, and long hours of broodihg over tariff lore, to walk or play croquet. Dry wit underlies his seeming sadness. Few men in public life equal him in integrity of character, the simple, old-fashioned virtues. Sometimes he is sorry he exchanged permanent senatorial toga for a Cabinet portfolio.

450-Year-Old Secrets, Blotted From Books, Revealed by Rays

By their use in photography at the famous Huntington Library here, obliterated portions of literature of the Inquisition period are being restored.

While nothing startling has yet been found in the deleted passages, Dr. L. Bendikson, in charge of the work, said, "we hope to be able to throw some new light on that period in showing what was considered at that time to be unworthy for reading."

The Huntington Library has a vast collection of Spanish books printed during the Inquisition, and each of them contains parts carefully blotted out.

The use of infra-red radiation was suggested by Dr. Ira S. Bowen, of the California Institute of Technology, and the basis of this suggestion was that the powers of reflection and absorption of different pigments vary in different regions of the spectrum. Thus it was found it was possible to distinguish between two apparently identical pigments by means of a photographic image, made with infra-red radiation, excluding almost the entire visible spectrum through the use of a filter.

In the Hunting Library is a set of 12 volumes in Latin of DeBry's voyages, the first 10 of which, formerly in the Britwell Court Library, bear inscriptions indicating they were expurgated by the censor for the Spanish Inquisition.

Daily Talk About Books and Authors.

The North Street Gazette.

This must be one of the rarest curiosities in the world. The first (and last) number appeared in 1908, and was edited by Hilaire Belloc and Maurice Baring. They prepared such an alluring announcement that they got a large number of subscribers, but, as they decided not to print another number, the money was returned. This newspaper was written entirely by Belloc, Baring and Raymond Asquith, the last-named composing all the correspondence.

The North Street Gazette in its statement of policy said it was "a journal written for the rich by the poor . . . will fearlessly expose all public scandals save those which happen to be lucrative to the proprietors, or whose exposure might in some way damage them or their more intimate friends. . . . All communications accompanied by stamps will be confiscated." Belloc wrote for the first number a long article advocating votes for monkeys and a poem called "East and West," partially reprinted in his volume, "The Four Men."

"East and West."

The dog is a faithful, intelligent friend,
But his hide is covered with hair.
The cat will inhabit a house to the end,
But her hide is covered with hair.

The camel excels in a number of ways,
The Arab accords him continual praise;
He can go without drinking for several days—
But his hide is covered with hair.

The hide of the porpoise is sleek and cool,
But you find if you look at that gambolling fool—
That his hide is covered with hair.

The men that sit on the Treasury Bench,
Their hide is covered with hair, etc.

Chorus.

Oh! I thank my God for this at the least,
I was born in the West and not in the East;
And he made me a human instead of a beast,
Whose hide is covered with hair.

Merchants Hit Plan to Boast D. C. Gas Tax

Leaders of Association Urge U. S. Pay Cut Restoration.

Opposition to the proposal to increase the gasoline tax to 4 cents a gallon in the District, and a recommendation that the 15 per cent Government pay cut be restored, were voiced at the annual meeting of the board of governors of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association yesterday.

James E. Colliflower was reelected president. Other officers elected were Ford E. Young, first vice president; Arthur J. Sundlum, second vice president; Gen. Anton Stephan, third vice president; Louis Levay, treasurer Edward D. Shaw, secretary, and Ringgold Hart, general counsel.

The association has had the busiest year in its existnce, holding 385 meetings of its differnet trade groups to discuss and interpret NRA codes, Mr. Colliflower showed in his annual report.

The board of governors reiterated opposition to making F and G streets northwest one way, and urged the widening of F street, between Seventh and Ninth, to make this a two-way street.

Sterilization Bill Killed.

Boston, Jan. 30 (AP).—By a vote of 150 to 29, the House of Representatives today killed a bill to permit sterilization of insane and feebleminded inmates of State and county institutions.

Pecora Asked To Draft Bill As Stock Curb

(Associated Press.)

Faced by reports there would be no stock market legislation at this session of Congress, the Senate Banking Committee yesterday suddenly set its staff to work drafting a bill to regulate practices on the exchanges.

Ferdinand Pecora, committee counsel, was instructed to draft a bill within 10 days or two weeks, if possible, to be used as the basis for hearings.

Apparently aroused over recurring reports that stock market legislation was not on the program, the committee decided to cut short its hearings on Detroit and Cleveland banks in order to get back to its stock exchange inquiry.

Rabinson Favors Probe.

Pecora announced he would seek to conclude Detroit hearings this week and would postpone the Cleveland case until after hearings on stock market operations.

Further impetus was given the move for legislation at this session by a statement from Senator Robinson, Democratic leader of the Senate, that he favored it if a bill could be prepared in time.

The committee instructed Pecora to draft a bill, using as a basis the testimony taken by the committee and the recommendations last week of President Roosevelt's interdepartmental committee. This committees recommended strict regulation of the exchanges through a license system and a Federal administrative authority.

When the bill is drafted, the committee plans to have open hearings on it and call as witnesses Richard Whitney, president of the exchange, and others in a position to advise on it.

Pecora indicated that in drafting legislation, he would make extensive use of data now being assembled by his staff in New York from about 2,000 replies from members of tre New York and other stock exchanges about their operations.

Results of this questionnaire will be placed before the committee during hearings on the proposed bill.

Seeks Curb on Members.

One of his recommendations, he has indicated, will be that members of the exrhange be required to ronfine their artivities either to dealing for themselves or for customers, not for both.

He told newspapermen answers to the questionnaire indicated the practice was widespread for brokers to deal for themselves and customers at the same time. It has been charged this chstom made it possible for brokers to take advantage of their clients.

The banking committee yesterday rejected a proposal by Whitney for a series of conferences over stock exchange practices, deciding it would be better to settle the problem in open hearings, with specific legislation under consideration.

Mitchell Lauds Bill to Train Youths for Air

Young Pilots Would Be Needed in Time of War, Says General.

Brig. Gen. William Mitchell, retired, former head of the Army Air Corps, yesterday indorsed the training of youths between 18 and 21 to qualify as pilots, as the bill provides.

"Youths are needed in time of war such a department as the Air Corps and I consider McSwain's bill very good," Gen. Mitchell said.

Provisions of Measure.

Essentially the bill as introduced by Representative McSwain (Democrat), of South Carolina, in the House provides:

1. Youths between 18 and 21 shall and the art of flying.
receive training in aerodynamics
2. Regular Air Corps officers shall training the candidates in such Army flying fields.
3. All graduates of the course shall be listed so that they may be available at short notice in time of National emergency.
4. The Secretary of War shall be authorized to select each year 300 of the most promising graduates of the primary instruction for further training.
5. The 300 youths so selected shall receive commissions as second lieutenants in the Air Corps Reserve.

MacCracken Indorses Bill.

William P. MacCracken, jr., member of the board of governors of the National Aeronautic Association, also indorsed the bill.

"Anything that tends to stimulate the youth of the Nation towards aeronautical training will be helpful in time of war," he said.

McSwain prophesied that more than 10,000 youths would join the movement.

The bill will be considered today when the House Military Affairs Committee meets in executive session.

Rulng Asked on Long Moton n Investgaton

New Orleans, Jan. 30 (AP).—Criminal District Judge William J. O'Hara today reserved until Friday a decision on whether the State Attorney General's office, acting on motion of Senator Huey P. Long, has the right to make an investigation into the New Orleans City Administration.

FAVORABLE FACTORS FOR THE YEAR.

1. We're still tugging at the rip cord, but there seems to be less fear that the parachute won't open.

2. Even if it doesn't open, the landing field looks softer and the supply of life nets is increasing.

3. No matter what happens, we have a President whose radio voice is so good he can take the air and make us think it was trivial.

4. There has been the first rise in the marriage rate in three years. It either means that the depression is over or that we've gone so crazy it won't make any difference.

• • • •

5. All over the land the people are chucking out bad mayors, bad governors, bad bankers, bad advisers and bad liquor.

6. In nine months the Democrats have given the country repeal, Russian recognition, a Princeton football victory, the full quart bottle, the rubber-shaft golf club, another Lindbergh flight, the best artificial rainbow ever made and a philosophy of optimism and hope.

7. They have eliminated the "All You Can Eat for 30 Cents" signs, oversized radiator ornaments, fur coats for office boys, the self-service bank president, the use of artificial salt water stains on quart bottles and the fallacy that the best qualifications for membership on a board of directors is sleeping sickness.

8. The automobile industry has stopped complaining and has put so much time and money into designing new-fangled cars for 1934 that it must be definite evidence that "Over the Hill to the Poorhouse" is no longer a National anthem.

9. While the outlook may be still pretty hazy, the direction flag is now visible and everybody is trying except the rugged individualists.

10. There is a uniform opinion that if we could have a little money stability, if we could know that a dollar would continue to be a dollar, even the orchid industry would dazzle us with a high-speed recovery.

11. Mr. Pecora has about finished his investigation and there are so many new faces in business many of us have concluded that during the boom years we were only using a second-string eleven, anyhow.

12. The suspicion that the Blue Eagle was a red buzzard has nearly disappeared, the people have become accustomed to calling organizations by alphabetical letters, and Gen. Johnson's temperature has gone down 2 points.

13. You can no longer frighten even an old-line Republican merchant by mentioning a code.

14. Business has been so bad that even a minor pickup will seem like a windfall.

2 Dall Addresses Listed in Register

Roosevelt Daughter's Hom Called White House.

New York, Jan. 30 (AP).—The January dilatory domicile pamphlet of the New York Social Register, just issued, lists separate addresses for Curtis B. Dall and his wife, the former Anna E. Roosevelt, daughter of President and Mrs. Roosevelt.

Dall's residence is listed as Panache, an estate in North Tarrytown, N. Y., while the address of Mrs. Dall is given as the White House, Washington.

In the winter edition, issued last November, the Dalls' address was given as 49 East Sixty-fifth street, Manhattan, the President's town house.

Liquor Prices Still Too High, Choate Holds

(Associated Press.)

Joseph H. Choate, jr., Federal alcohol control administrator, said yesterday there was "very great room for further reduction" in liquor prices and that he expected reductions in both the wholesale and retail prices in a few months.

He expressed satisfaction, however, with liquor prices posted Sunday that he was pleased that some of the manufacturer's quotations were lower than those submitted in December.

The Justice and Commerce Departments, the Bureau of Internal Revenue and his Administration are working for an amendment to customs laws which would prevent seized rum boats from being bonded so that they could return to smuggling 24 hours after being taken, he disclosed.

Choate said an extension of the 30-day period, ending February 15, during which liquor import restrictions were lifted might be advisable, and that if the liquor shortage in this country was not remedied, an extension was likely. The administration has not received ful information on the results of the 30-day relaxation, he said.

Much liquor wanted in this country under the the 30-day restriction removal is in Canada, he said, adding that it seemed Canadian distillers' consideration for their home needs limited the quantity sent into the United States.

States in the liquor business would be treated in the same manner as private corporations with regard to liquor importations, the administrator said. He forecast the issuance of labelling regulations within a few days.

Traylor Continues To Gain Steadily

Chicago, Jan. 30 (AP).—Despite a slight rise in temperature today, physicians attending Melvin A. Traylor, banker, said they were "well satisfied" with his condition.

The First National Bank president, ill with pneumonia for two weeks, was able to take nourishment, and the doctors noted a marked improvement in his breathing.

Mountain Fire Fought 2 Days As Gale Rages

Waynesboro, Va., Jan. 30 (Spl.).—One of the worst forest fires in this vicinity in many years finally was brought under control by 400 fire fighters, after a 48-hour battle. The fire was confined to the Shenandoah National Park area around Jarmans Gap, and hundreds of acres of the mountain forest were destroyed.

Mrs. William Plummer, on the Jarmans Gap road, discovered the blaze and notified Gray Barnhart, chief fire warden. The Grottoes CCC camp personnel also were summoned as a high wind swept the flames along over a 5-mile front.

It is believed a cigarette tossed from a car which passed shortly before the fire was discovered caused the conflagration.

The center of the blaze was only six miles from here, and last night the glow from the mountainside was reflected over the city, while the wind swept clouds of smoke overhead during the day.

Citizens Stop Forest Fire.

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 30 (Spl.).—A forest fire which was discovered on South Mountain near the Gen. Reno Monument, was brought under control yesterday by residents of the district who turned out and fought it. It was the first fire of any consequence since CCC workers have been on the job.

Building Destroyed.

Martinsville, Va., Jan. 30 (Spl.). Fire destroyed a frame structure near the home of J. M. Berry, local boxing promoter, used as training quarters for several of Berry's young boxing proteges. Quick work of firemen saved the Berry home.

Lexington Home Damaged.

Lexington, Va., Jan. 30 (Spl.). The home of Ulysses Fisher was damaged by fire and water yesterday. A vulcanizing shop, operated by Joe Weeks in the same building, was also damaged.

Hero Held in Barn Blaze.

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 30 (Spl.).—Trailed into a densely wooded tract by bloodhounds, Willie Self, Stafford war veteran once cited for heroism, is under arrest in Spotsylvania County on an incendiarism charge of burning of a barn on the farm of Moody Poates, six miles east of here on the Tidewater Trail. When found a mile from the scene five hours afterward, beside the fragments of a jar which he said had contained liquor, Self vigorously protested his innocence.

McCue Poises Ax Over Road Police

Bill to Reduce Virginia Force by Half Planned.

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 30 (Spl.). Delegate E. O. McCue, jr., of this city, visiting here between sessions of the Virginia General Assembly, said he intended to introduce in the House a bill to cut the personnel of the State highway police force by half. There are approximately 100 officers on the force now and Mr. McCue contends the work they do does not compensate the State for the cost of upkeep.

McCue holds that much of their highway work can be done by the sheriffs and deputies of the various counties.

"Why have two sets of police?" he inquires. Reduction of the size of "the great white fleet" was one of the planks of the platform on which he led the Albemarle ticket.

Mrs. Ann Kilmer Succumbs at 90

Berkeley County's Oldest Woman Buried.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Jan. 30 (Spl.).—Funeral services were conducted here today for Mrs. Ann Elizabeth Kilmer, 90, the oldest woman resident of the county, who died Sunday morning at the Kilmer country homestead, Elmdale.

She was born in Berkeley County, a daughter of John D. and Susan Cushwa, and spent most of her life within the county. She is survived by a son, Clarence B.; a daughter, Miss Eva L. Kilmer, and a sister, Mrs. Mollie Rentch, all of the county.

350-Gallon Still And Man Seized

Largest Found in Years Taken at State Line.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Jan. 30 (Spl.). — A 350-gallon moonshine still, the largest confiscated in this section in several years, was seized by State and local officers over the week-end, near Brush Run, along the Virginia-West Virginia border, and brought here.

Joe Dan Clark was arrested, but a companion escaped. Clark was released under $1,000 bail.

The still was "purring," officers said, when they descended. A stream of liquor as thick as a man's finger was being produced.

Rev. G. V. Gocke Goes To Bluefield Church

Clarksburg, W. Va., Jan. 30 (Spl.). Announcement is made by the Rev. J. J. Swint, Catholic Bishop of West Virginia, of assignment of the Rev. G. V. Gocke, Charleston, as rector of the Sacred Heart Church at Bluefield.

Father Gocke has lately been diocesan director of Catholic missionary work in West Virginia. He will succeed the Very Rev. W. M. Burke, resigned because of ill health.

Moving

Various Offices in Danville Shifted This Week.

Danville, Va., Jan. 30 (Spl.). This week is official moving week here.

The office of the deputy clerk of the court was moved yesterday. The crop loan office, census office and commissioner's office were moved one block up the street today.

The Postal force is moving into the new postoffice, which will be in full operation Monday.

Police Seize 2, Find Explosive

Attempt to Crack Safe in Hagerstown Suspected; Creek Gets "Nitro."

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 30 (Spl.). Police who captured a man after wounding him at the office of the Coca Cola company here, where they said he was preparing to crack the safe, have no further clew to his identity than his own statement identifying himself as George Vincent, 54.

Photographs and fingerprints were sent to the Department of Justice at Washington yesterday.

Vincent had registered under the same name at the Federal Transient Bureau here several days before his arrest. A bottle containing 2 ounces of nitroglycerine was found buried near the bottling plant. His clothing bore tags from stores in several Pennsylvania cities. He told police he was born in Johnstown, Pa., and that his family had met death in the Johnstown flood of 1889. He also admitted serving a short term in Frederick for vagrancy. Vincent was held for the grand jury on a burglary charge.

Another man captured at the same time and who gave the name of A. J. Jones said he became acquainted with Vincent only a few days before the attempted safe-cracking.

The police poured the nitroglycerine into Antietam Creek yesterday.

Frostburg Bank Opens Tomorrow

$365,000 to Be Available to Depositors.

Frostburg, Md., Jan. 30 (Spl.). The Frostburg National Bank, which succeeds the old Citizens National Bank, will open for business Thursday, Thomas B. Finan, receiver, said yesterday.

The Citizens' National Bank has been closed since the bank holiday. There are about 3,000 depositors to whom $365,000 will be made available.

Officers of the new bank are William Jenkins, president; I. Dale Snodgrass, cashier, and Herbert E. Loar, assistant cashier. Mr. Snodgrass is a former Federal Bank examiner. Miss Velma Neal and Miss Emma Simons will be retained by the new bank. The directors are William Jenkins, Dr. James C. Cobey, Judge Edward J. Donohoe, Postmaster R. Hilary Lancaster, and Earl Kreitzburg. The new bank occupies the building of the old Citizens National Bank.

Man Dies Pushing Cold Automobile

Virginia Farmer Succumbs to Heart Attack.

Staunton, Va., Jan. 30 (Spl.).—The near zero temperature yesterday indirectly caused the death of Camden L. Coyner, 69, farmer of the Lyndhurst section, who died of a heart attack induced when he pushed his automobile in an effort to start it.

With his wife, Mr. Coyner had been visiting in Waynesboro, where he collapsed on the sidewalk and died. Doctors said overexertion caused the heart attack. The funeral will be held at Grace Lutheran Church, Waynesboro, tomorrow, conducted by the Rev. R. Homer Anderson, of Lynchburg.

Mr. Coyner is survived by his widow, two brothers, M. F. Coyner, of Swoope; J. N. Coyner, of Vermont, Ill., and a sister, Mrs. Calvin East, of Beatrice, Nebr.

Charlottesville Merchants Rap Sales Tax Plan

Urge State Economies for Saving Needed Funds in Resolutions.

Charlottesville, Jan. 30 (Spl.). "We believe proper economies in the government of Virginia will obviate the necessity for any increase in taxes," the Retail Merchants Association here declared yesterday in resoultions protesting the proposed sales tax. The resolution added:

"Taxes should not be increased but necessary funds can be realized by reducing governmental expenditures to the minimum and by rigidly enforcing already existing tax laws."

Estimating that license taxes would be greatly increased—in some instances 100 per cent—the association said:

"Many merchants who are now holding on with difficulty, in the hope of being able to pass over the crisis, will be forced out of business by such an increase."

The attack was aimed directly at Virginia Senate bill No. 123, which would change the tax on purchases to a tax on sales.

Such a tax was branded as "unfair because it does not take into consideration any difference in the classes of retail business; the ratio and amount of turnover in inventory; the variations in the increase of sales price over cost price; freight charged on different classes of goods; and general overhead—all of which affect the sales prices of goods on which the tax would be based."

Work Near End On Pipe Organ

Capital Army Officer Will Have Second Largest in Country.

Waynesboro, Va., Jan. 30 (Spl.). The console and working parts for the second largest privately owned pipe organ in America are rapidly nearing completion in an organ factory here, and will be ready for installation this week. The organ is being built for an Army officer in Washington, who has requested that his name be withheld.

It is being built by August Klann, German-born organ builder of international fame, and two Belgian experts, who furnished all important working parts of the world's largest organ at Atlantic City.

The console is of black walnut, beautifully carved and finished.

Funeral Services Today For James R. Sites, 79

Waynesboro, Pa., Jan. 30 (Spl.). The funeral of James R. Sites, 79, a retired farmer, will be held at Brown's Mill Church tomorrow at 10 a. m.

Mr. Sites suffered an attack of vertigo and fell into a spring. His body was found by Noble Sites, a distant relative.

George W. Hill Dies; Insurance Firm Head

Peg-Leg Calf

Heifer Gets Along Nicely, Apparently Contented.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Jan. 30 (Spl.). What is believed to be West Virginia's only peglegged heifer is owned by Paul Feathers, of Albright.

"Peggy" originally was owned by Wilbur Lenhart, of Crab Orchard, who sold her to Dallas Elliott, of Albright. The calf tried to return to her old home, became entangled in some vines and fell over a cliff, breaking a leg.

Elliott attempted to set the bones, but the calf walked before the fracture healed. The owner then amputated the leg and manufactured a peg leg for her. She has used it ever since getting alone all right, and apparently is a contented young cow.

"Pool" Probe On CWA Begun In W. Virginia

Mrs. Erma Hyer Charged With Favoring G. O. P. Workers.

Charleston, W. Va., Jan. 30 (Spl.). Expecting its sittings to last several days, a special committee of the State House of Delegates late today began a hearing at Sutton into the charges of political preference and nepotism against Mrs. Erma Hyer, administrator, and other CWA officials of Braxton County.

The charges set forth that Mrs. Hyer, a Republican, has been inclined to hire only Republicans for CWA jobs; that the Braxton CWA board is made up almost exclusively of Republicans, although a Democratic County; and that Mrs. Hyer and others gave preference to relatives.

Vernon Hall, a member of the CWA committee in charge of personnel for relief jobs, was on the stand today, averring that he had not attended a meeting at which a number of employes were laid off.

Edward Humphrey, a project foreman, was also examined as to the number of men now working and formerly working on his project.

Caroline County Gets First Health Officer

Denton, Md., Jan. 30 (Spl.).—Caroline County, the only Maryland County which has not employed a full-time public health officer, now has a public health physician in the person of Dr. Louis S. Welty, former assistant officer of Anne Arundel.

Dr. Welty, who will devote his time to preventive medicine, is a graduate of Amherst College and of Johns Hopkins Medical School. He was formerly connected with the University of Chicago Hospital and was resident physician at Beebe Hospital, Lewes, Del.

Rites for James Shaw, Hughesville Bank Aid

Leonardtown, Md., Jan. 30 (Spl.). Funeral services for James Shaw, assistant cashier of the Hughesville bank, were held Sunday at the home of Prof. Frank Coad, at Charlotte Hall, the Rev. Franklin Metcalfe officiating.

Mr. Shaw, a resident of St. Marys County, was buried in the family plot at Shaw's Rest, the family estate near Charlotte Hall

Bill to Carry Virginia Deficit Is Due Today

Senator Weaver Will Offer Plan to Forestall Tax Increases.

Richmond, Va., Jan. 30 (AP).—Senator Aubrey G. Weaver tonight said he will introduce in the General Assembly tomorrow a bill with provisions for carrying legally Virginia's $2,000,000 deficit, "and thus render unnecessary any increase in the tax on merchants, theater owners and others."

"I believe that if the school appropriation, as recommended by Gov. Peery, is to be saved, the deficit will have to be carried, and this the State can do easily," the Senator from Front Royal said.

Senator Weaver today introduced in the Senate a resolution which would prohibit the imposition of any taxes for discharging the deficit sanctioned by the special session of the Assembly last summer with the understanding that the deficit should be taken care of first in the biennial budget to be adopted at this regular session.

Action Deferred One Day.

The resolution ran into difficulty on the floor, and action was deferred until tomorrow. Senator A. P. Staples, of Roanoke, patron of the administration $1,000,000 tax increase program involving incomes, merchants, theaters, utilities, dividends, inheritances, and other items, led the opposition to any action on the resolution today.

In his statement tonight, Senator Weaver said:

"The object of the resolution is to enable the State to carry the deficit rather than to force the imposition of taxes at this time to pay it off. I wanted to obtain some expression from the General Assembly as to how the two bodies felt on the subject.

"In the morning I shall offer a bill amending the existing law so that the deficit can be legally carried, and thus render unnecessary any increase in the tax on merchants, theater owners and others.

State's Credit Good, He Says.

"I believe that if the school appropriation, as recommended by the governor, is to be saved, the deficit will have to be carried, and this the State can do easily.

"In view of Virginia's splendid credit and resources, the amount of the deficit is insignificant and negligible, and, as Senator Garrett, chairman of the Finance Committee, says, it may prove a blessing in disguise."

Senator Garrett made his "blessing in disguise" statement earlier in the day during a meeting of the Senate Finance Committee, when Senator Staples requested an early date be set for the administration tax increase program.

Roosevelt Policies Praised.

Previously the Finance Committee chairman had said he was opposed to raising taxes, even for the discharge of the deficit, "to say nothing of increasing appropriations." It was agreed that a date for the public hearings on the program would be discussed at a joint meeting with the House Appropriations Committee tonight.

Resolutions passed by both houses during the day included one for a session of the Assembly to be held in the restored Colonial Capitol at Williamsburg, February 24, and one in honor of the birthday of President Roosevelt, expressing confidence in his Administration and appreciation of his services.

The Senate Committee on Fish and Game reported favorably a bill by Senator Robert O. Norris, Lancaster, permitting oyster scraping in the Potomac River between November 1 and January 1. The bill, if passed, would not become effective until a similar law is enacted by Maryland. Size of the scrapes would be limited to 40 inches, and dredging would be prohibited.

New Districting Plan.

Richmond, Jan. 30 (Spl.).—With negotiations for Congressional redistricting still perplexing General Assembly committees, a new Eighth District plan was advanced today.

Delegate Wilbur C. Hall, Leesburg, predicted the House privileges and elections committee would sponsor a bill to form an Eighth District annexing Madison, Greene and Albemarle Counties and the city of Charlottesville from the old Seventh District, Goochland County from the third, and Fluvanna from the tenth. Under this proposal, the eighth would retain Arlington, Culpeper, Fairfax, Fauquier, King George, Loudoun, Louisa, Orange, Prince William and Stafford Counties and the City of Alexandria.

"You must remember," Hall cautioned, "the House is master of the situation because all redistricting bills eventually are written by House committees."

Nixon Charged In Boiler Blast

Trial for Manslaughter Ordered at Inquest.

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 30 (Spl.).—Eugene P. Nixon was held yesterday for the April term of the Allegany County Circuit Court on a charge of manslaughter, by the coroner's jury investigating the deaths of Ira Crabtree and Joseph Paul Lechliter from a boiler explosion at the Nixon home on Hill Top drive, January 17.

William R. Harvey, Federal investigator, testified to having discovered the boiler, and declared it was used to operate a still.

Thomas E. Mewshaw, master mechanic, Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, also testified.

In addition to this charge, Nixon is facing Federal charges of operating an unlicensed distillery and possessing liquor on which tax had not been paid. He is also named in a civil suit for damage to the house, which he rented.

Dr. Koon Announces For Cumberland Mayor

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 30 (Spl.). Dr. Thomas W. Koon, who served nine consecutive terms as mayor and then was defeated two years ago by George Henderson, has announced his candidacy for mayor in the coming primary. George W. Legge, attorney, announced several days ago. It is believed they will be the only aspirants.

Dr. Koon promises a 25 per cent reduction in the water rates, should he be elected. He also promises an investigation of the plan to build a municipal power plant, but feels the expenditure of $1,500,000 or $2,000,000 should be decided by a vote of the people.

Obsequies Set Today For Commodore Jacobs

Funeral services will be held in New Market, Md., today for Commodore William V. E. Jacobs, U. S. Coast Guard, retired, who died Monday in Baltimore after a brief illness.

Commodore Jacobs served with the Coast Guard for 40 years. For his service in the Spanish-American War he was awarded the Spanish Campaign Medal and the medal commemorating the naval engagements in the West Indies. He was retired October 23, 1926.

Final Payment Made On Charleston Capitol

Charleston, W. Va., Jan. 30 (Spl.). West Virginia citizens will own their State capitol, free of all indebtedness, February 1. The State auditor's office has mailed to the Chase National Bank in New York a draft for the final payment of $900,000.

The payment has left an overdraft of approximately $800,000 in the building fund. A 5 cent direct levy for the capitol was voted in 1928 for five years, but up to last year the levy fell short of the payment by $1,700,000. This was made up by a bond issue for $2,500,000 a few months ago.

Fire Auxiliary Elects.

Chestertown, Md., Jan. 30 (Spl.). Mrs. Willard Thawley has been elected president of the ladies' auxiliary of the Chestertown Volunteer Fire Company. Other officers are vice president, Mrs. James W. Kirby; secretary, Mrs. Horace Needles, and treasurer, Mrs. James G. Beck.

Mrs. Roosevelt Luncheon Guest Of Mrs. Roper

Wives of Official Group Among Guests at "Sunnyside."

Mrs. Roosevelt was the guest of honor at a luncheon given yesterday by Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, wife of the Secretary of Commerce, in her home, Sunnyside, on Woodland drive. The drawing room was artistically decorated with pink camillia, which had been sent from South Carolina, and pink roses and calla lilies. The luncheon table had a charming centerpiece of spring flowers, with yellow and purple blooms predominating.

The guests were Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, Mme. de Laboulaye, wife of the Ambassador of France; Mrs. James F. Byrnes, Representative Isabella Greenway, Mrs. Charles F. Hamlin, Mrs. Hugh C. Wallace, Mrs. Oscar W. Underwood, Mrs. Cary T. Grayson, Mrs. Russell William Magna, Mrs. Vance McCormick, Mrs. William Phillips, Mrs. H. O. Chalkley, Miss Sidney Burleson and Mrs. David R. Coker and Miss Grace Roper, daughters of the Secretary and Mrs. Roper.

Society Shows Eager Interest In Bal Boheme

Many Boxes Are Reserved For Leading Event of Series.

Official, diplomatic and residential society is responding with alacrity to the invitation to become patrons and patronesses for the forthcoming Bal Boheme of the Arts Club of Washington at the Hotel Willard on Shrove Tuesday, February 13, at 10 o'clock. Just as Shrove Tuesday is the high point of the social season in Washington, so will the Bal Boheme be the high point in the series of winter balls here.

Recent additions to the list of patrons and patronesses include Mrs. George H. Dern, wife of the Secretary of War, who with other ladies of the Cabinet will occupy a box adjacent to that to be held for Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, the chief of patronesses for this season's Bal Boheme.

Other well-known men and women who are on this list are the Minister of Yugoslavia, Dr. Leonide Pitamic; Mme. Marc Peter, wife of the Minister of Switzerland; Mrs. C. J. W. Torr, wife of the First Secretary of the British Embassy; the Assistant Secretary of War and Mrs. Harry H. Woodring, and Senator Arthur Capper.

Also Miss Mary B. Adams, Mrs. John M. Biddle, Mrs. Guy Despard Goff, Miss Elizabeth Guggenheim, Mrs. Beale R. Howard, Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose, Mrs. James R. Mann, Mrs. C. Powell Minnigerode, Mrs. Robert L. O'Brien, Miss Grace Roper, daughter of the Secretary of Commerce, and Mrs. Daniel Roper, Mrs. Alfred Pembroke Thom, and Maj. and Mrs. George Oakley Totten.

Boxes are being taken rapidly by well-known patrons of the arts in the Capital. It is planned by the committee to place tickets on sale to the public this week at the leading hotels. Mrs. Ridgely Chapline, assisted by a group of Arts Club members is in charge of tickets for the public. Mrs. Theodore J. Pickett is chairman of boxes for the Bal Boheme.

Maryland Society To Dance Tonight

The Maryland Society will give a dance at the Kennedy-Warren this evening. The dance will be preceded by an entertainment beginning at 8:30 o'clock, featured by the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. Glee Club, R. H. Davidson directing, and Mrs. Helen Turley, contralto.

The program will open with "Jerusalem Morning" and "Home on the Range," sung by the club. Mrs. Turley will sing "The Nightingales at Lincoln's Inn," "The Bells of St. Mary's," with the glee club, and as a finale, "Maryland! My Maryland!"

Miss Marian Wolberg, winner of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer-Fox competition of 10,000 entrants; Miss Betty Raymond and Miss Mary Margaret Edmonston, acrobatic dancers, will also appear.

Mr. George H. Calvert, jr., president of the society, and Mrs. Calvert will receive, assisted by Mr. and Mrs. John Ritchie, jr., the Assistant to the Attorney General and Mrs. William Stanley, the Dean of the University of Maryland and Mrs. Thomas Hardy Taliaferro, Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur W. Hubbard, Rear Admiral Charles H. Lowndes, U. S. N.; Mrs. Elizabeth Worthington Trescot, Maj. William Bowie, Mrs. John Mason Brown and Commander and Mrs. C. B. Platt.

Miss Hardman Becomes Bride Of Mr. Collins, NRA Official

Former Georgia Governor Gives His Daughter in Marriage.

The wedding of Miss Josephine Staten Hardman, daughter of the former Governor of Georgia, Mr. Lamartine Griffin Hardman and Mrs. Hardman, to Mr. Linton McGee Collins, of Washington and Miami, Fla., took place last evening at the First Baptist Church in Commerce, Ga. The Rev. Dr. Luther Rice Christin, of Louisville, Ky., performed the ceremony in the presence of a fashionable assemblage of Southern society.

The church was decorted with palms, foliage plants, smilax and calla lillies.

The bridesmaids and groomsmen entered in pairs, the former wearing gowns fashioned alike of gold-colored satin featuring the becoming cowl neckline in front and the low, deep V-shape in the back. The skirts of the gowns were fitted to the figures to the knees, from where they flared into extravagant fullness and terminated into slight trains at the back. The bridesmaids carried bouquets of American Beauty roses tied with ribbon to match.

The bridesmaids included Miss Emma Hardman, the bride's younger sister; Miss Eloise Parker, of Columbs, Ga.; Miss Dorthy Shell, of Bainbridge Ga.; Miss Katherine Jones, of Red Star, W. Va.; Miss Grace Hood and Mrs. Paul Scoggins, of Commerce, Ga.

Miss Sue Hardman Maid of Honor.

Miss Sue Colquitt Hardman, another sister of the bride, acted as maid of honor, and Mrs. Mack Barnes, of Waycross, Ga., was the matron of honor. They wore gowns like those worn by the bridesmaids and also carried American Beauty roses tied with matching ribbons.

Acting as groomsmen were Mr. E. C. Collins, jr., of Miami, the bridegroom's brother; Mr. L. G. Hardman, jr., of Commerce, the bride's brother; Mr. J. Morgan Glover and Mr. Joe Sears, jr., of Jacksonville, Fla.; Mr. Fred B. Harnett, of Miami, and Herbert Pettey, of Washington. The ushers included Mr. Earl R. Collins, of New Orleans, Mr. Henry Dooley, of Miami; Mr. Hewitt Troy and Mr. Fred Roper, of Washington; Mr. J. B. Hardman, Mrs. T. C. Hardman, Dr. A. A. Rogers and Mr. C. J. Hood, of Commerce.

Preceding the bride and bridegroom to the altar was the ring bearer, Master Earl Collins, jr., nephew of the bridegroom, who bore the ring on a small white satin pillow and was attired in a white satin suit.

The bride descended the long isle with her father, Dr. Lamartine G. Hardman, by whom she was given in marriage. They were joined at the altar by the bridegroom and his father, Judge E. C. Collins, of Miami, who acted as best man. The bride was wearing a gown of ivory satin, the stately lines modeling her slender figure and forming a long, graceful train. The veil or rose point lace was held in place by tiny orange blossom buds, and fell to the end of the train.

Couple to Reside In Washington.

Immediately after the ceremony Dr. and Mrs. Hardman, the bride's parents, entertained at a reception in their home, at which they were assisted in receiving by the bride the bridegroom, wedding attendants, and Judge and Mrs. E. C. Collins, of Miami, the bridegroom's parents.

Mrs. Hardman was handsomely gowned in aquamarine satin and wore a shoulder cluster of orchids and valley lilies. Mrs. Collins' gown was fashioned of powder pink lace and her shoulder bouquet was of orchids and valley lilies.

Mr. Collins and his bride left in the late evening for a wedding trip, the bride wearing a tailored costume of loosely woven wool in the modish rhumba shade. Her straw hat and other accessories were of brown. They will come to Washington to make their home. The bridegroom is an administrative assistant in charge of personnel of the NRA.

Mountain Fire Fought 2 Days As Gale Rages

Waynesboro, Va., Jan. 30 (Spl.).—One of the worst forest fires in this vicinity in many years finally was brought under control by 400 fire fighters, after a 48-hour battle. The fire was confined to the Shenandoah National Park area around Jarmans Gap, and hundreds of acres of the mountain forest were destroyed.

Mrs. William Plummer, on the Jarmans Gap road, discovered the blaze and notified Gray Barnhart, chief fire warden. The Grottoes CCC camp personnel also were summoned as a high wind swept the flames along over a 5-mile front.

It is believed a cigarette tossed from a car which passed shortly before the fire was discovered caused the conflagration.

The center of the blaze was only six miles from here, and last night the glow from the mountainside was reflected over the city, while the wind swept clouds of smoke overhead during the day.

Citizens Stop Forest Fire.

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 30 (Spl.).—A forest fire which was discovered on South Mountain near the Gen. Reno Monument, was brought under control yesterday by residents of the district who turned out and fought it. It was the first fire of any consequence since CCC workers have been on the job.

Building Destroyed.

Martinsville, Va., Jan. 30 (Spl.). Fire destroyed a frame structure near the home of J. M. Berry, local boxing promoter, used as training quarters for several of Berry's young boxing proteges. Quick work of firemen saved the Berry home.

Lexington Home Damaged.

Lexington, Va., Jan. 30 (Spl.). The home of Ulysses Fisher was damaged by fire and water yesterday. A vulcanizing shop, operated by Joe Weeks in the same building, was also damaged.

Hero Held in Barn Blaze.

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 30 (Spl.).—Trailed into a densely wooded tract by bloodhounds, Willie Self, Stafford war veteran once cited for heroism, is under arrest in Spotsylvania County on an incendiarism charge of burning of a barn on the farm of Moody Poates, six miles east of here on the Tidewater Trail. When found a mile from the scene five hours afterward, beside the fragments of a jar which he said had contained liquor, Self vigorously protested his innocence.

McCue Poises Ax Over Road Police

Bill to Reduce Virginia Force by Half Planned.

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 30 (Spl.). Delegate E. O. McCue, jr., of this city, visiting here between sessions of the Virginia General Assembly, said he intended to introduce in the House a bill to cut the personnel of the State highway police force by half. There are approximately 100 officers on the force now and Mr. McCue contends the work they do does not compensate the State for the cost of upkeep.

McCue holds that much of their highway work can be done by the sheriffs and deputies of the various counties.

"Why have two sets of police?" he inquires. Reduction of the size of "the great white fleet" was one of the planks of the platform on which he led the Albemarle ticket.

Mrs. Ann Kilmer Succumbs at 90

Berkeley County's Oldest Woman Buried.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Jan. 30 (Spl.).—Funeral services were conducted here today for Mrs. Ann Elizabeth Kilmer, 90, the oldest woman resident of the county, who died Sunday morning at the Kilmer country homestead, Elmdale.

She was born in Berkeley County, a daughter of John D. and Susan Cushwa, and spent most of her life within the county. She is survived by a son, Clarence B.; a daughter, Miss Eva L. Kilmer, and a sister, Mrs. Mollie Rentch, all of the county.

350-Gallon Still And Man Seized

Largest Found in Years Taken at State Line.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Jan. 30 (Spl.). — A 350-gallon moonshine still, the largest confiscated in this section in several years, was seized by State and local officers over the week-end, near Brush Run, along the Virginia-West Virginia border, and brought here.

Joe Dan Clark was arrested, but a companion escaped. Clark was released under $1,000 bail.

The still was "purring," officers said, when they descended. A stream of liquor as thick as a man's finger was being produced.

Rev. G. V. Gocke Goes To Bluefield Church

Clarksburg, W. Va., Jan. 30 (Spl.). Announcement is made by the Rev. J. J. Swint, Catholic Bishop of West Virginia, of assignment of the Rev. G. V. Gocke, Charleston, as rector of the Sacred Heart Church at Bluefield.

Father Gocke has lately been diocesan director of Catholic missionary work in West Virginia. He will succeed the Very Rev. W. M. Burke, resigned because of ill health.

Moving

Various Offices in Danville Shifted This Week.

Danville, Va., Jan. 30 (Spl.). This week is official moving week here.

The office of the deputy clerk of the court was moved yesterday. The crop loan office, census office and commissioner's office were moved one block up the street today.

The Postal force is moving into the new postoffice, which will be in full operation Monday.

Police Seize 2, Find Explosive

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 30 (Spl.). Police who captured a man after wounding him at the office of the Coca Cola company here, where they said he was preparing to crack the safe, have no further clew to his identity than his own statement identifying himself as George Vincent, 54.

Photographs and fingerprints were sent to the Department of Justice at Washington yesterday.

Vincent had registered under the same name at the Federal Transient Bureau here several days before his arrest. A bottle containing 2 ounces of nitroglycerine was found buried near the bottling plant. His clothing bore tags from stores in several Pennsylvania cities. He told police he was born in Johnstown, Pa., and that his family had met death in the Johnstown flood of 1889. He also admitted serving a short term in Frederick for vagrancy. Vincent was held for the grand jury on a burglary charge.

Another man captured at the same time and who gave the name of A. J. Jones said he became acquainted with Vincent only a few days before the attempted safe-cracking.

The police poured the nitroglycerine into Antietam Creek yesterday.

Frostburg Bank Opens Tomorrow

$365,000 to Be Available to Depositors.

Frostburg, Md., Jan. 30 (Spl.). The Frostburg National Bank, which succeeds the old Citizens National Bank, will open for business Thursday, Thomas B. Finan, receiver, said yesterday.

The Citizens' National Bank has been closed since the bank holiday. There are about 3,000 depositors to whom $365,000 will be made available.

Officers of the new bank are William Jenkins, president; I. Dale Snodgrass, cashier, and Herbert E. Loar, assistant cashier. Mr. Snodgrass is a former Federal Bank examiner. Miss Velma Neal and Miss Emma Simons will be retained by the new bank. The directors are William Jenkins, Dr. James C. Cobey, Judge Edward J. Donohoe, Postmaster R. Hilary Lancaster, and Earl Kreitzburg. The new bank occupies the building of the old Citizens National Bank.

Man Dies Pushing Cold Automobile

Virginia Farmer Succumbs to Heart Attack.

Staunton, Va., Jan. 30 (Spl.).—The near zero temperature yesterday indirectly caused the death of Camden L. Coyner, 69, farmer of the Lyndhurst section, who died of a heart attack induced when he pushed his automobile in an effort to start it.

With his wife, Mr. Coyner had been visiting in Waynesboro, where he collapsed on the sidewalk and died. Doctors said overexertion caused the heart attack. The funeral will be held at Grace Lutheran Church, Waynesboro, tomorrow, conducted by the Rev. R. Homer Anderson, of Lynchburg.

Mr. Coyner is survived by his widow, two brothers, M. F. Coyner, of Swoope; J. N. Coyner, of Vermont, Ill., and a sister, Mrs. Calvin East, of Beatrice, Nebr.

Charlottesville Merchants Rap Sales Tax Plan

Urge State Economies for Saving Needed Funds in Resolutions.

Charlottesville, Jan. 30 (Spl.). "We believe proper economies in the government of Virginia will obviate the necessity for any increase in taxes," the Retail Merchants Association here declared yesterday in resoultions protesting the proposed sales tax. The resolution added:

"Taxes should not be increased but necessary funds can be realized by reducing governmental expenditures to the minimum and by rigidly enforcing already existing tax laws."

Estimating that license taxes would be greatly increased—in some instances 100 per cent—the association said:

"Many merchants who are now holding on with difficulty, in the hope of being able to pass over the crisis, will be forced out of business by such an increase."

The attack was aimed directly at Virginia Senate bill No. 123, which would change the tax on purchases to a tax on sales.

Such a tax was branded as "unfair because it does not take into consideration any difference in the classes of retail business; the ratio and amount of turnover in inventory; the variations in the increase of sales price over cost price; freight charged on different classes of goods; and general overhead—all of which affect the sales prices of goods on which the tax would be based."

Work Near End On Pipe Organ

Capital Army Officer Will Have Second Largest in Country.

Waynesboro, Va., Jan. 30 (Spl.). The console and working parts for the second largest privately owned pipe organ in America are rapidly nearing completion in an organ factory here, and will be ready for installation this week. The organ is being built for an Army officer in Washington, who has requested that his name be withheld.

It is being built by August Klann, German-born organ builder of international fame, and two Belgian experts, who furnished all important working parts of the world's largest organ at Atlantic City.

The console is of black walnut, beautifully carved and finished.

Funeral Services Today For James R. Sites, 79

Waynesboro, Pa., Jan. 30 (Spl.). The funeral of James R. Sites, 79, a retired farmer, will be held at Brown's Mill Church tomorrow at 10 a. m.

Mr. Sites suffered an attack of vertigo and fell into a spring. His body was found by Noble Sites, a distant relative.

George W. Hill Dies; Insurance Firm Head

Clarksburg, W. Va., Jan. 30 (Spl.). George W. Hill, 73, president of the Conservative Life Insurance Co. of Wheeling, died at his home at Sistersville, following an operation for appendicitis. The widow and two daughters survive.

Peg-Leg Calf

Heifer Gets Along Nicely, Apparently Contented.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Jan. 30 (Spl.). What is believed to be West Virginia's only peglegged heifer is owned by Paul Feathers, of Albright.

"Peggy" originally was owned by Wilbur Lenhart, of Crab Orchard, who sold her to Dallas Elliott, of Albright. The calf tried to return to her old home, became entangled in some vines and fell over a cliff, breaking a leg.

Elliott attempted to set the bones, but the calf walked before the fracture healed. The owner then amputated the leg and manufactured a peg leg for her. She has used it ever since getting alone all right, and apparently is a contented young cow.

"Pool" Probe On CWA Begun In W. Virginia

Mrs. Erma Hyer Charged With Favoring G. O. P. Workers.

Charleston, W. Va., Jan. 30 (Spl.). Expecting its sittings to last several days, a special committee of the State House of Delegates late today began a hearing at Sutton into the charges of political preference and nepotism against Mrs. Erma Hyer, administrator, and other CWA officials of Braxton County.

The charges set forth that Mrs. Hyer, a Republican, has been inclined to hire only Republicans for CWA jobs; that the Braxton CWA board is made up almost exclusively of Republicans, although a Democratic County; and that Mrs. Hyer and others gave preference to relatives.

Vernon Hall, a member of the CWA committee in charge of personnel for relief jobs, was on the stand today, averring that he had not attended a meeting at which a number of employes were laid off.

Edward Humphrey, a project foreman, was also examined as to the number of men now working and formerly working on his project.

Caroline County Gets First Health Officer

Denton, Md., Jan. 30 (Spl.).—Caroline County, the only Maryland County which has not employed a full-time public health officer, now has a public health physician in the person of Dr. Louis S. Welty, former assistant officer of Anne Arundel.

Dr. Welty, who will devote his time to preventive medicine, is a graduate of Amherst College and of Johns Hopkins Medical School. He was formerly connected with the University of Chicago Hospital and was resident physician at Beebe Hospital, Lewes, Del.

Rites for James Shaw, Hughesville Bank Aid

Leonardtown, Md., Jan. 30 (Spl.). Funeral services for James Shaw, assistant cashier of the Hughesville bank, were held Sunday at the home of Prof. Frank Coad, at Charlotte Hall, the Rev. Franklin Metcalfe officiating.

Mr. Shaw, a resident of St. Marys County, was buried in the family plot at Shaw's Rest, the family estate near Charlotte Hall

Senator Weaver Will Offer Plan to Forestall Tax Increases.

Richmond, Va., Jan. 30 (AP).—Senator Aubrey G. Weaver tonight said he will introduce in the General Assembly tomorrow a bill with provisions for carrying legally Virginia's $2,000,000 deficit, "and thus render unnecessary any increase in the tax on merchants, theater owners and others."

"I believe that if the school appropriation, as recommended by Gov. Peery, is to be saved, the deficit will have to be carried, and this the State can do easily," the Senator from Front Royal said.

Senator Weaver today introduced in the Senate a resolution which would prohibit the imposition of any taxes for discharging the deficit sanctioned by the special session of the Assembly last summer with the understanding that the deficit should be taken care of first in the biennial budget to be adopted at this regular session.

Action Deferred One Day.

The resolution ran into difficulty on the floor, and action was deferred until tomorrow. Senator A. P. Staples, of Roanoke, patron of the administration $1,000,000 tax increase program involving incomes, merchants, theaters, utilities, dividends, inheritances, and other items, led the opposition to any action on the resolution today.

In his statement tonight, Senator Weaver said:

"The object of the resolution is to enable the State to carry the deficit rather than to force the imposition of taxes at this time to pay it off. I wanted to obtain some expression from the General Assembly as to how the two bodies felt on the subject.

"In the morning I shall offer a bill amending the existing law so that the deficit can be legally carried, and thus render unnecessary any increase in the tax on merchants, theater owners and others.

State's Credit Good, He Says.

"I believe that if the school appropriation, as recommended by the governor, is to be saved, the deficit will have to be carried, and this the State can do easily.

"In view of Virginia's splendid credit and resources, the amount of the deficit is insignificant and negligible, and, as Senator Garrett, chairman of the Finance Committee, says, it may prove a blessing in disguise."

Senator Garrett made his "blessing in disguise" statement earlier in the day during a meeting of the Senate Finance Committee, when Senator Staples requested an early date be set for the administration tax increase program.

Roosevelt Policies Praised.

Previously the Finance Committee chairman had said he was opposed to raising taxes, even for the discharge of the deficit, "to say nothing of increasing appropriations." It was agreed that a date for the public hearings on the program would be discussed at a joint meeting with the House Appropriations Committee tonight.

Resolutions passed by both houses during the day included one for a session of the Assembly to be held in the restored Colonial Capitol at Williamsburg, February 24, and one in honor of the birthday of President Roosevelt, expressing confidence in his Administration and appreciation of his services.

The Senate Committee on Fish and Game reported favorably a bill by Senator Robert O. Norris, Lancaster, permitting oyster scraping in the Potomac River between November 1 and January 1. The bill, if passed, would not become effective until a similar law is enacted by Maryland. Size of the scrapes would be limited to 40 inches, and dredging would be prohibited.

New Districting Plan.

Richmond, Jan. 30 (Spl.).—With negotiations for Congressional redistricting still perplexing General Assembly committees, a new Eighth District plan was advanced today.

Delegate Wilbur C. Hall, Leesburg, predicted the House privileges and elections committee would sponsor a bill to form an Eighth District annexing Madison, Greene and Albemarle Counties and the city of Charlottesville from the old Seventh District, Goochland County from the third, and Fluvanna from the tenth. Under this proposal, the eighth would retain Arlington, Culpeper, Fairfax, Fauquier, King George, Loudoun, Louisa, Orange, Prince William and Stafford Counties and the City of Alexandria.

"You must remember," Hall cautioned, "the House is master of the situation because all redistricting bills eventually are written by House committees."

Nixon Charged In Boiler Blast

Trial for Manslaughter Ordered at Inquest.

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 30 (Spl.).—Eugene P. Nixon was held yesterday for the April term of the Allegany County Circuit Court on a charge of manslaughter, by the coroner's jury investigating the deaths of Ira Crabtree and Joseph Paul Lechliter from a boiler explosion at the Nixon home on Hill Top drive, January 17.

William R. Harvey, Federal investigator, testified to having discovered the boiler, and declared it was used to operate a still.

Thomas E. Mevishaw, master mechanic, Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, also testified.

In addition to this charge, Nixon is facing Federal charges of operating an unlicensed distillery and possessing liquor on which tax had not been paid. He is also named in a civil suit for damage to the house, which he rented.

Dr. Koon Announces For Cumberland Mayor

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 30 (Spl.). Dr. Thomas W. Koon, who served nine consecutive terms as mayor and then was defeated two years ago by George Henderson, has announced his candidacy for mayor in the coming primary. George W. Legge, attorney, announced several days ago. It is believed they will be the only aspirants.

Dr. Koon promises a 25 per cent reduction in the water rates, should he be elected. He also promises an investigation of the plan to build a municipal power plant, but feels the expenditure of $1,500,000 or $2,000,000 should be decided by a vote of the people.

Obsequies Set Today For Commodore Jacobs

Funeral services will be held in New Market, Md., today for Commodore William V. E. Jacobs, U. S. Coast Guard, retired, who died Monday in Baltimore after a brief illness.

Commodore Jacobs served with the Coast Guard for 40 years. For his service in the Spanish-American War he was awarded the Spanish Campaign Medal and the medal commemorating the naval engagements in the West Indies. He was retired October 23, 1926.

Final Payment Made On Charleston Capitol

Charleston, W. Va., Jan. 30 (Spl.). West Virginia citizens will own their State capitol, free of all indebtedness, February 1. The State auditor's office has mailed to the Chase National Bank in New York a draft for the final payment of $900,000.

The payment has left an overdraft of approximately $800,000 in the building fund. A 5 cent direct levy for the capitol was voted in 1928 for five years, but up to last year the levy fell short of the payment by $1,700,000. This was made up by a bond issue for $2,500,000 a few months ago.

Fire Auxiliary Elects.

Chestertown, Md., Jan. 30 (Spl.). Mrs. Willard Thawley has been elected president of the ladies' auxiliary of the Chestertown Volunteer Fire Company. Other officers are vice president, Mrs. James W. Kirby; secretary, Mrs. Horace Needles, and treasurer, Mrs. James G. Beck.

Society Shows Eager Interest In Bal Boheme

Many Boxes Are Reserved For Leading Event of Series.

Official, diplomatic and residential society is responding with alacrity to the invitation to become patrons and patronesses for the forthcoming Bal Boheme of the Arts Club of Washington at the Hotel Willard on Shrove Tuesday, February 13, at 10 o'clock. Just as Shrove Tuesday is the high point of the social season in Washington, so will the Bal Boheme be the high point in the series of winter balls here.

Recent additions to the list of patrons and patronesses include Mrs. George H. Dern, wife of the Secretary of War, who with other ladies of the Cabinet will occupy a box adjacent to that to be held for Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, the chief of patronesses for this season's Bal Boheme.

Other well-known men and women who are on this list are the Minister of Yugoslavia, Dr. Leonide Pitamic; Mme. Marc Peter, wife of the Minister of Switzerland; Mrs. C. J. W. Torr, wife of the First Secretary of the British Embassy; the Assistant Secretary of War and Mrs. Harry H. Woodring, and Senator Arthur Capper.

Also Miss Mary B. Adams, Mrs. John M. Biddle, Mrs. Guy Despard Goff, Miss Elizabeth Guggenheim, Mrs. Beale R. Howard, Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose, Mrs. James R. Mann, Mrs. C. Powell Minnigerode, Mrs. Robert L. O'Brien, Miss Grace Roper, daughter of the Secretary of Commerce, and Mrs. Daniel Roper, Mrs. Alfred Pembroke Thom, and Maj. and Mrs. George Oakley Totten.

Boxes are being taken rapidly by well-known patrons of the arts in the Capital. It is planned by the committee to place tickets on sale to the public this week at the leading hotels. Mrs. Ridgely Chapline, assisted by a group of Arts Club members is in charge of tickets for the public. Mrs. Theodore J. Pickett is chairman of boxes for the Bal Boheme.

Maryland Society To Dance Tonight

The Maryland Society will give a dance at the Kennedy-Warren this evening. The dance will be preceded by an entertainment beginning at 8:30 o'clock, featured by the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. Glee Club, R. H. Davidson directing, and Mrs. Helen Turley, contralto.

The program will open with "Jerusalem Morning" and "Home on the Range," sung by the club. Mrs. Turley will sing "The Nightingales at Lincoln's Inn," "The Bells of St. Mary's," with the glee club, and as a finale, "Maryland! My Maryland!"

Miss Marian Wolberg, winner of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer-Fox competition of 10,000 entrants; Miss Betty Raymond and Miss Mary Margaret Edmonston, acrobatic dancers, will also appear.

Mr. George H. Calvert, jr., president of the society, and Mrs. Calvert will receive, assisted by Mr. and Mrs. John Ritchie, jr., the Assistant to the Attorney General and Mrs. William Stanley, the Dean of the University of Maryland and Mrs. Thomas Hardy Taliaferro, Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur W. Miss Hardman Becomes Bride Of Mr. Collins, NRA Official

Former Georgia Governor Gives His Daughter in Marriage.

The wedding of Miss Josephine Staten Hardman, daughter of the former Governor of Georgia, Mr. Lamartine Griffin Hardman and Mrs. Hardman, to Mr. Linton McGee Collins, of Washington and Miami, Fla., took place last evening at the First Baptist Church in Commerce, Ga. The Rev. Dr. Luther Rice Christin, of Louisville, Ky., performed the ceremony in the presence of a fashionable assemblage of Southern society.

The church was decorted with palms, foliage plants, smilax and calla lillies.

The bridesmaids and groomsmen entered in pairs, the former wearing gowns fashioned alike of gold-colored satin featuring the becoming cowl neckline in front and the low, deep V-shape in the back. The skirts of the gowns were fitted to the figures to the knees, from where they flared into extravagant fullness and terminated into slight trains at the back. The bridesmaids carried bouquets of American Beauty roses tied with ribbon to match.

The bridesmaids included Miss Emma Hardman, the bride's younger sister; Miss Eloise Parker, of Columbs, Ga.; Miss Dorthy Shell, of Bainbridge Ga.; Miss Katherine Jones, of Red Star, W. Va.; Miss Grace Hood and Mrs. Paul Scoggins, of Commerce, Ga.

Miss Sue Hardman Maid of Honor.

Miss Sue Colquitt Hardman, another sister of the bride, acted as maid of honor, and Mrs. Mack Barnes, of Waycross, Ga., was the matron of honor. They wore gowns like those worn by the bridesmaids and also carried American Beauty roses tied with matching ribbons.

Acting as groomsmen were Mr. E. C. Collins, jr., of Miami, the bridegroom's brother; Mr. L. G. Hardman, jr., of Commerce, the bride's brother; Mr. J. Morgan Glover and Mr. Joe Sears, jr., of Jacksonville, Fla.; Mr. Fred B. Harnett, of Miami, and Herbert Pettey, of Washington. The ushers included Mr. Earl R. Collins, of New Orleans, Mr. Henry Dooley, of Miami; Mr. Hewitt Troy and Mr. Fred Roper, of Washington; Mr. J. B. Hardman, Mrs. T. C. Hardman, Dr. A. A. Rogers and Mr. C. J. Hood, of Commerce.

Preceding the bride and bridegroom to the altar was the ring bearer, Master Earl Collins, jr., nephew of the bridegroom, who bore the ring on a small white satin pillow and was attired in a white satin suit.

The bride descended the long isle with her father, Dr. Lamartine G. Hardman, by whom she was given in marriage. They were joined at the altar by the bridegroom and his father, Judge E. C. Collins, of Miami, who acted as best man. The bride was wearing a gown of ivory satin, the stately lines modeling her slender figure and forming a long, graceful train. The veil or rose point lace was held in place by tiny orange blossom buds, and fell to the end of the train.

Couple to Reside In Washington.

Immediately after the ceremony Dr. and Mrs. Hardman, the bride's parents, entertained at a reception in their home, at which they were assisted in receiving by the bride the bridegroom, wedding attendants, and Judge and Mrs. E. C. Collins, of Miami, the bridegroom's parents.

Mrs. Hardman was handsomely gowned in aquamarine satin and wore a shoulder cluster of orchids and valley lilies. Mrs. Collins' gown was fashioned of powder pink lace and her shoulder bouquet was of orchids and valley lilies.

Mr. Collins and his bride left in the late evening for a wedding trip, the bride wearing a tailored costume of loosely woven wool in the modish rhumba shade. Her straw hat and other accessories were of brown. They will come to Washington to make their home. The bridegroom is an administrative assistant in charge of personnel of the NRA.

Test Tube Blast Creates New Skin Softener

Chemist's Mishap Leads to Discovery of Liquid Wrinkle Remover.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

A German chemist was working in his New York laboratories when a test tube exploded in his hand. Fearing a severe burn would result he thrust the hand into a bowl of liquid he had been working on earlier in the day. The result was startling. The skin on his hand became smooth and soft. There was no sign of the usual wrinkles. The chemist confessed his surprise and told a number of his friends what had happened.

His best friend's wife asked permission to try it herself. The results were so completely satisfactory that she in turn gave the preparation to other friends to try. At length the chemist was persuaded to manufacture the preparation and sell it.

That was several years ago. With this one liquid he became known far and wide among women who could afford to take excellent care of themselves. Lately he has also put a creamy substance on the market which is a special preparation for dry skins. It is guaranteed to restore a skin of this type to normality.

Besides these two products he has put out a cleansing cream. A normal skin with the skin stimulator and the cream has all it requires to retain its healthy look.

One of the newest methods of abolishing the stale odor of dead cigarette and cigar butts is the ash tray fillers displayed by a downtown store.

They look very much like the paper cups used for ice cream dishes, but these have been chemically treated to deodorize stale tobacco.

Fillers of this sort should always be kept on hand to be used at dinner parties, bridges, teas and luncheons.

The bright striped taffeta blouses which are being featured in a local shop for chic spring wear are as serviceable as they are attractive. The minute they show the slightest soil they can be put into a tub of soap and water and scrubbed clean.

For spring and summer wear we'll find that anything we can clean ourselves will prove most satisfactory. These blouses are a myriad of colors running lengthwise in narrow stripes. They'll be particularly attractive with solid skirts. During the chill spells we still have ahead of us, we'll find a brigat blouse will be a gay relief with our darker skirts, and we'll find as the season advances that we can wear them with any number of our light skirts.

A local gift shop has just received some anchor lamps, which were manufactured by a man who makes a specialty of handling furnishings for men's bedrooms and dens. He has trained himself to know just what takes the masculine fancy, to create an attractive ornament but one which no man will complain "clutters up" his sancutary. As a result, when women have to shop for husbands, brothers, sons, sweethearts, they can seek out an object put out by this man and feel confident they are getting something which will please.

These lamps have a shiny brass base with a rope twisted around it, tied on to an anchor. The shade is a lovely deep parchment, with an attractive ship scene painted on it.

Candlesticks to match the lamp are also available.

The blubs and buds and all the green things that surreptitiously peep forth from their hiding places in the spring are keeping out of sight. But other harbingers are bolder and are making themselves known on all sides. Among these is the spring jewelry. One shop has some made completely of seed pearls. It can be bought in the plain pearl color or in regular bouquet combinations.

There are pins which look like a colorful assortment of flowers, most of them no larger than a pin's head. And there are earrings, bracelets, and necklaces, all of them offering a wide range of choice.

Jewelry of this sort is dainty enough to grace the most feminine frock; its colors are the vivid touches which will admirably set off the dark frock.

For short trips, a hurried run to New York, an overnight "vacation," it's always well to be prepared with a few essential medicines. But it's a nuisance to clutter up one's baggage. However, the medicine case would be no bother at all and comes fully equipped with five bottles, gauze, cotton, tape and a pair of tweezers.

Large folios ornamental enough to be left lying on the library table may be the very things an erstwhile traveler needs to hold the prints and pictures he has picked up hither, thither and yon.

They are made of lovely Florentine hand-tooled leather, colored in deep rich tones. The lining is firmly put on, and made of a high quality of tapestry.

Fair Refuge From Russian Revolution Here As Designer to Smartest Dressed of Women

Underwood & Underwood.

MME. MAROUSSIA KRCHIVITSKY.

The road to independence and to America revealed itself to Mme. Maroussia Krchivitsky, high-born Russian, the day that she—a tattered refugee from the Red revolution—sat down to turn the cloth of a disgraceful looking 10-year-old blue coat.

That was in Helsingfors, Finland, nearly 15 years ago.

Today, in the smartest of clothes of her own designing, she divides her time between Washington, Boston and New York, advising members of diplomatic and resident society on what to wear, and creating for them garments inspired by their personalities and activities.

It was a long road over which she came. Tragic at times, but in retrospect, and as Mme. Krchivitsky tells it, it has its comic aspects.

Own Maid First Patron.

Her first customer was Sonia, her former personal maid.

Sonia, by virtue of a position as nurse maid in a wealthy family in Helsingfors, had become "a very grand lady" in the time Mme. Krchivitsky's fortunes waned with the ebb of imperial power in Russia.

Wasted with illness and grief—her husband was executed by the revolutionists—Mme. Krchivitsky had made her way out of Russia to her mother's home in Helsingfors. Here, as her strength returned she became dissatisfied—woman like—with the state of her wardrobe.

"I had always been tidy about my things," she told The Post reporter who called on her yesterday at her room in the Martinique Hotel, where she was stopping on one of her flying visits to Washington.

"I felt so miserable about that old coat of mine," she said. "It had been a beautiful coat from London, but it had been worn in every weather, and it was green and brown and yellow in spots. I thought to turn the other side and make it look more smart."

While she was turning the coat with inexpert fingers which had never so much as sewn a button on a glove in her sheltered years, madame's former maid, Sonia, came in with her two small charges.

She exclaimed rapturously over madame's skill, and begged her to consider the making of a nurse's uniform for herself.

"At that time I had $1 in savings. It was all my capital. I had never in my life made a dress. But I accepted the commission and bought blue and white checked cotton with the dollar.

"For three days and three nights I labored on the uniform, which was a skirt and a separate blouse. I took apart an old dress of mine and used it for the pattern.

"When Sonia came for the uniform, I was frightened to death lest she say, 'What? Is this the dress?' If she refused to accept it, my career would be at an end. As I have said, all my capital was engaged.

First Profit 20 Cents.

"She accepted it, and afterward told me that she almost cried to see the fear in my face as I showed her the uniform. I charged her $1.20. The 20 cents was for my work. That was the start of everything."

Through friends, Mme. Krchivitsky obtained her second commission—to make the uniforms for a graduating class of 20 nurses in a Helsingfors hospital.

Madame tackled it, with only a momentary qualm; that of making the myriads of buttonholes down the fronts. She got through it successfully.

And then she began to dream of a career in America. She decided to go first to Paris, and use it as "a jumping board for New York." Her friends laughed at her ambition as "impossible."

But she proved them wrong by engaging passage for France on an ancient freight boat which, after 50 years of seagoing, was making its last voyage. She was ten days on the ocean to Antwerp. Endless other days intervened before she reached Cherbourg.

But in six months, Mme. Krchivitsky had assembled through her own efforts a hand-made collection of 20 Paris-inspired gowns. Giving the two beautiful shawls to the sisters who had been kind to her, she made a triumphant return to Finland, and set about gowning the smartest women in Helsingfors.

The wedding of the Crown Prince of Sweden gave her her first big opportunity. She created gowns for 10 wedding guests, and her fame was established in northern Europe.

In 1929, she returned again to Paris, and this time did, indeed, use it as the springboard for an excursion to America, arriving here almost simultaneously with the histotric stock market crash.

In America she found friends, some of whom had known her in her luxurious girlhood in Russia; others who had watched with interest and pride her arduous struggle for recognition as a dress designer in Paris and Helsingfors.

Her Ambition in America.

Among these was Mme. Bachke, wife of the Minister of Norway.

"They were tremendously kind, these friends," said Mme. Krchivitsky. "They did everything for me. They liked my clothes. They told their friends. And so, some day soon, I hope to build here in America a great dressmaking house which will give employment to many American people.

"If I can not live in my own country, America is the only other country in which I can be truly happy."

Mme. Krchivitsky was born Maroussia Boukoff, daughter of an officer in the Czar's army. Her husband, struck down by revolutionists, was Michel Krchivitsky, commander in the imperial navy of Russia.

Effective Ensemble Is Created by Combining High Spots of Successful Winter Fashions

By Amos Parrish.

New York, Jan. 30.—Remember those composite pictures it used to be the fashion to take? Your high-school class, for instance, with the faces of all the members blended into one. And the predominant characteristics made a picture of the typical student. It's something like that kind of a picture we've had made today . . . a composite illustration of Mrs. Smartly ensembled for midwinter daytime.

It shows the things the most women are wearing right this fashion minute. Which makes them the outstanding midwinter daytime fashions.

First the beret, worn forward over the right eye. Not necessarily with every detail of the sketched beret, but of its general contour. More women have liked this hat this winter than any other hat.

Next the coat, which isn't sketched for two reasons. One because it would hide the dress and second because you know it so well anyway . . . the coat with one-sided shawl collar of fox or some fur similar to fox.

Then the dress. Not this exact dress illustrated, of course, but one which has, as this has, a fairly high neckline, a softly molded bodice, a straight skirt, sleeves whose fullness lies above the elbows with a close-fitting wrist, and with some softening treatment such as the bow neckline.

For shoes, oxfords . . . the most comfortable and practicale of all winter shoes. This winter more often of suede with kid of calf trimming.

Make your own check-up of the most popular handbag and you'll find it a tailored envelope type trimmed with metal of composition. And suede to match the suede oxfords.

Gallows of Chance

By E. Phillips Oppenheim

The Story Thus Far.

Sir Humphrey Rossiter, home secretary of England, refuses to grant a reprieve to Cecil Brandt, doomed to the gallows for hanging Gervase Benham, a friend of his wife, Katherine, a noted actress. Returning from a visit with friends in the country, Rossiter is kidnaped by a band of masked men on the road to London. His abductors tell him he will be hanged unless he saves Brandt's life. Rossiter refuses, is placed on a gallows—and only the arrival of a messenger halts his execution. The messenger informs the leader of the captors that Mrs. Brandt is at Sir Humphrey's London home with new evidence.

Freed by the mysterious band, Rossiter reaches his home and is told by Mrs. Brandt that her husband killed Benham in her bedroom, where they had sat discussing her latest play. Finding his suspicions groundless, Brandt carried the dead man to the study—and ordered his wife to preserve silence to shield herself.

Rossiter agrees to stay Brandt's execution, which is to take place the following morning. Mrs. Brandt, a close friend of the home secretary, departs and Rossiter picks up his telephone to call Wandsworth Prison. He collapses in a faint and hours later—on being revived—learns that Brandt has been hanged.

Mrs. Brandt tells him later that she believed her husband was insane and wanted to die. Rossiter tells Scotland Yard of his abduction and sleuths are placed on the trail of the kidnapers. Mrs. Brandt, invited to dinner by Sir Humphrey, disappears after leaving her home. Scotland Yard operatives, summoned by Sir Humphrey, find the home secretary has vanished on reaching his residence.

"I would like to go back this evening, and I don't mind telling you that I should try to get a room where that chuffeur was. I should carry out my investigations a little differently, and I should work upon an idea of my own. If it doesn't turn out all right—well, you are rid of a poor detective, and if you don't want to take me on again I will find another job. If it turns out as I hope—that I am able to help—then perhaps you will reinstate me as soon as the matter is cleared up."

"Reinstate you," Col. Matterson repeated, with a queer little smile. "If you have the luck to solve this affair for us and tell us where Sir Humphrey Rossiter was taken to that night, and by whom, it won't be a question of reinstatement—we will promote you! That's right, isn't it, chief?"

"I should say so," the latter agreed heartily.

"Now, can you give me some of your ideas?" Col. Matterson asked. "I may tell you, Pank, I think it is not any secret to any one here—we are being hard pushed about this business. Sir Humphrey is badly needed at the Home Office, and the government is taking it out on us. If we could solve the mystery of his first disappearance it would be something, especially as I feel sure that if we did that it would lead on to the elucidation of this second affair."

"As to that I can not say, sir," was the deferential reply. "Of course my ideas may be all wrong, anyway."

"Now, come on," the subcommissioner begged him. "Let's see what you are driving at."

"I'm hoping, sir," Pank said wistfully, "that you will allow me to keep a great deal of what is in my mind just where it is. It won't do any good to give false hopes. If I am wrong, I am wrong, and that's the end of it, but it is a sensitive matter, and a mere whisper might upset everything. I will tell you this much if you will allow me, sir. I have worked it out, time, roads and everything—it all fits in—and I believe that Sir Humphrey Rossiter was brought to Norwich."

"To Norwich?" the chief commissioner repeated incredulously.

"Why to Norwich?" Matterson asked curiously.

"Because of a word I heard let fall at a small pub in a back street, sir," Pank confided. "You wouldn't know Norwich as I know it, sir. I was brought up as a lad there. Pubs in Norwich are not like what they are anywhere else. You go out at night and you walk along one of those crooked, hilly streets and you come to a curtained window and a wire blind, and a door like an ordinary street door, except that there's a name over it. You open the door, and they're pretty well all the same, a kind of taproom, even a counter and behind it a parlor—sort of private bar. There's hundreds of these little public houses about the place. Scarcely any rent to speak of, and the landlord and his wife live on the premises. I was in one of the first night, when I'm afraid I let the others think I was nursing my cold, and a chap came in—he had forgotten me but I knew him very well by sight—and began talking. Well, he just said one thing—that's all—and it put an idea into my head. I couldn't sleep for thinking of it.

"Next morning, after the others had gone out, I got a push bike and I prowled round the place up to the Hellesdon golf links and round by the aviation works, and had a look at all the new ground they have got planned out for building. Yes, I had a good morning's investigation, and when I came back—well, that idea of mine was still there."

"Why on earth didn't you talk to Smithers and Simpson about it?" Matterson asked.

"For this reason, sir," Pank explained: "It is not as it might seem, because I wanted to make a scoop of my own—I promise you that. I have asked you to give me the sack and I shall never ask you to take me back again if I'm wrong. I am backing my chance, as it were, so it's a fair deal. But this much I do know—if I were seen in the streets with Smithers and Simpson, or if I started making inquiries with them in the direction I am thinking of, that would be the end. We should get to know nothing and there would not be any way of getting to know anything."

"Sounds very mysterious, you must admit," the subcommissioner pointed out.

"I admit it, sir," Pank agreed. "There's another thing: The man who keeps the house where that chauffeur lodged is my uncle. Relationships count for something in Norwich. It is about one of the most sociable places in the world when you are known and the most standoff place in the world when you are a stranger. If I go and take a room with my uncle he will be telling me without hesitation anything he knows about that chauffeur, whereas, knowing him as well as I do, I would swear that he would keep his mouth closer shut than an oyster to any one of the police, even if it were myself asking him questions about an exlodger."

"Common sense," Matterson agreed.

Unusual Request.

"You must acknowledge, Pank," the chief commissioner pointed out, "that yours is a very unusual request. Smithers and Simpson are your superior officers. You went down with them to deal with the case. I don't know whether we should feel justified in letting you take it on alone."

"I'm not asking you to do so, sir," Pank pointed out. "Smithers and Simpson have spent their time there and made their report. All right. I want you to kick me out and leave me to work on my own as though I were one of the private detectives of fiction. If I find I'm right, what do you suppose I am going to do about it? I shall be back here or on the line to you like a shot. I will expect to be reinstated later on, but the others can follow up anything I have discovered, if you wish. My point is simply that I must make the preliminary investigations alone and not as a member of the police force, or I shouldn't have a chance. It is worthwhile letting me try, sir."

Matterson rose from his chair and whispered in his chief's ear. Then he rang a bell.

Requests Dossier.

"Bring me Pank's dossier," he directed the man who answered the summons.

The detective sighed.

"Not a very brilliant one, I'm afraid, sir," he remarked. "This is my first real opportunity."

There were a few nervous moments of silence. The orderly returned with a doubled-up sheet of paper. The subcommissioner and his chief studied it together for a while and exchanged a few words. Then the former returned to his place.

"Very well, Pank," he decided. "You are sacked. You shammed a cold and did nothing to help your superior officers in this investigation. Quite sufficient reason for getting rid of you. Go to the cashier's department, draw what is due to you and sign off."

No man ever accepted dismissal so cheerfully. Pank's eyes were bright as he rose to his feet.

"To whom shall I make my reports, sir?" he inquired.

Col. Matterson handed him half a dozen envelopes, addressed and franked.

"To me," he instructed. "The envelopes I am giving you are marked so that they are only opened by myself, and all I can say is: I hope you send us good news. But what about money? Unofficially, of course, we will supply you with all you want."

"I have plenty, thank you, sir," Pank replied. "I am a saving man and I have no family. I am going to buy a second-hand sample case somewhere before the shops close tonight, and I am going down by the newspaper train tomorrow morning with a new job—peddling leather heels."

"I hope," the chief commissioner said—for him, graciously—"that your new occupation will bring you back to us."

"I hope so indeed, sir," was the fervent reply, "and good night, gentlemen."

Chapter X.

At about 8:30 on the following morning Ernest Pank, looking smaller than ever in a long and somewhat shabby mackintosh, trudged up the hill from Norwich station, side by side with a truck containing a sample case and his own portmanteau. Instead of patronizing a hostelry, he tramped on for about three-quarters of a mile and arrived before a neat little house in a long row of precisely similar residences. He knocked at the door. After a moment or two's delay it was opened by a man in shirt and trousers whose face was half lathered and who still held a razor in his hand.

"What might you be wanting, young man?" he demanded.

Ernest Pank grinned.

"That's a nice way to treat your own nephew, uncle," he observed. The man beckoned with his razor to a woman in the background.

"Clara," he exclaimed, "look what the wet weather's brought in! Step in, young man, if you've a fancy to. What have you got in your barrow?"

"Tell you presently," Pank replied, taking off his mackintosh and hanging it on the diminutive rack. "Well, aunt," he went on, greeting a stout but pleasant-looking woman who had just made her appearance, "what were you thinking of having for breakfast this morning?"

Poses as Salesman.

"If it isn't Ernest Pank!" she exclaimed. "Why, lad, I thought you were a policeman in London! What are you doing in these parts?"

"I tried that police job," the young man confided. "I don't do so badly at it, but it was a poor show. I'm a commercial traveler now. And I wondered, as you have only Cousin Amy left at home, whether you have an odd room and if you could put me up for two or three nights."

Take Your Fat Off Your Mind!

Are you one of those people who are forever worrying because "everything they eat goes to fat?"

Then stop worrying right now—because here's a simple, easy, pleasant way to correct that condition, bring your weight down to normal. Without dieting, without exercises, without drastic purging!

For many years physicians the world over have known and prescribed a famous corrective for abnormal obesity. It has been taken with amazingly beneficial results by thousands of women who were "too fat."

This corrective is the chief active ingredient of Marmola, prepared in tablet form by one of the leading medical laboratories of America. You simply take a tablet of Marmola 4 times a day and start at once to get rid of burdensome fat.

It sounds miraculous, but thousands of women who have taken Marmola, as directed, might well tell you this story if they had the chance.

Since 1907, more than 20,000,000 packages of Marmola have been purchased—and what greater recommendation can be had?

Today—buy a package of Marmola, and start at once. You will soon experience Marmola's benefits. When you have gone far enough, stop taking Marmola. And you will bless the day when you first learned about this wonderful reducing agent!

Naming School Lunch Expert Raises Storm

Action Delayed by Protests Over Possible Selection of St. Paul Woman.

Appointment of a home economics expert to organize the preparation and distribution of all free lunches in Washington was still hanging fire last night, after protests had been received from several quarters at the announcement a St. Paul woman was being considered for the position. The burden of the protests was that a Washington woman should receive the appointment.

"The woman's place of residence should not enter into the matter, in my opinion," declared Commissioner George E. Allen yesterday afternoon. "I think the job should be given to the person who is best qualified for it, whether she lives in Minnesota or the District of Columbia."

Several women, in addition to the home economics expert from St. Paul, are being considered for the appointment, according to Miss Mary Mason, of the Federal Emergency Relief Administration. The name of the appointee will be announced within a day or two, Miss Mason said yesterday. She admitted that overtures had been made to the St. Paul woman.

No Week-End Lunches.

No provisions have been made to serve free lunches to undernourished school children over the week-end by the committee in charge.

"This doesn't mean that the children will go hungry on Saturdays and Sundays," explained Commissioner Allen. "Most of the pupils who are dependent upon the free lunches belong to families that are on the relief list. Those families should have sufficient food from the relief agencies to feed their children on the days that they are not in school."

Plans are going forward for the establishment of a District-operated central kitchen where the lunches will be prepared and then delivered to the schools. In addition to an abandoned schoolhouse on Wisconsin avenue, bteween R and S street, the Bradley and Cardozo School builings are being considered for the housing of the central kitchen. The Cardozo School at First and I streets southwest is looked upon with special favor because of its central location.

Milk and Oranges Added.

"We hope to have the kitchen in operation within the next two weeks," said Commissioner Allen. "In the meantime milk and oranges have been added to the regular hot lunch menus."

Yesterday the children were given beans, bread and butter, an orange and milk. Some of the schools had baked beans. Others had scalloped lima beans.

"With our present facilities it is impossible to provide baked dishes for 5,000 children, so we have to alternate our oven-cooked foods among the schools," said Miss Emma Jacobs, director of domestic science for the Washington schools. "Today we fed the pupils vegetable soup, bread and butter, an orange, and milk. On Friday we will give them coarse hominy with cheese sauce, bread and butter, an orange, and milk. We try to have meatless menus on Wednesdays and Fridays so that children who observe religious fast days will be able to partake of all the things served."

Miss Jacobs is cooperating with Dr. Louise Stanley in the serving of the free lunches. Dr. Stanley, head of the Bureau of Home Economics, Department of Agriculture, has been appointed chairman of a special committee to look after certain phases of the free lunch program.

Served Cafeteria Style.

At the present time the free midday meals are served cafeteria style and the portions are large enough to satisfy healthy appetites, according to Miss Jacobs.

It is Commissioner Allen's hope that after the central kitchen is running smoothly the lunches will be served in a more attractive manner.

"I don't mean anything fancy, but I would like the meals to look appetizing. Everybody knows that attractive-looking food is a spur to the appetite," concluded the Commissioner.

Miss Jacobs, when told of this contemplated change in the method of serving the lunches, was skeptical of its practicability. "We're doing the very best we can, considering the old school buildings we have to work in. If we change our system we will need new buildings and equipment."

Miss Jacobs has been director of domestic science for the Washington schools since the position was established 45 years ago.

Lady Hope Presents Poems to President

"Visions" Already Has Peace In Royal Libraries.

Among the gifts received on his birthday by President Roosevelt was a copy of Lady Eleanor Hope's "Visions of Hope."

This volume of verse, published in Paris three years ago, has found its way to libraries in several of the royal palaces of Europe. During a recent visit to London, the author presented, in person, a copy of her "Visions of Hope" to Queen Mary of England.

Aside from the handsome binding and artistic illustrations the make-up of the book is interesting. The pages are loose, so any one of the illustrated poems may be lifted out and framed. And an unusual thing about the book is that it is not for sale. The first edition is practically exhausted and the few remaining copies are intended as gifts for people the author especially admires.

Lady Hope has recently returned to her apartment at the Shoreham Hotel after an absence of several months.

Music Is Unheard.

By Katherine Smith.

I brought you songs of western mountains,
Songs of Oriental seas,
Songs of death, and songs of gladness,
Songs of love's mute miseries.
I sang them underneath your window,
Sang for you, and you alone——
But I never knew the world would Hear—and you be deaf to tone.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

There are several causes of gall stones. Probably in many cases several of these causes cooperate to bring about the result, but it is possible that any one could turn the trick by itself. As to some of them there is no question. In others the verdict needs to be "guilty but not proven;" while still others are like grand-jury indictment — reasonably suspicious.

Among the main and contributing causes are: Indolence, physical inactivity, overeating, heavy meals, constipation, reverse peristalsis, vomiting, belching, bacteria in the gall bladder, mucus in the gall bladder, inflammation of the gall bladder and a diet too rich in cholesterol and other lipid bodies (such as yellow of eggs, brains, sweetbreads, liver), rich foods, alcohol condiments. Probably we should add dyspepsia, for gall stones and dyspepsia make a vicious circle, each aiding and abetting the other.

To one who reads the list of causes there will occur methods of prevention, some one or more of which he can take as applying to himself and his habits. First, let us consider the bacterial cause. Every part of the digestive tract has its own bacterial life.

There are very few active bacteria in the stomach. Those that are active there stand acids well. Most bacteria in foods go to sleep when they reach the stomach, to wake up farther down the line. The small intestine has some bacteria, but they very in different parts of the 20-odd feet of tube. In the large intestine there is a very rich bacterial life, wholly different in character from those farther up.

Good health depends very largely on keeping each group of bacteria in the pen in which it belongs. Some are absorbed from the large intestine, to be picked up by the liver and thrown back by the bile route. Some of these are apt to damage the liver, some the gall bladder and some cause gall stones.

Gall stones are apt to contain a good deal of near-fat called cholesterol. We call these near-fasts lipids. Some foods are rich in them. Others contain almost none. The foods that contain least of them are the fruits, vegetables, starches sugars, milks and mixtures containing these. A regular egg diet is rich in lipids.

Obesity makes for gall stones. It is true that some spare people have them. But the rule is that the persons who have gall stones are those with considerable paunch, or with a superabundance of fat in other locations, when the paunch region is too much compressed to hold rolls of fat. The heavy eaters and the physically inactive are also in the gall-stone list, as one would expect.

Paris, Jan. 30 (U.P.).—The more figure shown this year the more stylish, it appears from showings now under way, of garments ranging from afternoon and evening gowns to bathing suits.

The girls at Helen Hubert's opening, for one example, appeared in afternoon and evening creations slashed as high as the middle of the thigh, featuring the "directoire silhouette."

The coats combined different kinds of fur, such as ermine collars on coats with fox cuffs. The results were striking, and as attractive as the slashed dresses were daring.

At the Lyolene showings, modesty was defied with beach fad garments which permit the wearers, if any, to have sunburned hips after a couple of outings in these abbreviated affairs. Bathing suits with "cut-out trunks" rivaled mid-thigh taffeta dresses for beach-sittings.

Other beach costumes included trunkless ballet creations, without backs or fronts other than a brassier band. The pajamas featured knee pockets and three-quarter coatings.

Clothes designed by a real princess some felt apt to be pretty exciting, and the summer collection being shown by the House of Dilkusha—who really is the Princess de Rohan—was no disappointment.

The princess' styles returned to the eighteenth century silhouette, using silks, taffetas, reversible satin and water-proofed pique. She featured "Aesop's Fables" lace, composed of animal characters from those old yarns. Organdie overcoats, of all things, with clown-like trousers for beach wear, were shown. The trimmings included wooden dominoes and dice as buttons.

Arts Club Will Hear Theatrical Lecture

Elie Edson, of New York, press representative of American and foreign stars, will address the Arts Club of Washington at 8:30 o'clock tomorrow night at the invitation of Frank B. Steele, chairman of the program committee.

City's "Little Entente" Split As Lad Departs for Berlin

Boys from four continents. Left to right: Cadete Lozada, Bolivia; Herbert Schulze, Germany; Taro Okazaki, Japan, and Dale Lemley, United States. These are the members of Washington's "Little Entente."

A juvenile international entente representing four continents will be broken, in part, when Herbert Schulze, 5 years old, leaves this week for New York, whence he will sail for his home in Berlin. Herbert is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Wilhelm Schulze, who have been living at Alban Towers, 3700 Massachusetts avenue northwest. Mr. Schulze has been in Washington as a correspondent for a Berlin newspaper syndicate.

The other members of the "entente," all of whom are pupils in the Alban Towers Play School, conducted by Mrs. Florence S. Hyde, are: Taro Okazaki, son of Katsuo Okazaki, third secretary of the Japanese Embassy, and Madame Okazaki; Cadete Lozada, son of Senor Don Enrique S. Lozada, first secretary of the Bolivian Embassy, and Madame de Lozada, and Dale Lemley, son of Lieut. William Lemley, Marine Aviation Corps, and Mrs. Lemley.

A farewell party for Herbert was held yesterday afternoon at the play school. Those attending, in addition to the members of the "entente," were David Coulter, Ikey Stewart, Dorothea Widmayer, Janet Jones and Norma Lewis. Four were unable to attend because of illness.

Herbert's playmates presented him with a small souvenir booklet, to which each had contributed a page or more decorated with pictures. The illustration included flags of the four countries. Herbert presented the school with a collection of toys, including a miniature German street car.

Real Romance of Stars Continues

Onofrei and Saroya Bianca Tell Why Union Has Been Success.

By Elizabeth Perrow.

Thrilling—was the verdict of Philadelphia debutantes who first heard Dimitri Onofrei sing Faust.

Boring—though golden-haired Marguerite, who was in real life Saroya Bianca.

Adorable—thought Faust as he sang his heart out to Marguerite and resolved that this romance could not be confined to the stage.

"A glorious life and a perfect marriage," Mr. and Mrs. Dimitri Onofrei declared yesterday at the Washington Hotel, where they are staying. The two stars are singing with the San Carlos Opera Company here this week.

"That was ten years ago, and we have always been glad that we met, sang together and made that romance continuous," Mrs. Onofrei said. "And I really was greatly attracted to Dimitri in the beginning. The only thing that annoyed me was that he was new in the company and we had to do a lot of extra rehearsing."

Trials of Operatic Love.

Mr. and Mrs. Onofrei laughed together over the trials of two opera stars who fall in love.

"Of course every one in the company knew the state of my affections. And sometimes they made it rather difficult," said Dimitri. "One night I was playing the part with a great deal of fervor when I looked down and saw the orchestra leader winking and saying in an exaggerated whisper, 'go to it, big boy.' Well, I took the hint." And so they were married.

"I knew I was going to be asked long before I was," Saroya said yesterday, "and I knew what I was going to say. I don't see how people can be surprised about such things.

The manager of the company said we could come to Washington as a wedding present. We were delighted at the prospect of a holiday, but when we got here we found a telegram saying to sing "Madame Butterfly" the next night. Our whole honeymoon was spent traveling around the country singing in different towns."

Approve Wedded Artists.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Onofrei agree that it is much better for an artist to be maried to another artist. And they add that one reason for the success of their marriage is that they keep their marriage and their professional lives separate.

"We have learned that we must respect each other's rights as artists," Mrs. Onofrei declared. "And we can appreciate the necessity of doing that because we are both artists.

"We do not like to sing in the same opera because we feel that we can not do our best work. We are so interested in what the other person is doing, worrying about whether his or her part is going over, that one of us is certain to fall down."

Both artists asserted that they tried to help each other in their work and to give constructive criticism.

"Nothing is more helpful than to have some one who knows what is correct give friendly criticism," they declared.

Scoff at Jealousy Idea.

"Absurd!" exclaimed the two singers at the idea that they might be jealous at seeing the other being made love to on the stage.

"You really can't get jealous at the sight of a kiss that you know is timed to last just four beats of the orchestra leader's baton," said Dmitri.

"Or an embrace when you know that it has been practiced and decided that the arm shall be in some certain place," said Saroya.

"And that is another reason why it is desirable to be married to someone who is in the same profession," he added.

"Besides, I don't know what I would do with an ordinary business man for a husband," said Saroya. "If I left him at home I never would see him, and if he traveled with me he would be excess baggage."

"Our work is fascinating, but hard," they said. "It requires all our energy to give it our best. And when we have sung a difficult role we are exhausted. That is another time when we are glad that the person waiting for us when we go home is another artist who understands how we feel. Oh, we are firm believers in artists marrying other artists."

Stage Embraces, They Agree, Are Never Good Cause For Jealousy.

The Runaway.

I saw him 'neath a tropic sky
And sad he seemed to be,
For the home-door look was in his eye,
But he'd somehow lost the key.
He was tanned as brown as a leather shoe,
As old and as worn and thin,
And he stood on the pier, as wanderers do,
When the home-land ships come in.

He looked at our flag with a wistful eye,
But smiled as we stepped ashore;
There was something weird in his "hello" cry
Which I never had heard before.
Oh! I've heard "hello" in a thousand ways,
But never so tinged with pain
As that greeting sad where the palm tree sways
Down there on the Spanish Main.

"I've been going back home," he said to me.
"Going back for years and years.
There's a place up north where I'd like to be,
But never the chance appears.
The ships come in for a time to stay,
But their decks to me are barred.
Oh, it's easy enough to run away,
It's the getting back that's hard!"

Perhaps some day will a vessel stop
For a time at that dusty town
And others may see, as the anchors drop,
A man turned leather brown.
As they get to shore they may hear that cry,
"Hello!" as it came to me
From him with the home-door look in his eye
Who had somehow lost the key.

Wife of Minister From Panama Finds Philosophy of Optimism

Orphaned in Childhood, She Has Profited by This Early Grief; Believes Best in Parents Not Brought Out Until Children Arrive; Absorbed in Training of Five.

While women of the Diplomatic Corps in Washington may seem to live a romantic sort of life, filled with the glamor of brilliant entertaining and daily contact with the most fascinating and forceful personalities of the day, there is another and a very human side to their existence. In talking with diplomatic hostesses, one discovers them to be intensely occupied with the age-old tasks of supervising a home, rearing children, helping their husbands.

This article is the ninth in a series of interviews with wives of foreign envoys in the Capital.

By Elizabeth Young.

Life gains in richness through sorrow rightly accepted, in the opinion of Senora Dona Amelia L. de Alfaro, Spanish-English wife of Panama's Minister to the United States.

Deeply and quietly religious, Senora de Alfaro believes sorrow an inescapable portion of mankind's heritage, to be transmuted by the individual into soil for growth of character, and into a somber background against which happiness shines the brighter.

If sorrow seems to make up the greater portion of many lives, it may be that people are inclined to stress their sorrow more than their happiness, she thinks.

"Happiness we take for granted, but when sorrow comes, we make so much of it," said the serene browed Senora de Alfaro, to whom Washington has been home for many years. "But if we will put in the balance all the happiness, all the lovely things, that came to us in the meanwhile, we will find the proportion nearly equal. Our happy hours fly so quickly; the sorrow-filled hours drag. That is the great difference. That, and the fact that sorrow makes for growth.

"When we are given sorrow, we are given strength to bear it, and when the sorrow passes, the strength remains."

Sorrow entered her own life very early. The sixth child in a family of seven born to Emmanuel Lyons, an Englishman, and a Panamanian mother of Spanish and French extraction, she lost both her parents while yet a small girl. The family had moved from Panama to England when she was 4, and she was reared in the English home of an uncle and aunt. She was educated in England and on the continent.

But her own children—she has five—have profited by this early grief. Senora de Alfaro has a definite conception of the role which parents should play in the early education and character formation of children. She feels the most important education is that obtained in and through the home.

"Education is not alone the acquisition of good manners and information," she said. "It has to do with shaping the soul, the mind, and the heart of a child.

Significance of Children.

"I think the best in us is never brought out until we have children. They make our lives so interesting. We always want in them and for them the things we could not be and could not have. In them, very often, we find the same ideas and ambitions that animated our own youth. I am convinced the unfulfilled ideals of parents are often expressed through children.

"Until my marriage, I had no particular ambition. But afterward, I keenly wanted to live. I wanted to be a proper wife and mother; to do the best by what was coming, in helping my husband to do something really fine, and our children to be bigger and greater than we.

Her eldest son, Victor, is now an eye, nose and throat specialist, practicing in Washington. Ivan is a senior engineering student at Catholic University, and Rogelis is starting pre-legal studies at George Washington University; Amelita is a senior at Western High School, and Yolanda, her youngest, who is 12, studies at John Quincy Adams School.

Panamanian Ambitions.

"There are three stages in life," she said. "Youth, which should be the happiest time; middle life, the fullest time, and old age, which is, perhaps, the saddest. But there are exceptions, as in my case. My life is happiest in my maturity. And age can be serene and charming, if one is willing 'to grow old gracefully,' as the saying is. But that is almost a forgotten, and certainly neglected, art among women of the present day."

The women of Panama, she said, are mostly of Spanish descent, very bright and attractive; more interested in their homes and in family life than in making careers for themselves.

"The young girls are beginning to invade the professions. There are two or three lawyers; our first woman doctor will soon be graduated, but for the most part our women are not so much interested in the professions as are women of other countries," she said. "We have no woman suffrage yet, but the movement has been started by the women of Panama who are interested in obtaining the vote.

"Since the country obtained its independence in 1903, there has been great improvement in the school system. Primary schooling is obligatory, high school classes are elective; we have normal schools and a few university courses have been established."

Visions "New" World.

She believes the entire world is now going through a transition period, similar to that which it passed through as a consequence of the French revolution, and that "we are passing into a new order of things."

Senora de Alfaro has been a continuous resident of Washington since 1922, with the exception of two years, 1931 and 1932, when her husband was recalled to Panama to assume the presidency of the republic.

When she married her husband was undersecretary of foreign affairs and a student of law. She was at his side during the years of his rapid rise to fame as an internationally respected diplomat and jurist. She had lived in England, Germany, Spain and Belgium, also visiting in France, Italy and Switzerland, before coming finally to the United States. Dr. Alfaro has served his country as cabinet member, president and diplomatic envoy.

Senora de Alfaro feels that, despite an unambitious youth, she has been given one of the greatest careers possible for woman, that of sharing the life of a man who has attained the highest positions of his country.

What Today Means

"Aquarius."

If January 31 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 8:15 to 9:15 a. m., from 11 a. m. to 12 noon, and from 3:30 to 4:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 6:45 to 7:45 a. m., from 1 to 2 p. m. and from 5:30 to 6:30 p. m.

If you were born on January 31, you are predisposed to be self-centered. It might be advisable to cultivate the habit of considering the feelings and interests of others, and see if yours conflicts with theirs. It may be surprising to see how often you can, by cooperation, not only be of help to others, but further your own interests. Unless you exercise caution in crossing streets on this day you may find yourself involved in a serious traffic accident.

The child born on January 31, as soon as it is old enough to understand, must be trained to be unselfish. In its early years make it realize it must willingly give, if it wishes to receive. January 31 children are inclined to be grasping, but this can easily be overcome, if when young, you teach them the spirit of generosity. Children, whose natal day is this date, are gifted with the ability to acquire an extensive vocabulary, and are excellent conversationalists. Their training should be such as to fit them for college, as they have the qualifications to later on become successful in educational lines.

The woman born on January 31 must control the inclination to be selfish if she wishes for contentment and friends. If you were born on January 31, you are unusually well informed on many subjects, and having the ability to express yourself clearly, you will always find people interested in your discourse on any topic of prevailing interest. Be careful, however, not to harp on any one subject, but by keeping up with current events, have something always new to discuss. Men of intellectual attainments will be interested in you. In marrying you do not have to depend on a man being your intellectual equal to assure your happiness. His other qualities may offset what he lacks in this regard.

The man born on January 31 has the happy faculty to be able to present any subject in a concise and forceful manner. This art assures his success as a teacher, lecturer, or preacher. It also is most essential in salesmanship, and would help bring success if you engage in that line of endeavor. You will successfully hold your own in any vocation.

People born on January 31 will be most successful, when they accept the advice of those qualified to offer it to them. You may find out too late it does not pay to think you "know it all." Salesmen have very often, by timely suggestions, saved their listeners' money.

Successful people born on January 31:

Gouverneur Morris, statesman.
Henry W. Sage, philanthropist.
Erastus Brooks, journalist.
Daniel F. Appleton, merchant.
James G. Blaine, statesman.
Edward Kemeys, sculptor.

Miss Smith Picks Aids For Coming-Out Tea

Miss Damaris Snowden Smith, daughter of Commander and Mrs. Lybrand P. Smith, who will be presented to society by her parents February 10 at a tea, has chosen her out-of-town friends who will come to Washington to assist her.

They are Miss Helen Washington, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Lafayette Washington, of Overbrook, Pa., and a niece of Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd; Miss Elizabeth Hamilton, daughter of Mrs. Joseph Hamilton, of Overbrook, and Miss Mary Louise Neall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Percival Neall, also of Overbrook. Several of the Washington debutantes probably will assist at the tea also.

Bar Probers Oppose Senate Aid in Quiz

Association Capable of Own "Housecleaning," Is Opinion.

Holding that if there was any "house cleaning" to be done in the bar association, in connection with alleged irregularities between lawyers, bondsmen, and policemen, the association was capable of doing it, Henry I. Quinn, chairman of an investigating committee, last night declared he had no intention at present of conferring with Senate leaders.

"If the committee finds it impossible to get the facts, or needs any additional power to get facts, the matter will be referred to the association, which will undoubtedly take the proper steps," Mr. Quinn said.

The committee will meet later this week to decide what action is to be taken. Many members are said to oppose Congressional action in the investigation.

At the same time, it was announced that no complaints had been received, though an invitation to submit written complaints was issued Sunday by Quinn.

Danville Postal Aid Promoted

Owen A. Keen Leaves PWA to Succeed A. T. Davis as Cheif Clerk.

Appointment of Owen A. Keen, postal inspector, to be chief clerk succeeding Audus T. Davis, was announced yesterday by the Postoffice Department.

Mr. Davis is retiring as chief clerk after holding the position for six and a half years, a longer term than any preceding incumbent. Following a leave of absence, Mr. Davis is to be assigned elsewhere in the department. He has been in the service 22 years, entering as a stenographer.

Mr. Keen, a native of Danville, Va., will be transferred from the Public Works Administration to which he was assigned temporarily at the request of Interior Secretary Ickes. He entered the service 30 years ago as a railway postal clerk. In 1912, he became an inspector and was transferred in 1917 to the office of assistant superintendent, division of postal service. Three years later he was made superintendent of mails at Erie, Pa., holding this post for two years before transfer to the inspection service for duty in Washington and New York.

The Department also announced retirement of Miss Alice B. Sanger, personnel officer. The position is to be abolished, the duties going to the chief clerk's office.

State Department Business Stops—It's for a Serenade

Boys Harmonica Band, From Philadelphia, Visits Hull.

The measured tread of a marching host resounded along the marble corridors of the State Department yesterday, causing office doors to fly open and startled heads to peer out anxiously.

The Philadelphia Harmonica Band, 60 strong, had come to serenade Secretary Hull.

Ages range from 10 to 17 years. All play mouth organs, some big, deep-voiced ones, others piping trebles.

Albert N. Hoxie, wealthy Philadelphian, founder and tireless leader of the band, was in charge. They had come to the Capital to play at last night's Shoreham Hotel birthday party for President Roosevelt. They called on several leading Government officials before their evening appearance.

After anouncing themselves to the Secretary, they filed out to the south steps of the building and demonstrated their skill while the smiling Cordell Hull gazed down from the icy balcony outside his office.

The harmonicists wear dark blue coats, light blue trousers, striped with red, snappy caps and khaki trench coats to keep out the cold. They take their work intensely seriously, and they are understood to have 68,000 miles of group traveling and playing behind them.

Police Seek 5 Missing Here

Four Men and a Boy Are Unaccounted for by Relatives.

Five missing persons were sought in Washington last night.

Howard Hastings, 38, left his home, 905 B street northeast, early yesterday to take his car to a garage. He has not been seen since. Relatives said he went to fill the machine's radiator with an anti-freeze solution. He was wearing a dark suit and overcoat.

Authorities of Staunton, Va., asked local police to be on the lookout for William W. Nelson, 16, missing from his home there since Monday. He has brown hair and eyes and was wearing a brown overcoat and hat.

Crawford Grey, 35, dressed in a blue lumber jacket and dark trousers, disappeared from his home, Sunday.

Julian William, 49, of 1008 B street northeast, has been missing several days. He has brown hair and eyes and was wearing a blue overcoat.

Tony Ricci, 34, was reported missing from his place of employment, the Capital Garage.

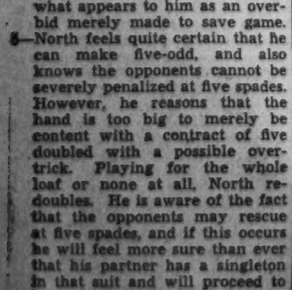
Amazing Bidding.

In a recent rubber game at Crockford's Club in New York City I watched a very amusing hand. The North player entered the bidding gently at the level of three and gradually allowed himself to be pushed all the way to six, after having been doubled at five, and then, to his partner's great joy, but utter amazement, he made seven.

East, Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.



The bidding: (Figures after bids refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

East	South	West	North
1♠	2♣(1)	2♠(2)	3♡(3)
3♠	Pass	4♣	5♡
Dbl.(4)	Pass	Pass	Redbl.(5)
Pass	Pass	5♠(6)	6♡(7)
Pass	Pass(8)	Dbl.(9)	Pass(10)
Pass	Pass

1—A sound Overcall, not vulnerable, based upon distribution.

2—Possibly a better bid here would be two diamonds. West decides to bid two spades, reasoning that since he is giving a free Raise, he is not particularly underbidding the hand.

3—North immediately feels very joyful about the future of the hand. He has a practically solid heart suit, a void in diamonds, three to the King in the suit his partner has bid, and the almost certain assurance from the opponents' bidding that his partner has a doubleton or singleton spade. Knowing that the bidding will not die, he decides to proceed slowly.

4—East quite correctly decides that he and his partner cannot make five spades. Not knowing the freak distribution, he doubles what appears to him as an overbid merely made to save game.

5—North feels quite certain that he can make five-odd, and also knows the opponents cannot be severely penalized at five spades. However, he reasons that the hand is too big to merely be content with a contract of five doubled with a possible overtrick. Playing for the whole loaf or none at all, North redoubles. He is aware of the fact that the opponents may rescue at five spades, and if this occurs he will feel more sure than ever that his partner has a singleton in that suit and will proceed to bid a Slam in hearts.

7—North goes ahead with his plan, and who is to blame him? After all, all his partner needs to hold in addition to the almost definitely marked singleton spade is one or two small hearts and six clubs to the Ace-Nothing, if the suit breaks.

8—South has been silent since the first round of bidding, and when North bids six hearts, he almost sinks from sight under the table. He is unable to visualize North's excellent holding, any more than the opponents are. It looks to him as though his hand may conceivably produce only one trick to help his partner, and he does not like his singleton heart.

9—West can not be blamed for doubling the opponents at six when his partner has previously doubled them at five. After all, North has bid his hand very deceptively. It seems logical to expect that a player who has started off by innocently overcalling at three can not have a good enough hand to successfully fulfill a contract of six.

10—North loses some of his courage at this point. He feels reasonably confident of making the hand, and feels, from the opponents' bidding and rescue of the double of five hearts, that the trump suit will surely break and that he will have enough club discards to make the hand. He also knows that East will read him for shortness in spades and not shortness in diamonds, and that he will probably be favored with a most welcome diamond Opening. North decides, however, that to bid and make a doubled Small Slam contract will be a most satisfactory results, without piling on a Redouble.

As expected, East opened the Ace of diamonds, and with the trumps and clubs breaking, Declarer was able to take all 13 tricks. South, who had left the table as soon as he laid down the Dummy, could hardly believe the result when it was told to him on his return.

vaporizes quickly . . . sustains acceleration

HERE'S a different and real winter grade of regular gas that really licks your winter starting troubles.

Real winter grade Orange American Gas vaporizes quickly. That means it breaks down instantly into a spray, which fires the second your starter makes the plugs spark.

It will do that and start quickly even when the thermometer is at Zero or 'way below. That done, this same steady vaporizing keeps your motor running smoothly without stalling. Engineers call that "sustained acceleration".

You'll want to try this real winter grade Orange American Gas, because it will give you better winter performance than any other gasoline selling at regular gas price.

District Bans 'High-Power' Beer in Cafes

President Seeks to Oust All Traces of Old Saloon Here.

A new regulation which prohibits the sale of "high-power" beer from drawing apparatus in the same room where food is served was promulgated yesterday by the District Commissioners so that beer sales will conform with President Roosevelt's desire to eliminate all vestiges of bar-rooms in the Nation's Capital.

The effect of the ruling, according to Corporation Counsel William W. Bride, is that hundreds of restaurants and hotels now licensed to sell 3.2 beer will have to remove serving equipment from the sight of customers before they will be permitted to sell high-test beer.

Heretofore, the regulations prohibited only the mixing of drinks composed of hard liquor in a place where the public could see the operation.

This law, Mr. Bride says, does not apply to licensees now permitted to sell 3.2 brew under the District beer bill. These permits will remain in force until expiration date; but no high-test beer may be dispensed from counters in places holding permits for low-test beer.

No "On Tap" Sales.

The new regulation reads: "No beverage shall be drawn, in the space in which beverages are sold or served or in any place visible from such place, from any keg, barrel or similar container."

Another regulation which would give residential property owners the right to protest the issuance of a manufacturer's or wholesaler's license in their neighborhood, was also promulgated.

Under this rule, property owners within a radius of 600 feet of the premises could protest issuance of the permit. Heretofore, the opportunity to protest had been limited to cases in which retailers' licenses were sought.

Publication Required.

Applications for manufacturers and wholesalers' licenses will have to be published for two weeks before the board may grant permits.

If a majority of the property owners protest issuance, the board would be precluded from granting license.

Another regulation requires all applicants, except retail druggists, or those seeking solicitor licenses, to submit a photograph with their application, showing the street front of the premises for which the license is desired.

Andes Regions Lecture Theme

Tonight's Travel Talk Will Tell of Ecuador, Peru, Bolivia.

Ecuador, smallest of South America's west coast republics; Peru, cradle of the ancient Inca civilization, and Bolivia, whose capital, La Paz, is built at the greatest altitude of any in the world, will be described and pictured at the Masonic Auditorium, New York avenue and Thirteenth street northwest, tonight at 8:15 o'clock, in the eleventh of a series of 20 illustrated travel talks sponsored by The Washington Post.

Cameron Rogers, author, traveler and lecturer, will be the speaker and his vivid descriptions wil lbe supplemented by exclusive motion pictures and tereoptican views in color.

The Post Travel Lectures are presented by this newspaper to provide an interesting background for the interpretation of international news as brought to Post readers every day through the medium the Associated Press and other news-gathering facilities. All arrangements are made by The Washington Post and lecturers selected upon the recommendation of travel authorities. A nominal charge of 25 cents is made for tickets, which will be obtainable at the Masonic Auditorium box office beginning at 7 o'clock this evening.

Miss Bentley to Give Child Welfare Course

Miss Fay Bentley, nominee for the position of Judge of the Juvenile Court of the District of Columbia, will give a course in Child Welfare in George Washington University during the second semester opening Friday.

This course, offered under Miss Bentley by the Sociology Department last year, is to be repeated at the request of a number of students. It will be scheduled for Tuesday and Thursday at 5:10 p. m.

Wells Remains District Scout Council Head

New Members of Board and 1934 Officers Elected.

Capt. Chester Wells has been re-elected president of the District of Columbia Boy Scout Council, representing 5,803 youths engaged in scouting in Washington, it was announced yesterday.

Other officers chosen are Dr. Paul Bartsch, Julius Garfinkel and Samuel Kauffman vice presidents; George Hewitt Myers, treasurer and commissioner, and Ernest H. Daniel, assistant treasurer.

The executive board for the coming year will include the following new members: Henry P. Blair, Harold C. Bryant, Harry B. Caton, Karl W. Corby, George E. Hamilton, sr., Arthur Hellen, James Oliver La Gorce Edward W. Marcellus, Dr. Cloyd Heck Harvin, Arthur J. May, Dr. Walter H. Merrill, Dr. Camp Stanley, L. Corrin Strong, Charles H. Thompkins, R. A. Van Orsdel and Eugene S. Wilson, jr.

Speakers were Sir Willmott Lewis, Washington correspondent of the London Times, and Arthur E. Roberts, of Cincinnati, author of "The Emancipation of Youth."

Capt. Wells presented the Silver Beaver Award to George Hewitt Myers, Thomas A King and Edward H. Lyles. The Silver Beaver is scouting's reward to men who have distinguished themselves in service to boyhood.

Detectives Find Earle Wynekoop

Doctor's Son in Milwaukee Under Assumed Name.

Milwaukee, Jan. 30 (AP).—Earle Wynekoop, 30, who had been missing during the trial in Chicago of his mother, Dr. Alice L. Wynekoop, charged with slaying his wife, Rheta, was found here today, living under an assumed name in a rooming house, across the street from the police station.

He was picked up this afternoon by two detectives, who were uncertain about his identity, and was held for two and a half hours at police headquarters.

Wynekoop told officers he had been in Milwaukee since January 10, coming here on the advice of attorneys to avoid subpenas in his mother's murder trial, which ended in a mistrial several days ago.

Manslaughter Charged In Priest's Auto Death

George R. Ellison, colored, was charged with manslaughter yesterday after the District grand jury returned an indictment holding him responsible for the death of the Rev. Francis X. Cavanagh, pastor of the Church of the Assumption.

Witnesses said Ellison drove an automobile through a "stop" sign at Eleventh and I streets southeast, December 17, and struck an automobile occupied by Father Cavanagh. Injuries received by the priest caused his death.

Airport Board Rules Against Gravelly Site

House Committee Cites Point's Proximity to Bolling Field.

Meeting in executive session yesterday, the House Military Affairs Committee reached no decision on the McSwain bill to provide a municipal airport for Washington, but Chairman McSwain said members of the committee are definitely agreed consideration of the Gravelly Point site is impossible.

After hearing testimony, McSwain said that his committee felt the Gravelly Point site is too near Bolling Field, and that an airport there would endanger human life.

Maj. Gen. B. D. Foulois, chief of the Army Air Corps, appeared at the session yesterday and favored the enlarging of Bolling Field.

Represetnative Goss, of Connecticut, said yesterday there was some concern felt regarding title to land now occupied by Washington Airport. He admitted he would vote against considering that sit unless a clear title was established.

McSwain said the committee would visit other airport sites in the near future.

While it is felt the committee is favorably disposed toward the Washington-Hoover site, McSwain said he was concerned with the high price now asked by the National Airport Corporation, owners of the field.

"If the Washington-Hoover Airport site is still held up high in price," McSwain said, "we will hold condemnation proceedings."

Youth Held in $5,000 On Drug Act Charge

United States Commissioner N. C. Turnage yesterday ordered John Bates, 21, held under bonds aggregating $5,000, when he waived a preliminary hearing on charges of violating the narcitic law.

Bates is the first of nine persons, arrested last week, to be given a hearing.

Official Status, Salary Granted To Maj. Walter

Volunteer NRA Compliance Worker Gets Reward as Predicted.

Maj. Raymond J. Walter, who has been directing NRA activities in Washington for the District compliance board without pay since last August, was given an official position on a remunerative basis yesterday by Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, NRA administrator.

Elevation of Maj. Walter to this position was exclusively forecast in The Post a month ago. The fact that Maj. Walter was not appointed when directors were designated in every State brought a storm of protest from civic organizations.

Appointed to take charge of local NRA cases under the supervision of John Swope, chief of the field section of the National compliance division, Maj. Walter will handle re-employment cases as well as code cases in Washington. Although as yet he has not been given the official title of director, this designation is expected to be made within the next few days.

Maj. Walter will continue as executive officer of the local compliance board. His office will be transferred from the Board of Trade headquarters, where space had been donated, to the Commerce Building. Miss Inez Warren, who has been serving as the officer's secretary, will continue in this position.

The appointment came as a birthday present to Maj. Walter. "The President and I celebrate on the same day," he pointed out.

Jeritza Will Sing Score of Songs

Aria From "La Gioconda" on Sunday Program.

Nearly a score of songs, including an operatic aria, will be on the program of the recital by Maria Jeritza, famous Viennese prima donna soprano, Sunday at 4 p. m. in Constitutional Hall, under the local management of Mrs. Dorothy Hodgkin Dorsey.

Considerable interest is attached to two new songs promised, one from Fritz Kreisler's latest operetta, "Cissy." The operetta has been so successful in Vienna that other capitals are preparing to stage the work.

Mme. Jeritza will sing the "Suicidio" aria from Ponchielli's "La Gioconda," and lyrics by Schubert, Schumann, Strauss, Debussy, Lehar and other composers.

Dr. Ferris Indicted On Narcotic Charge

Acquitted in Maryland Cancer Death Case.

Dr. N. Sherwood Ferris, Chevy Chase, Md., was indicted by the District Grand Jury yesterday on charges of dispensing narcotic prescriptions without the necessary registration with the collector of internal revenue, and with failing to pay the special tax placed on physicians who handle narcotics.

A second indictment alleged that he unlawfully possessed narcotics.

Dr. Ferris and Dr. H. R. Street were recently acquitted, in Rockville, Md., of causing the death of a woman through administration of a "cancer cure." The physicians producted many witnesses that the same cure had benefited them.

Allen Argo Lodge Guest.

Commissioner George E. Allen will be the guest of honor when Argo Lodge of B-Nai B'rith installs officers at the Jewish Community Center at 8:15 o'clock tonight. Retiring President Irvin Goldstein will be the speaker and a musical program will be furnished by Nathan Wallack.

Inquest Set As 4 Perish In Home Fire

Charge Fire Plug Was Frozen Is Denied by Officials.

An inquest into the deaths of four members of the McDairies family, who were burned to death early yesterday when their East Riverdale, Md., home was destroyed by fire, will be held tonight at Bladensburg, Acting Coroner Henry O'Neal said last night.

The charred bodies of Leslie McDairies, 27, filling station operator; his wife, Viola, 27, and their two children, Carroll, 5, and Franklin, 3 months, were removed to Gasch's funeral parlors, Hyattsville.

Funeral arrangements are in charge of McDairies' brother, Clarence, 25, of 1519 Isherwood street northeast. Both men have been employed at McLaughlin's service station, 3103 Rhode Island avenue northeast.

The three-room McDairies home was discovered in flames early yesterday by Leonard C. Maker, a neighbor. Maker summoned Mrs. R. S. Harvey, another neighbor, who telephoned the Bladensburg and Hyattsville Fire Departments.

Firemen, however, were unable to get water from the plug on Edmonston road, not far away. It was frozen, they declared, though Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission officials later denied this was the case.

The fire, police said, probably was caused by an overheated kitchen stove.

A co-worker, Thomas Murphy, said he drove McDairies home at midnight.

From the position of the bodies, it is believed Mrs. McDairies, who was sleeping in the front bedroom with her husband and baby, awakened and attempted to escape. Carroll, asleep in a rear bedroom, was believed the first overcome.

Constable Andrew Gasch of Bladensburg is investigating.

Besides his brother, Clarence, McDairies is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. McDairies, of Burlington, N. C.; two other brothers, Oliver, 19, and Murphy, 22, also of Burlington. Mrs. McDairies was from Hendersonville, N. C.

4 Motorists Freed In Fatal Acicdents

One Woman and Two Men Were Victims.

Four men whose automobiles figured in traffic mishaps which resulted in deaths of one woman and two men, were absolved of blame yesterday when the District grand jury refused to indict them.

One of the deaths was that of Jessie M. Townsend, struck while she was walking on the sidewalk at Nineteenth and M streets northwest. Two automobiles came together at the intersection, and one of them, out of control, ran up on the sidewalk. The machines were driven by Clarence S. Ross and Walter H. Beard.

Edwin L. Purschivitz, 24, was cleared of blame in the death of Francis F. Smith, who was struck on Bladensburg road. Horace W. Peters, driver of an automobile that struck and killed Raymond Perkins on Cannecticut avenue, January 1, also was cleared of criminal charges.

R. D. Shure Plays Own Suite Tonight

Music Gives Impressions of Holy Land.

Under auspices of the Composers' Club, R. Deane Shure will give an organ recital tonight in Mount Vernon Place Church at 8:15 o'clock, presenting his own suite, "Twelve Impressions of the Holy Land." T. Eugene West will be the narrator. No admission will be charged.

Mr. Shure has been invited to play this work next August at the Y. M. C. A. in Jerusalem. He presented it recently in Annapolis and Cumberland, Md., and during February and March he has arranged to play the program in Staunton, Buena Vista, Vinton and Williamsburg, Va., Brookland, Atlanta, Ga.; Harrisburg, Pa., and Clarksburg, W. Va.

The twelve movements of the suite are entitled: Shadow Mountain, Cloud on Sinai, Kedron, Brook of Sorrow; Cypress Groves of Lebanon, Voice of the Descending Dove, Assyrian Shepherd, Willow Whisper, Wilderness March, At the Pool of Bethesda, By the Sea of Gallilee, Mount Hermon, In the Garden of Gethsemane.

Accident Victim's Heirs Ask $10,000 Damages

Damages of $10,000 were asked by the seven children of Mrs. Eva B. Stern in Disrtict Supreme Court yesterday because of her death last September from injuries received when struck by a taxicab.

Their petition stated Mrs. Stern was crossing the intersection of Four-and-a-Half and F streets southwest, when a cab of the Independent Taxi Owners Association, Inc., knocked her down. The cab was owned and operated by the association and Leroy Beall, it is claimed.

Home Loan Fee Charge Indicts T. E. Peddicord

Alleged to Have Accepted $38 From Two Women.

Thomas E. Peddicord, 41, was indicted by the District Grand Jury yesterday on charges of accepting fees from two women, on whose behalf he allegedly solicited loans from the Home Owners Loan Corporation. The act of Congress creating the corporation made it illegal to charge for soliciting a loan.

The indictment, in two counts, charges Peddicord with accepting $28 from Mrs. Mary Chandler, 3131 Eleventh street northwest, and $10 from Mrs. Sadie Page, 1626 Swan street northwest.

Detective Sergeant Earl P. Hartmann arrested Peddicord last week after an investigation of complaints by the two women. In a preliminary hearing before United States Commissionuer N. C. Turnage, an admission that the money was received was made, but the contention was advanced that other services rendered by Peddicord resulted in the payments.

District Grocery Stores Pick Staff

Isaac Jacobson Retained as Group President.

Isaac Jacobson was reelected president of the District Grocery Stores, Inc., for the fourth time at a meeting of the organization Monday night at the Jewish Community Center. Other officers chosen include A. Kaufman, first vice president; A. Mostow, second vice president; S. Clipker, third vice president; M. Stearman, secretary and Samuel A Golden, treasurer.

A new board of directors elected includes Morris Blumenthal, Philip Cohen, Frank M. Fields, S. Goldman, Max Hoffman, A. Johnson, Maurice Kay, Samuel Kotz, William Liff, J. L. Wagman and David Winakur.

The District Grocery Stores, Inc., is a cooperative organization unmbering 240 member stores in Washington and its environs. During the administration of Mr. Jacobson these stores have enjoyed a healthy growth and during 1933 warehouse sales to members increased almost $750,000 more than the biggest year in the history of the organization.

Child Troupe Presents 'Cinderella' at Thomson

Thomson Community Center, at Twelfth and L street northwest, will be the scene of an evening of dancing and drama for children at 8 o'clock this evening when "Cinderella" will be presented by a child troupe. The dance will follow.

The play is under the direction of Mrs. Jeanette P. Tolford. Children in the cast of home talent include Johan Henderson, Eleanor Duffield, Betty Lawrence, Gladys Sweeney, Bunny Morris, Martha Mothershead, Majorie Garner and Arline Malone.

Thieves Loot Gas Station.

Safety Factors Enthrall 2,500 At Auto Show

Ultra-Modern Terms Used for Novel Designs Are Significant.

Riding comfort and safety of operation not to be found in any automobile of previous years were among the claims made by representatives of 19 motor car companies to the more than 2,500 Capital motorists attending the Fourteenth Annual Automobile Show in Washington Auditorium last night.

Knee action, axle-flex floating cushion, floating power, air flow, floating ride, aerodynamics, wind sculptured steel, gliding ride, asymmetric lights—these are the terms salesmen are using dramatically, if not too intelligibly, to describe 1934 motor car innovations. What most of them mean to the motorist is more comfort and greater safety and speed.

In every car shown, steering has been vastly improved and gear shifting almost has become a thing of the past. To start the 1934 machine, it is no longer necessary to turn on the switch and step on the starter pedal. In some cars turning on the switch will do. In others, turning the key and pepressing the clutch will start the motor. And in still other makes the starter operates off the accelerator. For cold weather starting, choking the carburetor intake is now automatic.

Motors in all makes are more powerful. They are made so in some cases by increase of bore and stroke; and in others by changing valve sizes or spark plug location, or more efficient cooling, or adoption of a new type of cylinder head. In some cars, the distributor head also may be regulated according to the grade of gasoline used.

Improved spring suspension is responsible for most of the added riding comforts. Front wheels have been suspended separately and rear springs have been softened.

School Misses Calculator.

A calculator, used in figure tabulating at Roosevelt High School, was reported stolen from the school office yesterday. Principal Allan Davis, who made the report, valued the machine at $170. He said it was missing when classes convened yesterday morning.

School Art Overlooked As 60 Paint

Board of Education and Commissioners Still at Loggerheads.

Sixty painters and sculptors were on the job yesterday, decorating the zoo, Walter Reed Hospital, the Navy Building cafeteria and many other institutions, with the compliments of the Civil Works Administration, but public schools were out of the picture.

The schools were one of the principal items scheduled for artistic treatment when the Public Works of Art project was started last December. No work whatever has been undertaken at any of the school buildings, it was learned, because of friction between Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, and the PWAP committee for this region.

None of the officials involved would permit himself to be quoted, but this much was authoritatively learned about the art feud:

Duncan Phillips, director of the Phillips Memorial Art Gallery and chairman of the local PWAP committee, broached the school decoration plans to Dr. Ballou when the program first got under way. He was referred to the District Commsioners.

Made Sketches December 12.

The Commissioners gave Phillips permission to have artists go into the schools and make sketches. That was on December 12.

The Board of Education thought the Commissioners should decide whether the Capital's schools were ripe for Civil Works art. The city fathers thought the board should decide.

With all these negotiations, the matter has never been formally laid before either the Commissioners or Board of Education, The Post learned. At the board's meeting a week from today, it will be formally submitted for consideration, Dr. Ballou said last night.

Several hundred designs for murals, canvases and other works of art have been made, intended for school use and embellishment. If it is decided the schools shall remain aloof and undecorated, this labor will have been for nothing. At least, said a spokesman for the artists, the designs would have to be altered to be useful for other buildings.

If, on the contrary, the Board of Education—or Commissioners—formally decide in favor of this system of brightening the schools, there is a strong possibility it will be too late.

Because funds are dwindling, the committee is hiring no more artists except to fill vacancies. A few new projects were started this week, but they will be executed by men and women now on the pay roll.

Among these new projects are a mural in the Navy Building cafeteria, sketches from life in the city's slums, a mural at Walter Reed Hospital and paintings of workmen and buildings under construction at the Beltsville, Md., experimental farm.

Salaries Being Paid.

Although the PWAP program theoretically was not supposed to exceed beyond February 15, several of the projects now under way were started with the knowledge they could not be completed by that time.

The 60 men and women now employed were selected from 275 applicants. Top salary is $42.50 per week, bottom is $26.50, both minus 10 per cent, as ordered recently.

Schools where designs and sketches were made, but which are still waiting approval and a final aye or nay as to whether the painting or sculpture shall proceed, are McKinley and Eastern High and Gordon Junior High.

Mrs. Sylvia Kauffmann Awarded $400 Monthly

Temporary award of $400 a month for the support of herself and two children was given Mrs. Sylvia B. Kauffmann yesterday by Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue, in District Supreme Court.

The order is effective as of November, 1933. Mrs. Kauffmann was also given temporary custody of the children with the father, Philip C. Kauffmann permitted to visit them.

Seized Liquor to Be Returned If Owners Pay Federal Tax

Liquor Charges Are Nolle Prossed as Officers Face Dismissal.

Several hundred gallons of liquor, representing confiscations by Policemen Rudolph Schleichert and H. B. Bauer, suspended vice squad members, are awaiting claimants at the Federal Warehouse.

Nine cases, involving liquor violations cited by the suspended policemen last year, were nolle prossed in Police Court yesterday. The officers were to have been the Government's chief witnesses.

Liquor seized in a series of raids led by Schleichert and Bauer, will be returned to the owners—providing the new Federal tax is paid. All seized property in the cases will be restored under the court's action. Several confiscated automobiles have already been returned to the owners.

The cases were presented before Judge Ralph Given. They were nolle prossed at the recommendation of Assistant United States Attorney Wilbur Baughman.

Trade Board Tickets For Dinner Sold Out

Sold out!

This was the news given applicants for tickets yesterday to the midwinter dinner of the Washington Board of Trade, to take place next Saturday night at the Willard Hotel.

The dinner will take the form of a tribute to President Roosevelt, who will be the honor guest, and Admiral Byrd, who will speak to the President and board members from the South Pole. The Willard ballroom will be decorated to resemble The Land of the Midnight Sun and an elaborate entertainment program will be presented.

Good morning! Men's clothing prices went down far! Returning those prices to normal will therefore seem to involve a bigger increase than many other prices. But for just a little while longer, our $30 Schloss Clothing are $19.75. Every day counts; select yours today.

School Series Fives Run True to Form as Central and Tech Win

Western and Roosevelt Victims

Games Friday.

Central vs. Tech.
Roosevelt vs. Eastern.

Games Tuesday.

Tech vs. Roosevelt.
Western vs. Eastern.

THE interhigh school race ran true to form yesterday with Tech cutting through in the first fray to defeat Western, 31-25, and Central, showing the best form it has displayed in the series, to wallop Roosevelt, 46-26.

Central, which the dopsers have been picking to fall by the wayside, proved its metal in the game with the riproaring Ruf Riders, of Roosevelt, turned on a wave of basket shooting in the second half of the argument, and breezed through in fine style to win by a goodly 20 points.

Starting with the toot of the timekeeper's whistle, the defending champions rushed through a flock of two-ply shots that registered 20-12 at the half.

Featuring in the breath-taking point-scoring for the Coggins crew were Ramon Navarro Gregorio and King Kong Mandes, the fancy pair of forwards of the team, who, with Buddy Nau, caged a grand total of 42 points during their term on the Tech hardwoods.

For the Roosevelts, Grimm, hefty center, showed the way in a scoring line with 12 points, accounting for the entire 5 points his team scored in the first period of the fray.

In the opener, Tech was anything but a stand-out against the lowly Western team, so the Technicians delegated Josh Billings, elongated center star, to take up the scoring duties. Billings proved to be the game-saver for the Maroon and Gray, tallying 6 field goals and a pair of fouls for 14 points.

The biggest surprise of the day occurred, however, when Coach Cliff Moore, of Western, essayed to leave his first stringers in action until he was fully convinced that the game was lost, in the final minute of play.

Game Close at Half.

Tech flew off to a 8-to-3 first-quarter lead, but the Red and White, with Corcoran and Allen showing great form, rolled up the count at half-time one point behind the Techs, 13 to 12. Numerous fouls marred the play of the game, and it remained for Mister Billings to sink a few shots to speed up the ball game, which he did in fine fashion throughout the third stanza.

Billings scored all of the 8 points that third period for his team.

Terry Is Glad Solons Don't Vote on His Pay

State Capitol, Richmond, Va., Jan. 30 (AP). — If the Virginia General Assembly held the purse strings of the New York Giants, it might have a "hold-out" on its hands in the person of "Memphis Bill" Terry, the first baseman and manager of the world championship baseball team indicated today.

After listening to a debate in the House of Delegates over the salaries to be paid to the proposed Virginia liquor control board, Terry was introduced and expressed his interest in the discussion of the salary "of this poor fellow in the bill" but added, "I'm glad you don't vote on the salary of the manager of the Giants."

Games in Southeast.

Stewart's Pharmacy and Naval Reserve will clash tonight at 8 o'clock in the feature game of the Southeast Community Center League at Hine Junior High School. Waverly Wheeler, who was instrumental in leading the Reserves to the 1933 championship, will appear with the Reserves for the first time this season.

Other league games scheduled are Easton's and Dixie Five at 7 p. m., and Anacostia Business Men and the Blue Eagles at 9 p. m.

Jockey Mills To Quit Track

"HANK" MILLS.

HIALEAH PARK, Jan. 30 (AP). Weight, the bugaboo of all jockeys, has forced "Hank" Mills to hang up his riding tack. Growing fast and unable to combat the laws of nature, Mills decided today to retire as a jockey. He tipped the beam at 119½ pounds in spite of every effort to reduce.

Two years ago, when he startled the racing world with his brilliant riding, "Hank" weighed less than 100 pounds. He is big of bone and has not yet attained his full maturity. Jim Clark, agent for Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons, for whom Mills rode, says Hank will spread out considerably and may weigh 145 pounds this time next year. The youngster, who joined the ranks of the benedicts last fall, will return to his home in Montrose, Colo., where he intends to "rassle cattle on my ranch." He owns several ranches.

Colonial Five Will Oppose West. Md.

Game Only One Scheduled Here Tonight; Hoyas at West Point.

GEORGE WASHINGTON's courtmen will be operating full blast tonight at the G street plant, where they entertain Western Maryland at a formal party scheduled for 8 o'clock. The only other game involving a District team, Georgetown, will be played at West Point, where the Hoyas are to make their annual stand against the Cadets.

Hal Keisel, a smart, polished center, who was to have joined the Colonial squad, will not play tonight, nor in any other game this season, Coach Ted O'Leary announced yesterday. Keisel did not register for the second semester and has not been working out with the team. He will, however, enter G. W. for the fall term and play next season. He is eligible for three years of college basket ball.

Leemans, Stein Out.

With the exception of "Tuffy" Leemans, who has another hurdle to surmount, and Sammy Stein, the squad came through the exams with flying colors, and G. W. will have its full strength available for the Terrors. Howell and Smith, forwards; Noonan, center, and Parrish and Shirley, guards, is the way G. W. will line up. Stein is out for the rest of the year.

Western Maryland has been in this vicinity twice before this season, losing on each occasion. Georgetown turned the trick the first time and Catholic U. followed suit. There is no reason to believe that G. W. will not add another to the chain. The downtown five may be a bit rusty after its lengthy layoff, but not enough to affect this game.

Battle With Terps.

Catholic U.'s dribblers worked out against a zone defense yesterday afternoon and all they have to do is play as poorly against Maryland Friday night to assure themselves of losing. The Freshmen, who used the peculiar defense that is Maryland's strong suit, didn't know much about the system, but it was enough to stop the Cards.

"Fod" Cotton, C. U. mentor, believes Maryland will give C. U. its hardest game of the season and he isn't certain that C. U. will bring home the bacon. Maryland's inconsistent play this season—its potential power—and its unorthodox offense worry Cotton. He looks forward to a real battle, however, even though the Terps may get out in front.

Red Sox Buy, Braves Pat for 1934

Teams Are About Equal; One Spent $400,000, Other, Nothing.

Yawkey Seems to Have Accomplished Little More Than Fuchs.

BOSTON, Jan. 30 (AP).—Probably the most striking contrast of this highly interesting, from a baseball standpoint, winter i sthe widely different courses Boston's two Major League clubs have charted for their 1934 objectives, a first division berth.

The Red Sox, to whom money is no object, have not left a stone unturned in their determined search for new strength, while the Braves have done absolutely nothing. But at this writing both teams apepar to have equal chances to attain the hopes they voice on such sharply contrasting foundations.

Far From Flawless.

After pouring out about $400,000 for the thoroughly tested new material, President Tom Yawkey and General Manager Eddie Collins have built an American League machine that is far from being flawless. In fact these baseball plutocrats, despite their lavish spendings, seem to have accomplished little more than the stand-pat Braves. Both clubs have almost the same good and bad points, highly promising pitching staffs, adequate outfielders, decidedly weak infields and questionable catching.

But neither club can be described as set. Like Yawkey and Collins, owner Emil Fuchs of the Braves is staying awake these nights mapping out plans to out-smart one or more rivals during the coming schedule meetings in New York.

Different With Fuchs.

Since it is only a question of money, the Red Sox probably will be able to finish any deals they start. It is different with Fuchs, for he lacks the means to meet the demands of the other National League magnates and every time he tries to do business, the party of the second part generally pulls him up short by demanding Wally Berger and a couple of his pitching stars for any player who might do the Braves some good.

Despite the fact that the wise men of baseball can't see either club as a first-division contender, it is highly possible that both will reach their destination, a journey that will cost the Red Sox at least $4,000,000 and the Braves compraatively nothing.

Woodberry Rallies To Defeat Fishburne

Woodberry Forest, Va., Jan. 30 (Spl.).—Trailing by three points at half time, Woodberry Forest rallied in the third quarter here today to defeat the Fishburne Military School quintet, 30-to-25.

Bruer, fast-moving guard of the visitors, kept the locals in trouble throughout the initial half when he scored eight points on four goals. In the last half he was held to one point, while Barrow, Williams, and Phelps of the Orange team went to work and snatched victory from the hard fighting Cadets. The winners were outscored in each period except the third.

Jockey Stodard Badly Hurt in Fall

Is Injured Riding Bostwick Horse in England.

Leicester, Eng., Jan. 30 (AP).—Louis E. Stoddard, jr., young American steeplechase rider, tonight was a patient in Private Hospital, Regent road, while an X-ray probed the extent of the injuries he received in a spill at the race track this afternoon.

Riding George H. (Pete) Bostwick's Canute in the Blaby Handicap Steeplechase Stoddard suffered a hard fall when the horse went down with him at one of the obstacles.

At first his injuries were thought to be only minor, but a later examination revealed a broken collarbone and an injury to his thigh. He was taken to the hospital for a thorough X-ray examination.

Nats' 38-Year-Old Rookie Is Son of the Soil in Off-Season

Wide World Photos.

With the memory of three scoreless innings in the world series of 1933 atoning in part for 20 years' pitching service in the bush leagues, Alec McColl, venerable rookie of the Nats, is fondly contemplating his return to the big leagues in the spring. The winter finds him ministering to his 102-acre farm at Geneva, Ohio. At left, is the McColl family group. At right, the son of the soil is pictured in his workaday world. Hallahan Seen Key to Cards' Success

Rickey Predicts Flag if Hurler Readjusts His Mental Prospective.

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 30 (AP).—"Wild Bill" Hallahan, the southpaw with the sweeping curves and terrific speed, is considered the "key" man in the St. Louis Cardinals' drive for the 1934 pennant.

In the words of Branch Rickey, general manager of the far-flung St. Louis baseball system, if "Bill will readjust his mental perspective of pitching, our pennant prospects will be bright indeed."

"There has been much conversation about what the Cardinals can do if they find another hard-hitting outfielder, or if the punch is strengthened," Rickey Commented.

Question of Pitching.

"But I am not perturbed at all over the hitting question. We have the hitters. The averages prove that conclusively. And we have the defense. In my opinion it is a question of pitching.

"I'd say the greatest disappointment this club has suffered in many years was the way our pitching staff failed in 1933.

"I consider Hallahan the key man as we look forward to the 1934 campaign. If he will readjust his mental perspective of pitching and pitch as he did when he was helping the Cardinals to pennants in 1930 and 1931, our pennant prospects will be bright indeed."

Last year Hallahan tried to outsmart the batters. His attempt to substitute cunning and brains for the product of his strong left arm failed. Rickey hopes for a return of his old style of throwing in 1934.

Giants Called Dangerous.

Rickey believes the surprising New York Giants will be dangerous. They "should be good for about two more years," he added, but explained that "after a year or two of success and the banking of a little stake, players become money-conscious, they compare their lot with that of others. Team morale suffers."

"But," Rickey hastened to continue, "I'll say that if the pitching measures up to batting and fielding strength, we'll give St. Louis another pennant in 1934."

Mount Airy Triumphs.

Frederick, Md., Jan. 30 (Spl.). Mount Airy took the measure of Walkersville in an exhibition county league soccer game before a large crowd at Mount Airy, 5 to 3. The teams battled on even terms in the first period, both sides chalking up 2 points. Mount Airy braced in the final half and scored 3 points to 1 for its rivals. Penn, Scheel, Harrison and Dornheim made field goals for the winners.

Bethesda-C. C. Beats Wash-Lee High, 24-15

Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School regained its winning ways yesterday when it defeated Washington-Lee's tossers by a score of 24-15 on the Bethesda court. The winners obtained the lead in the first half and were never threatened.

Royer, with nine points, led the winners, while McGowan, who scored eight, was best for the losers.

Marvels of Hypnotism

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, Jan. 30 (Spl.).—This department is still pursuing the memoirs of M. Leon See with interest and avidity, awaiting the great revelation still to come of chicanery, skulduggery and villainy in the campaign to popularize the giant Primo Carnera. Mons. See has a way of leading you right up to the bedroom door and then abandoning you at that point, or letting you down with the remark in effect, "And then they sat up all night and played dominoes."

In a recent installment, Mons. See revealed that it had been his wish at the time of Carnera's first appearance in the United States, against Big Boy Paterson in Madison Square Garden, that Carnera expunge his opponent with a right uppercut to the tip of the chin. At this point the canny editor inserted the "to be continued tomorrow" line, but the next day there was nothing about how Mons. See set about to accomplish his fell purpose. Perhaps I was supposed to read between the lines. It seems like too much trouble. I like to be told.

However, as everybody knows who attended that hilarious debut in the Garden, the big boy was not levelled by any punch on the chin from Carnera. I recall that Peterson, to save all hands from terrific embarrassment, had to commit public pugilistic hari kari.

When it became apparent to Peterson that Carnera was so unskilled that he was unable to deliver the blow arranged for by Mons. See, and when it also became apparent that the watchful eyes of the boxing commission were bent upon him and he could not collapse from a nothing punch, he solved the dilemma by rapping himself smartly on the chin with his own truty rgiht hand and taking the full count. There is nothing, or was nothing, in the commission rules at the time against a fighter using mental suggestion as an aid in subduing a foe, so nothing was said. Peterson could always claim that Carnera or Leon See hynotized him into administering the lethal blow to himself.

Not half enough has been written any where about the large part that hypnosis, mesmerism and auto-suggestion played in Primo's first American campaign. Charlatans of hypnotism will look you in the eye and give you the hocus-pocus, but scientists will tell you that small, round shiny or bright objects are of aid in bringing a subject under the hypnotic state, and I understand that it is this scientific fact of which certain parties availed themselves in assisting La Preem to his present state of pugilistic eminence.

These parties would, upon occasion, enter the dressing room of an opponent of Carnera and display certain small, round shiny objects. It was found that practically anybody, but particularly Senegambians, were subject to this form of hypnosis. The parties merely reversed the usual formula and instead of saying—"You are going to sleep, you are going to sleep for a long time, your are going to lose this evening," suggested, "You are going to lose this evening, or your are going to sleep for a long, long time."

One Senegambian who found himself gazing quite hpynotized down the small black hole in the center of one of these small, shiny objects is said to have observed—"Ma goodness. Ah sho feels mahself open to suggestion. Whatever you say, boss, whatever you say. You say ah loses, ah feels mahself on the verge of a knockout right now. Wuld yo-all lak to have me on mah back, or will ah take it face fust?"

I have seen it maintained by low-minded and cynical persons that some of the bright and shiny articles, small bands of brass worn over the hands to protect the knuckles of the wearer from abrasion should they come in contact with the face of any unfriendly person, and other of these glittering articles chambered for slugs of various caliber, were of themselves persuasive and that hypnotic suggestions came only as an afterthought, but I do not think this is so.

As one party who was caught fondling an automatic in a dressing room very ably explained it, that was merely what the doctors and scientists called automatic suggestion, and he was merely in there as this boxer's friend to keep him from doing himself and his heir an irretrievable injury.

Mons. See has promised to tell something in his next issue about Carnera's battle with Ace Clark, and I can not wait for the edition to appear. As I recall, the Ace, a giant Philadelphia Zulu, was doing a swell job of shellacking Carnera and had managed to inflict a magnificent injury to Carnera's eye, one that caused the referee to make motions as though he were about to stop the bout and award the duke to the Ace. Of a sudden the Ace was seen to go into a trance and murmur—"Oh, oh, I am hypnotized. I am no longer Ace Clark the great heavyweight pugilist. I am now a little white rabbit just hatched out from the egg. Tweet-tweet, tweet-tweet."

I have always been curious o know whether any bright and shiny objects were used to further this remarkable hypnosis.

Blaeholder Deal Out.

St. Louis, Jan. 30 (AP).—A firm "no" to all trade talk involving George Blaeholder is the answer of Louis B. Von Weise, president of the St. Louis Browns, to recurrent reports that the big right-handed pitcher might go to the New York Yankees. "Blaeholder will be retained by the Browns," Von Weise said today.

McLarnin-Ross Bout Nearer Reality

Foster to Come East Soon to Hold Conference With Promoters.

NEW YORK, Jan. 30 (AP).—Negotiations for a welterweight championship bout between Jimmy McLarnin and Barney Ross, lightweight title holder, moved forward today when it became known that "Pop" Foster, McLarnin's manager, would come East within the next three weeks to confer with milk fund promoters.

Foster already has been offered a guarantee of $35,000 for the match, which would be held in an outdoor stadium here May 23. He is favorably inclined toward the offer, but may seek a higher guarantee, perhaps $50,000, with the privilege of taking a champion's percentage on the "gate," 37½ per cent.

Ross, who made an impressive showing here last week in decisively outpointing the welterweight veteran, Billy Petrolle, is definitely committed on the match. He has accepted terms and promised to post the $35,000 guarantee.

Ted Clark Just Lasts In New Orleans Feature

New Orleans, Jan. 30 (AP).—Mrs. Clyde Van Dusen's Ted Clark barely lasted to win by a head over Mrs. R. T. Flippen's Malimou in the sixth event at the Fair Grounds today, the best offering of a featureless card. G. Travis' Euryalus was third.

Ted Clark broke well, opened a wide lead, tired suddenly in the stretch but held on gamely to head Malimou. Latter followed the pace closely and easily took the place honors by two lengths from the fast-closing Euryalus.

The winner paid $8 for a $2 ticket in the mutuels and ran the distance in 1:48 flat.

Illness Postpones Painted Horse Case

Charles Town, W. Va., Jan. 30 (Spl.).—Postponement until Tuesday of the contempt of court charges against Constable Merle E. Alger, charged with violating court orders in disposing of Hustle Over, so-called painted horse, was ordered today by Circuit Court Judge D. H. Rogers. Illness in the family of Forrest W. Brown, attorney for Alger, was given as the reason.

Contempt charges have been issued against both Alger and Michael Krock, claimant of the horse, but no summons has been served on Krock because of lack of knowledge as to his whereabouts. Alger is alleged to have released the race horse to Krock after Judge Rogers had awarded ownership of the animal to Shenandoah Jockey Club in a recent law suit.

Friedman Is Reported Accepting C.C.N.Y. Job

New York, Jan. 30 (AP).—The Evening Post today says Benny Friedman, former all-American quarter back at Michigan and for several years a leading professional player, has accepted the post of head football coach at City College and that official announcement of his appointment will be made February 1.

The paper said its information was that Friedman will be appointed a tutor in the department of hygiene at $4,000 a year and that he will receive an additional $2,500 from an alumni fund.

The office of President F. G. Robinson of the college admitted negotiations were being carried on with Friedman, but denied an agreement.

Open Tennis Opposed by Johnson

Pros Only Would Benefit, "Little Bill" Declares.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 30 (AP). Three internationally known members of the amateur tennis ranks spoke their minds today on an "open tournament" idea to give a striking cross-section view of what leaders in the sport think of the agitation to let simon pures match strokes with professionals.

Strangely enough, an "open tournament for men" is favored by two famed women players, whereas a male star who made tennis history for more than a decade is strongly opposed to the plan.

Helen Wills Moody, present Wimbledon champion and seven times holder of the American title, thinks a men's open tournament "would be all right." So does Anna McCune Harper, first National ranking player in 1930.

Johnston Says "No."

Tilden, now the country's best-known pro, is the stanchest proponent of an open tournament.

"I'm opposed to an open tournament," said Johnston. "Let the amateurs keep to their side of the fence and the professionals to theirs. From the standpoint of the United States Lawn Tennis Association I think it would be a big mistake if the association sanctioned an open tournament.

"The argument that an open tournament is held in golf does not hold water. Golf was introduced, or at least popularized, in this country by professionals. It is just the reverse in tennis. Until recently, all the good tennis players were amateurs.

Present Condition Temporary.

"The amateur association should function as an amateur body. There should be no change in its constitution. Another argument by those favoring open tournaments is that all the good players are in the pro ranks now. This is only a temporary condition. Another group of strong amateurs will be coming up soon.

"Open tournaments would be to the financial benefit of the pros. But I can not see where it would aid the amateurs. They get all the playing experience necessary as it is. As I see it, open tournaments would merely serve to encourage professional tennis.

"I have many friends in the pro ranks and believe the game has a definite place on the sport calendar. If an open tournament is put over it will be the tennis association's own fault for not taking care of some cities, such as Philadelphia, with a National championship."

Too Few Women Pros.

Mrs. Moody believes a woman open tournament will always be out of the question because of the scarcity of women pros, but thinks a men's open could be worked out if it did not conflict with the big amateur events.

"Of course, it would have to be tried out," Mrs. Moody said. "With so many good players in the professional ranks now, an open tournament might be interesting. It would have its best chance if held indoors, during the winter. The Davis Cup play and National tournaments take up too much time in the summer to permit an open tournament."

Mrs. Harper said she saw "no objection to an open tournament."

"I believe it would improve the game and would create interest in it," she said. "Of course there would have to be a clear distinction between the amateurs and professionals, so that an amateur would not suffer loss of social prestige. I think it would be a great step for tennis."

Wash-Lee, V. P. I. Shift Court Game to Feb. 8

Lexington, Va., Jan. 30 (AP).—Because of a heavy schedule, Washington and Lee's basket ball team has asked and received permission from Virginia Tech to postpone the game scheduled at Lexington Thursday, athletic authorities announced today.

The game will be played February 8.

At the same time it was announced that the faculty committee had agreed to redesignating Lynchburg as the place for the Washington and Lee-Duke game next Monday.

U. S. Women Win.

London, Jan. 30 (AP).—The United States team of women squash racquets players which lost its first series yesterday to the Queen's Club today defeated an International Sportsmen's Club team of women four to two. The seventh contest was postponed until evening.

The Pelican Staves Off Gallant Bid of Feudal Lord to Win Feature at Hialeah

$5.40 Choice Victorious By Inches

Idle Victory Scores to Set New Track Mark; Inflate Triumphs.

HIALEAH PARK, Jan. 30 (AP). Joseph E. Widener's consistent sprinter, The Pelican, turned in a fast and courageous race to win the Franklin D. Roosevelt purse, feature of a program dedicated to the birthday of the Nation's Chief Executive here this afternoon. With Kansas Johnny Gilbert riding his hardest to score a double, The Pelican lasted to beat J. E. Smallman's Feudal Lord by an inch or so. Eight lengths back, the Jersey stable's Character was an easy third over the sluggish Gold Step, favorite in the six-horse field.

The Pelican was a close second choice, paying $5.40. He completed his trip in 1:11 3-5. There was a decided chill in the air, but this did not stop another large crowd from visiting the course.

Gold Step Fades.

Gold Step broke on top for Earl Porter, but he quickly faded back and failed to show any of his usual speed. The Pelican, running back to his fine effort of opening day, when he finished second to Clarify, in the Hialeah Inaugural, took the lead and ran Character into defeat. The winner held a 3-length advantage after straightening out in the stretch, but Feudal Lord, never far away, suddenly charged on the leader and made it a battle. The Pelican stuck to his guns and made Feudal Lord "hang" in the final strides.

Inflate and Escadron ran away from the field in the curtain raiser and staged a pretty duel for the entire seven furlongs, the former earning a nose decision. Escadron beat Playful Martha by 5 lengths for the place. The little Canadian apprentice, Eddie Litzenberger, put up a strong finish on Inflate to take the purse after his mount had gamely held on to a slight advantage from the start. Inflate paid $21.10.

Idle Victory Wins.

Idle Victory, brown daughter of Victorian, owned by George Willing, jr., showed a world of speed in leading 15 other maiden juveniles down the 3 furlong straightaway in the second event. In front all the way, Idle Victory made the sensational time of 0:33 2-5 for a new track record. The filly clipped two-fifths of a second off the mark created by Wise Daughter. The wind was behind the $4.60 choice, which helped her to make such dazzling time. Below Zero, a field horse, was the chief contender from the start and was beaten a length while saving the place by a half length from Mrs. Fab.

North Mill justified the short odds of $3.70 for $2 hung up against his chances in the third contest. The gelding rushed to the front in the first furlong and, opening up a substantial advantage, gave his backers no cause for alarm. Terrier made up ground gradually under Laverne Fator and was an easy second, three lengths behind and a like margin in advance of Singing Heart.

Indian Salute Scores.

Indian Salute had the best of a blanket finish in the fourth, getting up in the closing strides to win by a half a length at $28.80 for $2. Flaghorn and Aunt Flo were next in line, also a half-length apart, while Davoc was a close fourth.

Aunt Flo led the field for 6 furlongs, after which Flaghorn drove to the front. Little Francis Maschek brought Indian Salute through on the inside and, under strong urging, the son of Durbar II, overtook the two leaders a few strides from the finish.

E. R. Bradley's Blessed Event recently set a new mile track record of 1:35 4-5, chalked up his third straight success in the sixth event, completing the mile in 1:37 flat, to score by a length and a half, handily. Big Red nosed out Sabula for the place. Sabula and Big Red ran themselves into defeat, while Blessed Event was rated to the head of the stretch. The $3.30 choice forged to the front at the furlong pole and drew away.

Caerleon, with Porter up, led by a wide margin all the way, to win the final contest by four lengths, at $26.10 for $2. Spartan Lady was second, with Resisting third.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

Moulai Ismail, famous Sultan of Morocco, who is noted for his inhuman treatment of Christian slaves, was clever enough to make good use of his slaves. As Europeans, most of them fighting men, they knew more than the sultan's own men about some phases of warfare. Accordingly, he did not hesitate to make use of them as instructors—but at the same time he did not hesitate to murder them when they served his purpose better dead.

An illustration of the latter is found in his notorious bridge of bodies which he built so that his men might cross a swollen stream. The slaves accompanying the army were killed, and their bodies woven together with weeds to make a crossing for the sultan's troops.

Strange as it seems, almost every part of the cow is used in construction of a modern airplane. The milk furnishes casein from which is made some of the best grades of glue known. Another type of glue is made from the blood, this being used widely in plywood, while the bone and hoofs furnish "hot" glue.

The hair is made into felt for padding and sound deadening. Hides are used for coverings, straps and lacings. Gut is used for netting in parcel racks and for chair seats.

And if the stewardess serves you a beef sandwich that accounts for the rest of the cow.

Hialeah Race Track, Jan. 30.

Dear Al:

The combination of Barnacle Bill Bennings and Clocker Mike did a fair day's work today. Mike was in particulary good rooting form and between the two of us we managed to lure three winners to the counting block. Mike went down to the paddock and talked to Idle Victory just before that one stepped home. He was over at the six-furlong chute whispering to North Mill and the horse glided in by two lengths. He went up to the stretch turn in the Blessed Event race and the Bradleyite listened to his pleas for winner No. 3. Of course, he failed me on the other four occasions but, everything considered, he did well for a reformed jinx. And in addition, he was out at sunrise with his watch, trying to unearth some speedy 2-year-olds. All in all, it was a busy day for Mike. In fact, he was so lively I had half a mind to take him over to the paddock for a saliva test.

BILL.

First race—Pardee comes to this race after giving the clockers an eyefull in morning trials. Said to be at tops and ready to take the measure of the opposition offered at this mile. Boy Crazy gets in with feather weight and is dangerous. Everfair might make a money appearance.

Second race—Migrate has as much right getting home in front as anything this field of baby racers shows. Blue Cat ran a promising race last out and improvement would make the top one hustle to win. Tabitha for the show end.

Third race—Black Mock draws only 102 pounds and meets a fair field. This way weighted, I'm not looking elsewhere for the winner. Salisbury for the place ahead of Bun D. Clocker Mike has the last named as a warm tip but if he wiggles into the pay I will be surprised.

Fourth race—Cabouse, 116 pounds nad all, figures to have an edge on this group of sprinters. Bartering Kate will have Meade in the saddle and should be closest at the finish line. Bitty Bit for the minor award.

Fifth race—Flying Sailor is as speedy as his name implies. A fast breaker, this fellow will have to be caught before the winning end of the purse goes to another. Coequel displayed a sizzling effort last olt. The lightly weighted Sassafras to take care of the others.

Sixth race—Clarify is the natural choice among these. He is asked to carry 116 pounds and appears capable of the assignment. His inaugural victory was a beaut. If there is a major upset I look for Quel Jeu to turn the trick. This one had poor racing luck in the opening day feature. Monel for the rest.

Seventh race—Traffic Judge is as sharp as hands can make him. Showed me that he is his old self in that last outing. Carries only a steadying impost. Voltamaid comes off a good workout with 103 pounds and is dangerous. Gracias is the sleeper, Mike tells me.

Tunney May Referee Virginia-Yale Bouts

Richmond, Va., Jan. 30 (AP).—Jimmy Driver, graduate manager at the University of Virginia, said today there was a heavy demand for tickets to the Virginia-Yale boxing meet here February 17, indicating the strong possibility of a sell-out. The bouts will be held at the Mosque which can accomodate 5,000 persons.

He discussed the possibility of Gene Tunney coming to Richmond to referee but said there was "nothing certain about it." Tunney, he said, has promised to referee the bouts if he is in this country at the time. The former champion is understood to be in British Columbia now.

Pirates' Boss Sees Pennant This Year

Team as Good as In, Says Benswanger; Looks for Six-Team Race.

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 27 (AP).—Far be it from William E. Benswanger to force his views on unbelievers, but the youthful-looking admiral of the Pittsburgh Buccaneers freely admits his team is as good as any in the National League.

"Last year I said we were entering the season with high hopes. We finished second like the year before," said he today.

"This year I'll say we are entering the season with higher hopes. Now, just where should that land us?"

The "admiral" is a son-in-law of the late Barney Dreyfuss, and assumed his rank two years ago after Dreyfuss' death. Only 40 years old, looking at least five years younger, Benswanger is distinctly of the new order in baseball.

Six-Team Scramble.

Benswanger said he sees the National League race as a six-team scramble—with the Pirates, Cubs, Giants, Cardinals, Boston Braves and the Brooklyn Dodgers doing most of the scrambling.

"The other two, Cincinnati and Philadelphia, are so changel I don't believe anyone can figure them on them at this time," he said. "But both may be menaces if they can combine the proper spirit."

The Pirate boss believes Sunday ball at home will be an aid to the club, but is uncertain about the effects of the new ball. He said:

"Gibson is of the opinion that if there has been no publicity, few of the players or fans could have detected the change. Wagner, (Honus, the coach) thinks it will help the heavy hitters and handicap the slow infielders and slow ball pitchers.

Best Batting Club.

"We had the best batting club in the league last year. If there is any change, I think we will benefit as much or more than any team."

Benswanger thinks the addition of Red Lucas to the pitching staff will be a great aid, pointing out that Lucas has never worked on a winning ball club. He admits he is giving more attention to second base than any other position.

"However, we played the best ball of the season last year with Thevenow there," he added. "He's still with the club. Of course, I won't say we aren't trying to strengthen the position, but if we don't, I'm willing to start with what we have."

Grid Coaches to Stand Pat On Rules, Lou Little Feels

NEW YORK, Jan. 30 (U.P.).—America's football coaches are satisfied with the present code and will adopt a standpat attitude in the rules committee meeting in Atlanta next month, in the opinion of Lou Little, coach of the Columbia Rose Bowl championship team, and chairman of the coaches' rules committee. The coaches will meet here Saturday to decide upon recommendations to be made to the general rules body at its February 9 meeting.

"Various suggestions have come in from all over the country," Little said today. "Obviously, some of them have merit. But I believe the general reaction of the committee Saturday will be to move slowly and give any recommended change plenty of thought."

Little said he felt that some of football's past troubles were due to a tendency to make too many rules.

Declared Unwise.

"The tendency," he said, "when something went wrong, was to become panicky and make wholesale changes. The rules right now, in the opinion of most coaches, are in such a balanced state as to make radical changes not only unnecessary but unwise."

The coaches committee will open its Saturday meeting at 10 o'clock at the New York Athletic Club. This committeee has no legislative power but its recommendations generally find weight with the football rules committee of which Walter Okeson is chairman.

Little, incidentally, is chairman of the coaches advisory committee which will sit with the football rules committee in Atlanta. Other members of that group are Noble Kizer, of Purdue; Orin Hollingberry, of Washington State, and Percy Locey, of the University of Denver.

Among the changes listed for consideration by the coaches are:

1. Permit forward passes from any place behind the line of scrimmage.
2. Return the goal posts to the goal line.

Dead Ball Rule.

3. Abolish the dead ball rule which prevents the ball carrier from continuing his run after any part of his body except his hands or feet touch the ground.
4. Increase the side-line zone from 10 to 15 yards.
5. Abolish the fumble rule which prevents the defensive player from running with a fumble.
6. Permit a team on windy days to surrender the ball 25 yards down the field in lieu of a punt, provided it is within its own 20-yard line.
7. Alolw a forward pass in the end zone to be ruled an incomplete pass instead of a touchback, except on fourth down.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—INFLATE, $21.10, $8, $5.40; ESCADRON, $4, $3.50; PLAYFUL MARTHA, $7.

INFLATE, showing sudden improvement, broke fast, was sent to the front, displayed good speed, held on gamely and just lasted to win. ESCADRON was hustled along all the way and ran a good race. PLAYFUL MARTHA was in close quarters in early part, came with a rush in stretch. DAVID W. was unable to keep up at any part of the race. APPAMATTOX closed a big gap. GRAYBACK was outrun.

SECOND RACE—Nursery course. Three furlongs (straightway). Purse, $700; claiming prices, $2,500 to $3,000. For maiden 2-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:49. Two-dollar mutuels paid—IDLE VICTORY, $4.60, $2.70, $2.50; BELOW ZERO, $3.70, $2.80; MRS. FAB, $6.40.

IDLE VICTORY broke very fast and went running right away. Sprinted into lead, ran straight and, displaying great speed, held on well. BELOW ZERO, away very good, was hustled along and ran a fair race. MRS. FAB, a bit slow to get into the stride, closed with a rush on the inside. QUERY, well up all the way, ran an improved race. SYNOD got away well, but was unable to keep up in early part. CANTERBOY showed a good effort. MICKEY DO worth noting.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $700; claiming price, $2,500. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place same. Went to post at 3:23½. Off at 3:29½. Winner, G. Riley's ch. s. Two-dollar mutuels paid—NORTH MILL, $3.70, $2.70, $2.40; TERRIER, $6.50, $4.70; SINGING HEART, $3.90.

NORTH MILL much the best. He was sent to the front with a rush and under steady restraint drew away easily in stretch. TERRIER moved up with a rush in stretch and was next best. SINGING HEART broke fast, showed good speed and held on well. CLAREMONT finished fast. GRANNY'S TRADE had no mishap. PANA FRANKA showed excellent early speed. LONGFORD was outrun.

FOURTH RACE—One mile (chute). Purse, $800; claiming price, $2,000. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:55½. Off at 3:58. Winner, A. Z. Silvert's br. c. Stocks' Drive Upward Defies Profit-Taking

New Highs Scored as List Rises 1.1 Points; Sales, 4,262,790 Shares.

New York, Jan. 30 (AP).—Stocks plowed through the heaviest trading since July today with the trend still upward.

Extreme gains, mostly noticeable in rails, were leveled by realizing, but the net change for the 90-stock composite was a gain of 1.1 points, putting the final figure at 90, against last July's top of 96.9. Sales totaled 4,262,790 shares, the biggest volume since July 21, when the market had a sharp break.

The top-stock industrial average of Standard Statistics Co. closed at 101.8, compared with its 1933 high of 102.1. Chart followers are watching this group closely, since a definite piercing of last year's upper level would be regarded as an important bullish symptom. Some believe considerable resistance around current levels is to be expected and market movements for the next few days will be studied closely.

New High Recordsd.

Many new highs for the past year or longer were scattered through the list. Among the issues thus to distinguish themselves were General Motors, Douglas Aircraft, Curtiss-Wright, Standard Oil of New Jersey, United Drug, Allied Chemical, Du Pont, Electric Autolite, International Nickel, Sears-Roebuck and Bendix Aviation.

Rails, however, displayed the greatest vigor, especially in the later dealings. Union Pacific jumped more than 4, while New York Central, Baltimore & Ohio, Santa Fe, Pennsylvania, Illinois Central, Southern Railway and Lackawanna rose 1 to 2 or so. Motor and aviation issues again progressed, oils and foods found their market livelier and stronger.

Woolworth's 1933 earnings, equal to $2.94 a share against $2.27 in 1932, apparently helped stimulate chain store listings, which were active and firm. In oils, Socony-Vacuum and Standard of New Jersey offered strong leadership. General Motors touched 40⅝ and Chrysler 58, the latter failing by a point and a half to reach its 1933 top. Most of the industrials closed under their highs for the day, but rails held up better. Utilities were still rather quiet.

U. S. Steel Dividend.

The U. S. Steel Corporation's fourth quarter resulted in a loss of $7,945,445 after allowances for depreciation, taxes, &c. This was larger than the third quarter's deficiency, Chairman Taylor pointing out that operations for the period, on the basis of finished product output, had been 23 per cent less than in last year's third interval.

The comparison with 1932, however, was favorable, for in that period the corporation had net loss of $16,729,368.

Mr. Taylor thought that the improvement in demand for steel, reflected in a reduction of approximately 50 per cent in the corporation's 1933 deficit as compared with 1932, could be expected to continue.

Monetary Bill Signed.

The Presidential signature was affixed to the monetary bill, but it was said that dollar devaluation and establishment of the two billion dollar exchange control fund would await transfer of Federal Reserve gold to the Treasury.

Sterling reacted moderately; there was littde change for other currencies. Wall Street is expecting that stabilization conservations with Great Britain, at least, will not be long delayed.

Net operating income for the country's class one railroads last month apparently topped November's, whereas December usually sees a decrease. Gross, however, was lower.

Glass Plant to Resume Work.

Newark, Ohio, Jan. 30 (AP).—The Newark plant of the Owens-Illinois Glass Co. will resume operations as soon as alterations now being made are completed, officials said today. The plant fabricates products for the industrial materials division of the concern. It has been closed for several years.

Report That Sumner Municipal Bankruptcy Bill Is Again to Come Before Congress Raises Hopes of Constructive Action in This Field.

By Ralph West Robey.

Congress again, according to reports, soon will take up the problem of municipal indebtedness through a renewed consideration of the Sumner bankruptcy bill. This measure, it may be recalled, received considerable attention in the special session of Congress last spring and summer and, in fact, was passed by the House. The Senate, however, failed to be impressed with the need for such legislation and consequently did not take any action. Since then, it is said, an immense amount of data have been collected showing the desirability of such a bill with the result that its proponents are hopeful of getting something done at this time.

It always has been somewhat of a mystery why the new Administration let this major financial problem go untouched in its legislative program of last spring and summer. Something was done on, or for, almost every other kind of debt. At no other point, however, was the burden of any greater or of any more importance than in the case of municipalities. Not only was the total debt in thousands of cases proving unbearable, but as well a large percentage of the bonds representing such debts were held by savings banks and other institutional investors. The problem, accordingly, had a social significance that reached quite beyond the immediate suffering or inconvenience that might result from a municipal default.

All Kinds of Panaceas Were Offered as Solutions.

Needless to say, out of this situation came all kinds of trick panaceas. Some people insisted that the debts simply should be taken over by the Federal Government through an exchange of its obligations for the bonds of municipalities. Others held that a simpler method would be for the Federal Government just to guarantee the municipal obligations, some maintaining that the guarantee need cover only interest payments, others that it should include both interest and principal. Still others insisted that the best and quickest means for meeting the problem would be to declare a blanket reduction in all municipal debts—what had been a $1,000 debt becoming, say, only a $500 debt.

In the case of the supporters of the Sumner bill an entirely different approach was made. This group accepted as its starting point the thesis that in many instances the debt could not be paid and consequently that an adjustment would have to be made. The big problem was to find a means whereby such an adjustment could take place with the greatest possible efficiency and the least possible unfairness to all concerned. It was not, as they saw it, a matter of dragging in Federal guarantees, and thereby making a class of preferred creditors out of holders of municipal obligations, but of devising a plan for hastening a settlement without any attempt to cover up losses.

First Problem Was To Bring Minorities to Terms.

On the basis of this approach it immediately was apparent that the first thing to do was to eliminate the possibility of a minority defeating a plan upon which a large majority of the holders of a city's bonds were agreed was fair and the best that could be devised. As it is now the power of such a minority is out of all proportion to relative financial interest. With a bond issue of $10,000,000 in default the holders of $9,500,000 may agree upon a plan of reorganization only to have it thrown in the junk heap because the holders of the other $500,000 do not like it.

Fundamentally all the Sumner bill tries to do is to prevent minorities from having such an overwhelming power. It is not a question of trying to force them into an untenable position but of making them accept the judgment of a majority that is sufficiently large to assure the terms are as good as can be obtained. Such a change in our bankruptcy laws for municipalities, it seems to me, is manifestly fair and just. The only point that needs to be watched is that the required majority is sufficiently large to assure that it does not over-rule the objections of a reasonable minority.

Foreign Markets.

London—A more cheerful tone was registered on the stock exchange today. Gilt-edged securities, oil, shares, transatlantic issues and distillery stocks met with good support at hardening prices, while industrial and mining shares yielded on profit taking. The market closed steady.

Paris—The better tone in the Wall street market helped to strengthen prices on the bourse. Rentes, however, drooped slightly. The closing was irregular.

Berlin—After an active opening, prices on the boerse developed irregularity, some issues declining fractionally. Quotations, however, recovered later, and although some irregularity remained, the closing tone was cheerful.

Bond Market Pushes Higher On Wide Front

Rails Lead in Popularity as Sales Mount to $21,055,000.

New York, Jan. 30 (AP).—Broad and active trading, especially in the so-called secondary groups, was the feature of today's bond market.

With gains of 1 to 3 or more points predominating, sales totaled $21,055,000, par value, against $15,299,000 yesterday.

The average for 60 domestic corporate issues advanced half a point to a new 1934 high at 81.9. That for 20 industrials reached its highest since 1931.

Sales Laid to Traders.

Traders, rather than investors, apparently accounted for the largest proportions of the turnover, as prime investment bonds did little or nothing. Although the U. S. Government list firmed 1-32 to 10-32 of a point, transfers here amounted to only about $1,200,000 compared with $1,700,000 yesterday.

Just how much enthusiasm was engendered by final Congressional action on the President's gold bill, continued betterment in business and a more even flow of international dollar rates was a matter of conjecture. Part of the increased demand was attributed to sympathy with stocks.

Heaviest trading occurred in the rail section. Denver & Rio Grande loans rallied 1½ to 3⅜ points, more than canceling their losses of yesterday following deferment of February 1 interest on the general 5s.

On Rising List.

International Great Northern Lines were up 1 to 4 and those of Illinois Central gained 1 to 3. New Orleans Great Northern 5s advanced 5⅝, Rio Grande Western first and collateral 4s were up 5 each and Western Pacific first 5s recovered 4 points.

The most active carriers, with gains of 1 to 2 or more, included some issues of Baltimore & Ohio, Canadian Pacific, St. Paul, Chicago & North Western, Missouri Pacific, N. Y. Central, Nickel Plate, Southern Pacific and Wabash.

Prices were shaded a bit by late realizing.

Utilities and Industrials.

Among the best utilities and industrials were American & Foreign Power 5s, up 1¾; American I. G. Chemical 5½s, up 2; American Rolling Mill 5s, up 1¼; Columbia Gas 5s of 1961, up 2⅛; Goodrich 6s, up 1; International Telephone 5s, up 1; International Mercantile Marine 6s, up 2½; Murray Body, 6½s, up 4¾; National Dairy 5¼s, up 1¼; North American 5½s, up 2¼; Postal Telegraph 5s, up 1; Skelly Oil 5½s, up 2⅝; United Drug 5s, up 2¼; U. S. Rubber 5s, up 3½; Vanadium 5s, up 3, and Warren Bros. 6s, up 5.

Foreign obligations generally participated in the recovery. Bonds of Argentina gained 1 to 4 and issues of Germany, Poland, Dutch East Indies, Switzerland, France, Brazil and Sao Paulo rallied 1 to 2 or more.

Stocks—Further new highs were recorded by stocks as the market plowed through the heaviest trading since July. Gains averaged 1.1 points. Rails led the advance. Realizing was defied. Sales volume increased to 4,262,790 shares.

Bonds—Broad and active trading drove the bond market to higher ground. Gains averaged a half point. Twenty industrials reached the highest mark since 1931. Sales volume mounted to $21,055,000.

Curb—Heavy trading resulted in moderate gains on the curb. Aircraft issues were in demand. Alcohols and metals gained. Sales increased in volume to 551,000 shares.

Wheat—Values advanced for the fourth consecutive day. Early gains were wiped out by profit taking, but late rallies, stimulated by the new gold act, resulted in net gains. Oats were higher; corn lost. May wheat sold at 92⅞; July, at 91⅛.

Cotton—Early advance in prices was cut short by realizing. May sold at 11.49. The general market declined 2 to 5 points. March sold at 11.33.

Rubber—Crude rubber futures closed easy, 35 to 45 points lower. March sold at 10.02; May, at 10.31.

Steel Declares 50 Cent Return On Preferred

Usual Dividend Maintains Reduced Rate Established Last Year.

New York, Jan. 30 (AP).—Directors of the United States Steel Corporation today declared a dividend of 50 cents a share on the preferred stock. A similar amount was paid in each quarter since January last year, when the rate was reduced from $1.75 quarterly.

The corporation reported total earnings of $5,537,084 for the final quarter of 1933 after ordinary operating expenses, compared with $17,816,832 for the third quarter and deficit of $3,828,272 for the December quarter in 1932.

After interest, depreciation, depletion, overhead expenses on iron ore, &c., deficit for the quarter was $7,945,445 compared with deficits of $2,717,014 in the September quarter and $16,729,368 in the December quarter in 1932.

Deduction Advances.

After provision for the preferred dividend, the total deduction from surplus for the December quarter was $9,746,850 compared with $4,-518,419 for the three months ended September 30 and $18,530,773 for the final quarter of 1932.

The dividend on the preferred shares is payable February 27 to stock of record February 1.

A statement issued by the company said that for the year 1933 "net deficit in income account after all charges but before dividends was $36,519,000 against $71,176,000 in the preceding year."

$7,205,622 Is Paid.

Dividends totaling $7,205,622 were paid on the preferred stock, which with the operating deficit made an aggregate deficit for the year of $43,724,900. This compared with total 1932 deficit of $90,186,557.

Myron C. Taylor, chairman of the corporation, said in a statement:

"Operations for the fourth quarter, based on production of finished products for sale, were 23 per cent less than in the third quarter, the reduction in tonnage being 457,548 tons. This falling off in shipments explains very largely the lesser earnings reported for the fourth quarter.

Low Production.

"The abnormally low production of steel during the last three years compared with previous years vividly illustrates the recession in business activities requiring the use of steel. This recession has been both in steel for consumption and for construction uses, more largely the latter. In respect of steel for consumption it may be confidently expected that the demand will show an increase from the low point of 1932.

"As to increased requirements for construction uses, the return of demand is likely to be less rapid, but with some continuing improvement. It is therefore expected that the increased output in 1933 will be maintained in 1934 and it is anticipated will be substantially bettered."

Quota Applications To Close on Feb. 4

A notice to importers published in the French Journal Officiel for January 26, 1934, announces that applications for import licenses for the first quarter of 1934 for the importation into France of those industrial products other than chemicals, on which new import quotas have been established, will not be accepted after February 4, 1934, according to a cablegram to the Commerce Department from Commercial Attache H. C. MacLean, Paris.

Applications must be filed by the French importers at the appropriate offices in Paris.

It is advisable that American exporters make no shipments of the products affected unless assured by the French importers that the particular shipments will be covered by the required import license, in order to avoid possible holding up of shipments in customs warehouses for indeterminate periods.

Steel Construction Rises.

New York, Jan. 30 (AP).—The American Institute of Steel Construction reported yesterday that December bookings of structural steel were the best recorded any month last year and were 39 per cent above November.

Curb's Prices Climb Under Heavy Trading

Alcohols and Metals Rise; Sales Total Mounts to 551,000 Shares.

New York, Jan. 30 (AP).—Heavy trading featured curb dealings today although net gains were moderate. Aircraft shares were in demand, coincident with the buying in that group on the big board. Utilities were firm, particularly the preferred issues. Oils and numerous specialties closed fractions to around a point higher.

Alcohols and metals improved in the late trading after lagging earlier. Lake Shore Mines and Canadian Industrial Alcohol "A" failed to recover fractional dips, but most others showed smal! net gains.

Issues finishing a point or so higher included Bunker Hill & Sullivan, Columbia Gas & Electric preferred, Commonwealth Edison, Electric Bond & Share preferred, Ferro Enamel, American Cyanamid B, Newmont, Novadel Agene, Pan-American Airways, Parker Rust Proof, Waco Aircraft, South Pennsylvania Oil, Singer Manufacturing and Safety Car Heating.

Transfers approximated 551,000 shares, compared with 380,000 yesterday.

Wheat Values Advance on Gold Stimulus

Cold Weather Also Aids Price Rise; Oats Up; Corn Loses.

Chicago, Jan. 30 (AP).—For the fourth consecutive day, the wheat market today ended with net gains.

Heavy profit-taking sales near the finish, however, led to a transient setback in wheat, wiping out temporarily an earlier fresh rise of a cent a bushel, which had carried wheat to the highest point since Novmeber 17.

Rallies that ensued at the last were responsive to buoyancy of the stock market and to stimulus from enactment of the Roosevelt gold bill.

Influence of Weather.

Persistent strength of wheat earlier today was influenced largely by continued severe temperatures over East sections of soft wheat territory and by drought and dust storms Southwest.

Wheat closed nervous, at the same as yesterday's finish to three-eighths higher; corn, unchanged to one-quarter lower; oats, unchanged to one-eighth up, and provisions at 7 to 12 cents advance.

Increased selling on advances in wheat prices today came about partly from forecasts that indicated rising temperatures over the entire domestic grain belt. This tended to diminish buying associated with crop scare symptoms. On the other hand, despite misgivings that new Governmental regulations of grain exchanges would be a handicap to mark upturns, a much broader volume of business than has recently formed the rule was in evidence.

Visible Supply Dwindling.

Particular attention was given today to rapid disappearance of the United States wheat visible supply, the rate indicating that without any exports at all the domestic carryover at the end of the season, June 30, would be the smallest in many years.

It was pointed out that the visible supply decrease the last four weeks has been 12,344,000 bushels, a reduction greater than recorded for the corresponding period in any year since 1925 with the sole exception of 1930. During the other years, a large part of the January disappearance was accounted for by heavy exports, whereas this year the entire disappearance has represented domestic absorption.

Corn and oats lagged somewhat on account of larger rural offerings of corn to arrive in Chicago. Something of an offset was wheat strength as well as unfavorable corn crop reports from Argentina. Provisions went higher with hog values.

South Africa's Foreign Trade Is Improving

A notable improvement was registered in South Africa's foreign trade during the past year, according to a report to the Commerce Department from Trade Commissioner E. B. Lawson, Johannesburg.

Official figures, just issued, showed that the total value of imports into the Union in the 11-month period of 1933 ended November 30 amounted to £44,310,044. Imports in the corresponding period of 1932 when South Africa was still on the gold standard totaled £29,829,624.

While these figures indicated an increase in import values of more than 48 per cent, they do not represent so large a net gain in volume of trade inasmuch as prices paid for imports increased in terms of South African currency when the contry suspended the gold standard in December, 1932. However, the Trade Commissioner reported, there is no doubt but that the import trade increased materially in 1933 compared with the preceding year.

Total export trade of the Union for the 11-month period of 1933 was recorded at £66,404,636 and at £63,704,604 for the coresponding period of 1932. In these totals gold is calculated at the standard rate of £424,775. If gold bullion were figured at its increased value in terms of paper pounds, total commodity exportation in the 1933 period would amount, according to estimates, to about £85,185,000.

The increased export and import trade of the Union, the report states, is regarded as a significant indication of the improvement in local economic conditions which has occurred during the past year.

Paraguay to Build Highways.

Ascuncion, Paraguay, Jan. 30 (AP).—The government this week will decree the largest highway construction program ever undertaken in Paraguay. Ten million pesos (approximately $135,000) will be appropriated to connect Asuncion with adjacent villages by asphalt roads. Five thousand men, mostly Bolivian prisoners, will be employed on the project.

Store Sales Increase.

Kansas City, Jan. 30 (AP).—The Federal Reserve Bank reported retail sales of 32 stores in the Tenth District in December were 17.9 per cent above the previous December and 64.9 per cent greater than in November. Lumber sales were 35.2 per cent greater than a year ago, and life insurance written and postal savings showed gains.

Slash in Dollar Is Less Than In Some Cases

Devaluation in Several Other Nations Found Greater; Cuts Listed.

By Claude Jagger.

New York, Jan. 30 (AP).—Devaluation of the dollar to 60 per cent of its old parity—a step which Wall street expects to be taken promptly since Congress has passed the gold bill—will cut the American currency even less severely than several others have been slashed.

Even in the sterling group, sharper depreciation has occurred. The Japanese yen and the Argentine peso have been cut to approximately 40 per cent of their old gold parities, or depreciated about 60 per cent.

A 40 per cent depreciation in the dollar is a little sharper than the current depreciation of sterling, but the Australian pound has been cut nearly 50 per cent, and the New Zealand currency as well.

Cut in Scandinavia.

Some of the Scandinavian currencies, which are regarded as in the sterling group, are off 40 per cent or more. These currencies left the gold standard along with sterling in the autumn or 1931.

The Danish krone has recently been down more than 45 per cent in terms of gold, and the Norwegian krone and Swedish krona have been fluctuating at levels around 60 per cent of former gold parity, or at a depreciation of about 40 per cent.

The pound sterling has depreciated approximately 35 per cent from its old gold parity. It has recently been fluctuating around 80 gold francs, in terms of Paris exchange, in contrast to its old parity of 124.2 francs. The Canadian dollar for a long time held about half way between the American dollar and the pound, but of late has been sticking a little closer to the American currency.

South African Money.

The South African and Indian currencies have been hitched closely to the British pound, and continue to show about the same depreciation.

Whether the pound sterling will finally be pulled down as much as the dollar is now a question which intrigues international banking quarters.

The Dominions, which sell raw materials in world markets, have been more anxious to depreciate than England, which has been reluctant to depreciate so severely as to have disturbing repercussions on the continent of Europe, where she sells much of her manufactured goods.

The question of the ability of the gold bloc to avoid depreciation also becomes increasingly interesting. Foreign exchange experts here suggest that France was evidently prepared to endure a 30 per cent cut in the pound sterling, but a 40 per cent cut would probably begin to pinch.

U. S. Exports Of Rayon Yarn Sets Record

Exports of rayon yarns from the United States during 1933 totaled 1,109,580 pounds, valued at $565,920, compared with 653,258 pounds, valued at $428,713, for 1932, according to statistics compiled by the Textile Division, Department of Commerce.

The year's exports of rayon yarn established a record for all time, being approximately double the amount exported during 1932, the previous record shipments, and five times the exports for 1929, statistics show.

Practically all of this export trade in rayon yarn was with countries of Latin America. Mexico continued to be the chief export market and accounted for 763,689 pounds, or approximately 70 per cent of the total foreign shipments during 1933. Cuba retained second position, exports to that market totaling 203,747 pounds, an increase compared with 1932.

Columbia ranked in third position as an export outlet for American rayon yarn during 1933 with exports to that market totaling 98,877 pounds. Other important markets were Canada, 13,710 pounds; Venezuela, 10,644; Spain, 6,338; Chile, 5,816; Nicaragua, 2,084; and all others, 5,263.

Imports of rayon yarn and other synthetic textile fibers into the United States during 1933 totaled 1,202,746 pounds compared with 164,446 pounds in 1932, an increase of 1,038,299 pounds, according to the statistics.

Imports, it was pointed out, were small in relation to the domestic product of 207,500,000 pounds of rayon yarn and to the imports during 1927 totaling 16,250,000 pounds.

Rayon yarns imported into the United States during 1933 originated largely in Italy. France, Germany, and the Netherlands are shown as other important foreign sources of imports.

Waste imports during the year totaled 2,680,135 pounds, the largest quantity on record since June, 1929, when receipts from foreign sources totaled 4,071,000 pounds.

Imports of staple fiber also reached record proportions during the year and totaled 3,362,977 pounds, it was stated.

Raw Sugar Shipments Drop 34.7 Per Cent

New York, Jan. 30.—Raw sugar shipments from Puerto Rico to the United States from January 1 to January 27 totaled 20,372 short tons—a decrease of 34.7 per cent when compared with shipments of 31,206 tons during a similar period last year.

Refined shipments, however, were higher, totaling 14,706 tons against 8,000 tons last year—a gain of 63.4 per cent. Although the current crop is estimated at 876,000 tons, an increase of about 17 per cent, labor difficulties on the island have delayed production and shipments.

63 Railroads Net Rises to $32,443,000

Signal Company Reports Losses During Year of $24,119.

New York, Jan. 30 (AP).—The first 63 railroads to report for December had net railway operating income of $32,443,000 against $27,784,000 in December, 1932, an increase of 16.8 per cent. The November net of these roads was 12.5 per cent ahead of the corresponding month in 1932.

General Railway Signal Co., reports for the year ended December 31, net loss of $24,119 against net income of $634,665 in 1932. Current assets on December 31 amounted to $5,131,149, including $2,009,861 cash and U. S. Government securities at cost, compared with $5,563,460 and $1,847,550, respectively, at the end of 1932. Current liabilities were $240,848 against $220,862 a year ago."

Missouri-Kansas-Texas Lines report net loss of $1,516,998 for the year 1933 against loss of $632,416 in 1932. December surplus after interest charges amounted to $152,616 compared with $80,374.

Devoe & Reynolds Co., Inc., had net income of $656,336 for the year ended November 30, 1933, equal to $3.78 a share on the combined "A" and "B" common stock. This compared with $21,765 or $1.62 a preferred share in the preceding fiscal year.

Canada Dry Ginger Ale Co. reports December quarter net profit of $156,474, equal to 30 cents a share, against $1,925 in the corresponding period of 1932.

Cincinnati, Jan. 30 (U.P.).—Net operating income of the Cincinnati, New Orleans & Texas Pacific Railway Co., in 1933, increased 93.09 per cent over that of 1932, it was announced today.

The income for the 12 months ended December 31 was reported to be $3,354,220, as compared with $1,737,110 in the previous year.

San Francisco, Jan. 30 (AP).—Pacific Lighting Corporation reports 1933 earnings applicable to dividends amounted to $6,337,834, increasing from $5,793,100 in 1932.

After payment of $1,061,422 on preferred stock, earnings of $5,276,411 remained for common stock, compared with $4,872,367 in the preceding year. The $3 annual dividend on common stock was covered with 28 cents to spare, compared with a 3-cent margin for 1932. Gross revenues of $45,382,363 exceeded 1932 by $624,697.

Auburn, Ind., Jan. 27 (AP).—A consolidated net loss of $2,307,972 is shown by the Auburn Automobile Co. and subsidiaries for the 12 months ended November 30, last, the company reported today This included depreciation amounting to $592,500.

The consolidated balance sheet of the company and its subsidiaries as of November 30, 1930, showed total current assets of $8,548,601, and total current liabilities of $618,443.

Chicago, Jan. 27 (AP).—A net profit of $1,450,000 for 1933, contrasted with a loss of $2,084,000 in 1932, was indicated for Butler Bros. today by Frank S. Cunningham, president, in advance of the final earnings report.

He added in a letter to the stockholders: "1934 starts off well; volume in the first three weeks of January has shown a gain of approximately 30 per cent over the same week of the preceding year."

Baltimore & Ohio Railroad today reported December net operating income of $1,626,523, compared with $1,841,587 in the 1932 month. Gross was $10,041,934, against $9,863,736.

December net operating income figures for other roads included:

	1933	1932

The Ohio Leather Co. has declared an extra dividend of 25 cents a common share, payable February 5, to holdings of record January 25.

U. S. Apples Find Favor In Germany

The outlook for the sale of American apples in Germany appears to be favorable, according to Vice Consul Alan N. Steyne, Hamburg, in a report made public by the Commerce Department.

The sale of American apples in the German market during the last quarter of 1933 was much better than anticipated, the report states. As the quantities scheduled for arrival in January will not be large, good returns can be expected for the boxed and barreled fruit reaching Hamburg during the immediate future.

The favorable reception accorded to American boxed and barreled apples, the report points out, has been mainly caused by the fact that European fruit crops were considerably below the quantities harvested in 1932, and as a result continental stocks in December were markedly less than last year. This situation, in conjunction with a slight improvement in internal economic conditions, has permitted good returns being received by exporters and local sales agents.

Approximately 162,200 boxes, 85,400 barrels and 21,830 baskets and crates of American apples were sold at auction in Hamburg during December, the report shows.

Machine Plants In Germany Hit By Depression

Building Industry Facing Difficult Position; Factories Close.

That the German machine-building industry is facing a number of difficult problems is revealed in a report from Vice Consul James H. Wright, Cologne, made public by the Commerce Department.

This industry, which is made up largely of small and medium-sized enterprises, still shows an unemployment level of more than 40,000, many of whom are highly skilled workmen.

It is pointed out by German machinery interests that unless substantial relief is soon obtained a considerable shrinking in the size, efficiency and prominence of the domestic machine-building industry is imminent. A rather sizable shrinking, as a matter of fact, already has occurred through the closing of many plants which had been erected to meet prosperity demands.

One of the difficulties which the German machine builders' industry has to overcome at the present time is the competition of second-hand machinery.

It is recognized, the report states, that under existing conditions this is inevitable, but manufacturers complain that large industrial enterprises which directly or indirectly execute governmental orders should purchase new instead of second-hand equipment.

German machinery exporters are being urged in some quarters to engage in large-scale advertising. Machinery experts, it is pointed out, should be made available to foreign buyers to spread propaganda as to the desirability of German machinery.

Machinery exports, the report shows, have in the past accounted for approximately one-third of Germany's total export trade.

It is estimated that machinery stocks on hand of German machine builders approximates 55,000 metric tons, valued at 100,000,000 reichsmarks.

Daily Oil Yield Decreased by 84,077 Barrels

Tulsa, Okla., Jan. 30 (AP). — The usual month end pinching back of flush Oklahoma areas was the chief reason for a cut of 84,077 barrels in the daily average crude oil production of the United States last week, the Oil and Gas Journal says. Output fell from 2,363,702 to 2,279,625 barrels.

Permissible output under Federal order is 2,183,000 barrels. Oklahoma's production dropped from 534,740 to 467,360 barrels, a day, while the Government allocation to the Sate is 446,600.

Total Texas production dropped 496 barrels average to 947,012 daily, still far above the allocation of 884,000 barrels, and there was an increase in the east Texas field where production rose from 449,680 to 452,875 barrels daily.

All other major areas showed decreases, California falling 8,100 barrels to 451,000 a day; Kansas from 114,645 to 107,435; the Rocky Mountains from 79,630 to 78,730, and Eastern fields 2,000 to 122,500.

Wall Street Briefs.

Exports of sugar from Cuba in the first four weeks of 1934 totaled 94,094 long tons, reports Lamborn & Co., Inc. This compares with 67,024 tons in the corresponding period of last year, an increase of about 40 per cent.

Harry A. Arthur, president of American International Corporation, told stockholders at their annual meeting today that the liquidating value of the common stock on January 29 was $6.67 compared with $4.08 on December 31. The management, he said, intended to reduce substantially the number of companies in which the corporation was investing.

Lumber orders received at mills in the week ended January 20 were 26 per cent larger than in the previous week, while production and shipment figures were above those of the preceding three weeks, according to reports to the National Lumber Manufacturers Association.

January, on the whole, was an encouraging month for the machinery trade, says American Machinist. Inquiries were "universally stronger and in some districts orders were good." Several machine tool builders report more business in January than in any month of 1933.

B. W. Dyer & Co. estimates sugar consumption in the United States last year at 5,665,254 long tons, a decrease of 36,127 tons from 1932.

The Federal Diary

By Morgan Baker
(Trade-Mark Applied For.)

Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.

THREE little words uttered on Capitol Hill last week have made Government employes almost forget for awhile the vital pay-cut situation.

"Let them walk!"

Senator Kean, of New Jersey, shouted that at the open forum held by Senator King, chairman of the District Committee, on proposals for providing adequate parking facilities for Federal employes.

BAKER.

As one harassed motorist at Internal Revenue said, the Senator goes further than Marie Antoinette's famous "Let them eat cake," and consoles the Government clerk with "It's good exercise."

"It is not a question of the Government employes parking their cars on the streets," Dennis E. McQueary, Veterans' Administration, and president of the new Association for Adequate Parking Facilities, points out. "It is a question of the Government so extending parking on its own grounds as to enable the Government employes to keep their cars off the streets."

The Federal Diary invites all Federal employes to express their views on this problem—or any other—in this column. Names of correspondents will be kept confidential.

The Federal Bridge Club has disbanded, due to the wide interest shown in the Federal Bridge League. The league, which meets every Tuesday night at the Colonial Club, 1515 Sixteenth street northwest, has proved sufficient to care for Uncle Sam's children who are contract enthusiasts.

NAMES of 3,014 persons remained on the Civil Service reemployment list for the week ending January 27, the commission announced yesterday. Thirty-five names were removed in the following order: Probational appointments, 13; reinstated or transferred, 8, and other causes, 14. During the same period 28 were added to the register, of which only 5 were listed in the District.

In addition, 2 persons were reported as given temporary appointment. The total number of eligibles on the reemployment list serving temporarily is 333.

Diary Guest Tickets.

IF your name in this column is followed by (*), call in person on the Federal Diary editor between 4:30 and 6 p. m. You will receive tickets to Loew's Fox (stage, Lew Parker & Co., Alex Hyde and his Musical Darlings, and other acts; screen, Will Rogers and Zasu Pitts in "Mr. Skitch"); or to Loew's Palace (Frederic March, Gary Cooper and Miriam Hopkins in "Design for Living"), or to Loew's Columbia (El Brendel in "Olsen's Big Moment"). Persons whose names appear on holidays call for tickets the following day.

An easy way to get square with mean relatives is to die and leave them a small estate to fight over.

SEVERAL Federal employes enjoyed an evening of bridge at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lester Bayly, at Rutland Courts, recently. Among those present were Walter Lawrence, Supervising Architect's Office, Treasury, and Mrs. Lawrence; Dr. Breese Jones, Chemistry and Soils, Agriculture; Mr. and Mrs. Guy Allen, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Bosley, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Seaquist (*), Miss Louise Evans and Miss Elizabeth Donahoe, of Bureau of Public Roads.

Working hard last night, Mrs. Anna V. Dingler (*), Disbursing Office, Treasury, collected quite a neat sum at a pharmacy on Park Road for the Warm Springs Foundation.

A banquet will be given in Harding Hall, Government Printing Office, February 7 by the United Veterans of American Wars, Unit No. 1. It will be an informal party for members and their ladies. Several prominent persons have been invited, including Public Printer George H. Carter and Mrs. Carter; Representative and Mrs. Wright Patman, of Texas; Representative Walter Lambeth, of North Carolina, and Miss Mary A. Tate, assistant to the Public Printer.

Dancing will follow the banquet. James E. Stough, Monotype Section, will be toastmaster. Arrangements are under direction of Harold A. Mayer.

Preparing for the Washington State Society reception and ball February 10, Miss Daphne Anderson, Agriculture, will preside at a meeting of the society's social committee tomorrow night at her home, the Cecil Apartments, 1026 Fifteenth street northwest.

Postettes.

J. W. Hutchinson, Office of Indian Affairs, Interior, is at home recovering from a hit-and-run accident, complicated by appendicitis.

J. W. Plake, chief of Finance Account Section, Indian Office, returned to work yesterday after a week's illness.

Oscar L. Chapman, Assistant Secretary of Interior, is back from a trip to Chicago.

Mrs. Ethel Forrest, I. C. C., has returned to her desk following an appendicitis operation in December.

Herbert F. McDonell has been transferred from Income Tax to Processing Tax Division, Internal Revenue.

Andrew W. White, formerly of Processing Tax, Internal Revenue, is now with Veterans' Administration.

Miss Ann Powers, Identification Unit, Justice, visited friends in New York and New Haven over the week-end.

Mrs. Elizabeth Werner, Identification Unit, Justice, is confined to her home with a cold.

Mrs. Cecelia Moore, Identification Unit, Justice, spent the week-end with friends in Richmond.

John A. Smith, Assembling Section, GAO, announces a program for the John Dickson Home, 500 Fourteenth street northwest, next Sunday. It includes a concert by the Central Union Mission Glee Club.

Brief Note

It looks as if it's going to be a brilliant summer on the beaches if this swimming suit can be taken as an indication. Brevity is the outstanding note of the model which consists of brassiere and trunks that tie on. June Vlasek of the films wears it.

Vapor lock, a mysterious condition which will cause a gasoline engine to stop for lack of fuel with a tank full of gas, is being thoroughly investigated at the Bureau of Standards. Miss E. W. Walt Mason, Himself

The Orator.

I hear the forceful speaker, with vital truths to tell; to him I drain a breaker of water from the well. I hear him knock the wadding from every fake that stands; I hear the folks applauding the clapping of their hands. I mark his regal bearing, I note his voice of gold, and wish I might be wearing his laurels manifold. I leave the hall admiring this man who has no peers, and, to my bed retiring, I shed some idle tears. And then, the bedclothes under, I mutter low, "Gee whiz, I wish that I could thunder such eloquence as his! I'd give my starboard sandal, I'd give my Sunday tile, if I could only handle the language in such style!" But well I know it's useless to have such dreams as this! my voice is dry and juiceless, and is inclined to his. My voice is thin and squeaky, unfit for rigmaroles; my train of thought is streaky, my grammar full of holes. I'll never hold the people, and bind them with a spell, beneath a roof or steeple, or in an open dell. As orator or thinker I'll never play the game, but as the village tinker I have a local fame. Men say my work is bully, and gladly pay the price; ambitions wild and woolly should therefore cut no ice. Each in his proper station we should do what we can, nor waste our admiration upon the other man.

Preview of "Fashions of 1934" Reveals Blend of Comedy, Music and Spectacle

Unique Screen Play Is Brisk And Beautiful

Revue Scenes Sumptuous; Veteran Quits Post; Theater News.

Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.

The Warner Brothers shrewdly link present and past in their pretentious production of "Fashions of 1934," to be seen on the screen at the Earle Theater beginning Friday, but previewed yesterday noon in the private projection room in the Earle Building by the ladies and gentlemen (sic) of the dramatic desks and a few visiting firemen from the fillum industry.

The Warner fraternity seems to have had vividly in mind the importance of the "racket" in the present-day scheme of things and to have recovered, from a slightly dimmer past, a fairly well-preserved recollection that the "style show" once was a potent lure for feminine patronage at the ticket wicket.

In their reveries, the various Freres Warner no doubt recalled that much of the zip of "Lombardi, Ltd.," on both stage and screen, was due to the foretaste of the feminine modes which it provided. They probably also remembered that in the old days when vaudeville was still vaudeville and a recognized American "institution," it was the annual custom of the smart New York shops—Bonwit Teller, Wanamaker's, Macy's, Stern's, Gimbel's and the rest—to assemble a svelte group of mannequins and put on a "Spring Fashion Revue" that passed as a big-time act instead of the crass advertisement it was.

Racket After Racket.

So they tossed William Powell, Frank McHugh, Bette Davis, Dorothy Burgess, Hugh Herbert, Veree Teasdale and a few hundred others into one racket right after another until they finally emerged as the grandest outfit of fashion pirates that ever plundered the coutourieres of Paris.

With the various rackets to sustain dramatic interest, and the idea of the fashion revue to bolster pictorial effect, the boys went ahead and knocked out a straight comedy-drama that is so sumptuously embellished by feminine pulchritude and ostrich feathers in its revue scenes—the revue was all part of the racket designed to shake M. Baroque, foremost male dressmaker of the French capital, loose from his bankroll—as to become, momentarily, almost another "Footlight Parade."

"Fashions of 1934," so far as the memory of this typewriter is able to recall, is unique among talking pictures contrived to beguile the eye and ear of all classes of picturegoers. It has a little bit of everything, including an expansive display of the coryphees' cutaneous charms and a continuous vein of humor that may not always be as delicate as it might be, but, on the other hand, never becomes seriously objectionable, either.

Miss Teasdale Teases!

One of the most surprising of "Fashions of 1934's" revelations will be the skill with which the blonde and statuesque Veree Teasdale has progressed as a revue star since, say, the not remote days of her participation in Master Eddie Cantor's "Roman Scandals." As the bogus Russian Princess—or was it merely countess?—Alix, who is discovered by Mr. Powell to be the former Mabel McGuire, of Hoboken, Miss Teasdale is one of the major decorations of a production that abounds in extravagant spectacle.

Hugh Herbert also gets back into his stride here, after a slight lapse as the Scotch fly cop in "Easy to Love." As a matter of fact, there are so many deft touches in "Fashions of 1934" that it will be necessary to wait for Saturday morning's detailed review in this space to be apprised of what they all are.

Enough now that "Fashions of 1934" is a picture that the men can enjoy as well as their womenfolk, provided they can steel themselves to the inevitable "buy me one like that!"

"Hips, Hips, Hooray," according to last-minute advices from Manager Hardie Meakin, of RKO-Keiths, will inaugurate its run on Fifteenth street on Wednesday evening of the current week at 8. This is the latest screen comedy, with songs, music and laughter, in which Bert Wheeler, Bob Woolsey and Dorothy Lee, recently seen in person at the Earle, disport themselves. They are supported, furthermore, by Thelma Todd and a long cast of other celebrities whose presence would seem to insure a considerable improvement over their recent African debacle or even "Diplomaniacs." The Wednesday night opening will be a two-for-one affair, at which those already in the house at 8 o'clock will be permitted to remain for the new program beginning at that hour, without additional charge.

Old Friend Departs.

Those who attended the first performance of the San Carlo Grand Opera Company at the National Theater last night missed a figure that has been familiar around the front of the E street house decade upon decade.

Henry Talbert, for years responsible for public comfort and the courteous and expeditious handling of large crowds of amusement-seekers at the National was not at his customary post. Nor will be he again.

This fact will be cause for keen regret on the part of thousands of Washingtonians who have come to know this genial factotum and to rely upon him for the smoothing out of whatever little difficulties might arise to mar their pleasure.

Henry Talbert has resigned from the staff of the playhouse he served so long as a close and trusted associate of Manager Stephen E. Cochran and the late William Harryman Rapley, whose name has been synonymous with "National Theater" since the theater was founded by his father.

Attended Presidents.

It has fallen to Mr. Talbert's lot through many administrations to look personally to the comfort and convenience of Presidential parties; to see to it that easy access and egress to and from the boxes has been possible, that the chairs are properly placed, in sufficient number, &c.

So proficient had Mr. Talbert become in this especial ramification of his manifold former duties that he was impressed into duty to serve in a like capacity in the Presidential stand on the occasion of the inauguration of President Franklin D. Roosevelt last March, and has been on hand to supervise the handling of the White House parties on practically all of their public attendance at theatrical and concert performances since.

Henry Talbert will be sorely missed by a great many of the Capital's habitual theatergoers—including this column, who happens to have known him intimately for many years and will always remember him kindly and gratefully for many extra-official courtesies through the span of the years.

We join his many other friends in best wishes for success in whatever future public service he may elect to undertake.

In future, the role formerly played by Warner Oland in the Charlie Chan stories on the screen will be portrayed by Walter Connelly. This is about as perfect a substitution as could be made, both actors being in the first flight of contemporary character artists. Mr. Connelly has been most recently seen on the local screens in "Paddy," the "Next Best Thing" and "Eight Girls in a Boat," before that with Nils Asther and Barbara Stanwyck in "The Bitter Tea of Gen. Yen."

Old-Fashioned Flappers.

In these days of improved cosmetics, we may well shake our heads with horrified amusement, when we learn that our "Old-Fashioned Girls" of Louisa Alcott's day darkened their lashes with burnt hairpins, took cologne on lumps of sugar, or belladonna to make their eyes bright, and drank arsenic for their complexion.

It is hard to imagine ourselves back in those days. Automobileless, radioless, movieless. Hard times we may have but most Americans manage to cling to these three forms of diversion as necessities.

To today's older generation of theatergoers, it is something of a shock to realize that there are here, in the City of Washington, boys and girls of high school age, whose parents are possessed of moderate means, and yet they have never seen a legitimate stage play. Some of them are truly the movie-made children of the Payne fund studies.

The extraordinary growth of the Children's Theater, of New York, in these ten years of its existence, especially when contrasted with the decline of the regular theater shows that parents and educators everywhere are alive to the need for wholesome dramatic fare. Some of these Washington youngsters have had their introduction to the living theater this season through the Children's Theater's plays. Still others are anticipating theirs with the current attraction, "An Old-Fashioned Girl," which will be presented at the National Theater, this Saturday morning, February 3, at 10:30, the fourth production here this year by this group of professional actors who produce plays only for children.

The increasing number of adults, and of older girls and boys, who buy tickets, has been a surprise and a satisfaction to the Women's International League, sponsor in Washington of the series of plays.
